'Stubborn Battles'

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday) Aug. 6.—German troops which had crossed the lower Don near Tsimlyansk have driven 40 miles to Kotelnikovski, 95 miles southwest of Stalingrad, in a bold envelopment move against the great industrial city on the Volga, the Russian high command said early today.

The northern arm of the great nutcracker pressing with immense weight against the city still was reported stalled in the elbow of the Don in the Kletskaya area, 75 miles to the northwest.

Caucasus Fighting Severe

"Stubborn battles" were fought Wednesday at Kotelnikovski on the immobilized Stalingrad-North Caucasus Railway and the Germans advanced slightly with heavy losses, the midnight communique said.

The Russians reported continued fighting in other sectors of the Stalingrad front and in the north Caucasus but without specific results.

South of Kushchevka, 50 miles south of Rostov, the Germans suffered particularly heavy losses, the Russians said. One Soviet unit alone accounted for six tanks and killed 600 Germans.

In the Kletskaya sector, repeated German attacks were repulsed and 1200 Nazi troops were killed, the communique said.

Cossacks Cut Down Foe

In the area south of Belaya Glina, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, where the Russians are fighting a delaying action against German tanks and motorized infantry, a new Soviet withdrawal was announced.

The Russians retreated again in the Belaya Glina sector in the Caucasus to escape envelopment by German parachute troops and furious assaults by tank masses.

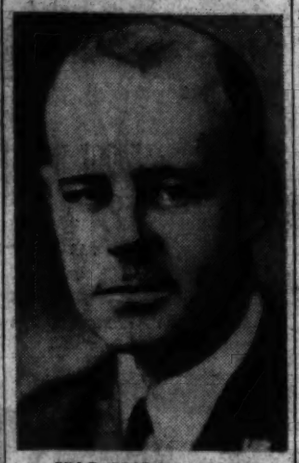
Gen. Bradley Flies to Soviet As Aid Falters



MAJ. GEN. FOLLETT BRADLEY

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 5.—Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley, on a special flying mission from the United States to speed American aid to Russia, said tonight that deliveries of war material to the Soviet Union were becoming increasingly difficult due to German bombings of northern shipping lanes and the offensive in the Caucasus.

He reiterated, however, United States determination to deliver the goods.

Acknowledging that the situation is serious in southern Russia, Bradley said, however, that the "American people accept the Russian reverses as a fortune of war and have hope and even faith that the Russians will be able to hold."

Bradley's trip was the first important visit to Moscow in connection with war aid since the conference last September when a supply agreement was drafted.

The former commander of the First Air Force, United States Eastern Defense Command, arrived last night in his B-24 bomber. He was at the controls himself much of the time en route. He brought with him a letter from President Roosevelt to Premier Stalin.

"I am here to facilitate any possible way to make aid to Russia more effective," he said.

General Bradley is 52 and a native of Nebraska. He was accompanied by six officers and three enlisted men. In Teheran, he was met by Brig. Gen. Philip R. Faymonville, chief of the United States Supply Mission to Russia, who accompanied the group on the last lap of their 10-day trip from the United States.

Cargo Plane Program Gets New Impetus

WPB Urges Doubling Of Present Program; Arnold Says Army Now Using Bombers

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Strong Government indorsement of greatly increased production of war cargo planes, and general agreement with President Roosevelt's insistence that the military chiefs must fix the cargo plane program, were forthcoming here yesterday in these developments:

1. A doubling of the present cargo plane program has been recommended by a War Production Board committee, WPB chairman Donald M. Nelson announced, adding that the chiefs of staff must decide whether this increased output is to be obtained at the cost of cutting down combat plane production.

2. Senator Lee (Democrat) of Oklahoma, disclosing that American planes are grounded in Africa and Australia for lack of spare parts, said the Government should give the green light to Henry J. Kaiser, of Portland, Oreg., to build giant cargo planes in his West Coast shipyards, and for other shipyards, including that of Andrew Jackson Higgins in New Orleans, to build the cargo submarines designed by Simon Lake.

3. Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army's Air Forces, told a committee headed by Senator Lee, that the Army is now using some of its bombers for transport, that cargo plane production is being stepped up, but that the present planned program of combat planes must be carried out.

4. E. A. Locke, jr., assistant to Nelson, said WPB officials are determined that Kaiser's plan for building 5000 cargo airships the size of the Martin Mars "shall get every possible consideration and that it shall get it quickly." Locke, speaking to the Maryland Academy of Sciences in Baltimore, also expressed strong interest in a still larger cargo plane proposed by Kaiser, and said that 500 of these twin-hulled planes, each carrying 100-ton loads, could transport from this country to Britain all the supplies needed to keep an air invasion force of 1000 fighter planes and their crews over Berlin "every day in the year."

Gliders Turned Down

The WPB committee talking in terms of planes available and in sight, painted a dark picture of air transport, and said that even doubling output would leave air cargo capacity far short of what could be used for war. Their report said there is great promise in the use of magnesium for planes.

Conversion Held Failure

WPB Blamed in Lack Of Vital War Materials

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

In a confidential report, the War Production Board has been sharply criticized by one of its own organizations for failure to go far enough in converting civilian industries to a war economy and thus divert to arms production substantial quantities of vital materials in which critical shortages have recently developed.

WPB Acts to Remedy Flaws

The report was uncovered by The Post yesterday as qualified observers frankly expressed concern over a growing possibility that materials shortages may cause the output of munitions to fall short of President Roosevelt's goals and deliveries promised other nations.

Yesterday, more than four weeks after the report was submitted to it, WPB took steps in directions suggested in the report and supported by officials whose views it represents.

Conversion Failure Alleged

The report was made to the board about July 1, but it covers WPB operations up to the middle of June when WPB officials generally believed that a long series of curtailments and orders stopping civilian production in key industries had carried WPB "over the hump" in conversion and had cleared the way for the Nation to devote its great productive capacities to war and "essential" civilian requirements.

The report declares, however, that "conversion is far from actually accomplished." It charges that the approach to conversion was "largely piecemeal and negative." It assigns as one of the reasons for the alleged conversion failure the absence of a "clear, central policy directive."

900,000 Radio Sets Made

While calling attention to the large number of instances in which industries were granted approvals on appeals for extension of shut-down orders, the report stated that this policy was a relatively small factor in the entire picture of materials consumption by civilian factories.

From the effective dates of the shut-down orders in late April to June 19, the report discloses, two-thirds of more than 3000 appeals for extensions were granted.

As a result, the radio industry, now entirely on war work and ex-

Capitol Hill Expects Baruch To Head Survey on Rubber

Bernard M. Baruch made such an outstanding record as chairman of the War Industries Board in the last war that he is to be drafted by President Roosevelt to untangle the snarled rubber situation, Administration leaders on Capitol Hill predicted last night.

Together with James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, and Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Mr. Baruch is expected to make the rubber survey which President Roosevelt originally asked Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone to undertake.

It is understood that the survey also will include supplies of some strategic materials, particularly steel. On the outcome of the survey will depend whether gasoline rationing is to be made Nation-wide and whether tires will have to be confiscated.

President Roosevelt is expected to send to Congress at noon today his veto message on the Gillette Bill to create a separate agency to bring about greater manufacture of rubber out of grain alcohol. The bill, passed by a substantial vote, was considered a direct rebuff to WPB Chairman Donald Nelson and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, in that it removed from their hands the production of all alcohol-base synthetic rubber.

In vetoing it, the President is expected to point out that rubber production, whether from petroleum, grain or rubber plants, must operate under one agency and that responsibility cannot be divided.

He is also expected to announce, either in the message to Congress or otherwise, that the entire rubber survey to be made by Baruch will recommend what processes should be followed and what agency should supervise them.

It is believed in official circles that only someone with Baruch's record and reputation could restore public confidence in a situation regarding which there have been dozens of conflicting statements and regarding which the public is totally at sea as to whether Nation-wide gasoline rationing to save rubber is, or is not, necessary.

Rebuke to Left Winger

Group Ruled by Russia Won't Control Her, First Lady Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 5.—In a rebuke to Eugene Connolly, left wing leader of the American Labor Party, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared today that "I do not wish to be controlled, in this country by an American group that, in turn, is controlled by Russia and Russia's interests."

Forbids Further Use

Mrs. Roosevelt asserted in a letter to Connolly that she was surprised to find that another letter she had written, indorsing a statement she believed to have been made by the party as a whole, had been used as a leaflet in the present primary fight between the right and left wings of the party.

"I do not wish you to use my name or my letter again in any publication whatsoever," she said.

"Sympathy" Admitted

Adding that she had no desire to take part in the primary campaign, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that "I did not think there would be any doubt in the minds of the left wing group that while I indorsed the statement which the entire party, I imagined would be united on, still I was certainly not indorsing primary candidates in opposition to what I consider the regular American Labor Party . . ."

"I am, and always have been, much more in sympathy with the stand of the American Labor Party as represented by what I consider is the real leadership under Mr. Luigi Antonini, State chairman," Mrs. Roosevelt said.

She stated that copies of her declaration on this question had been sent to Antonini and Alex Rose, State secretary of the labor party. Antonini and Rose have accused the left wing of being dominated by Communists.

Connolly Denies Charge

"I have no illusions whatsoever as to the stand which the American Communist Party has taken in American affairs," she said. "I admire Russia and the marvelous fight which Russia is putting up. . . . But I do not wish to be controlled in this country by an American group that, in turn, is controlled by Russia and Russia's interests."

Connolly commented: "Mrs. Roosevelt has been misinformed. We have never authorized nor sanctioned use of her letter for any political purpose whatsoever."

"Her comment on the New York County committee's 'win the war' brochure was released to the press on May 15, with her specific permission, granted in writing, through her secretary," Connolly declared. "It has never been published or mentioned by us on any other occasion. We still believe Mrs. Roosevelt is a most gracious lady."

Millions Involved

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The granting of wage increases by employers without the approval either of the War Labor Board or other Government agencies specially designated by WLB would be outlawed under a draft of a proposed executive order on wage stabilization completed yesterday by the four public members of the board and sent to the White House, it was learned.

Increase Refused

The draft proposed the adoption as national wage policy of the wage stabilization yardstick which was outlined by WLB in its "little steel" case.

At the same time, in announcing a flat rejection of a union demand for a 10 cents an hour general wage increase, the board called attention to the need to make all wage increases subject to review by a Government agency to make the "little steel" stabilization policy work.

The increase was refused the A. F. of L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers which represented 2750 employes of the General Cable Co. of Bayonne and Perth Amboy, N. J. Employer, public and A. F. of L. board members approved the board order, but the C. I. O. members dissented.

Review Necessary

Speaking for the board in a formal opinion accompanying the case, Public Member Wayne L. Morse stated:

"If wage stabilization is to be accomplished, the formula must be applied universally and uniformly to so-called voluntary wage increases.

"In order to accomplish such an end, it would appear necessary to require governmental review and approval of all general wage increases. The inflationary effects of a race between prices and wages cannot be stopped in the absence of a governmental check upon voluntary wage increases as well as those which arise from wage demands in disputed cases."

200,000 Workers Involved

Morse defended the "little steel" formula by asserting that "its application would add less than one billion dollars, or well under 1½ per cent to the present national wage bill of more than 70 billion dollars." He thus took issue with the Office of Price Administration which has estimated that the for-

Failed to Mention Dictator's Sum in 1939 Tax Return

By Dillard Stokes
Copyright, 1942, by The Washington Post.

New York, Aug. 5.—Representative Hamilton Fish this week is trying to explain to the Government why he never paid income taxes on a secret fee of $25,000 he got from Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo, dictator of the Dominican Republic, in 1939.

Fish did not report this fee when he filed his income tax return. He and the general kept their deal to themselves until a short while ago.

Now it is up to the New York Congressman to explain to the Bureau of Internal Revenue how he came to "overlook" a $25,000 item, when his income from all other sources in 1939 was only $22,000.

What Fish did or could have done for General Trujillo that was worth $25,000 is something that nobody but Fish or the general can tell.

General Trujillo is the military dictator of the Dominican Republic and Fish is the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives, which handles all legislation affecting foreign governments.

Fish got the money in the form of a credit, subject to his order, in the National City Bank here. The $25,000 came out of a credit of $300,000 which was established for General Trujillo through the Dominican Legation in Washington.

The credit was set up for Fish about the middle of July, 1939, just a few days after Fish made a fulsome speech in praise of the Dominican dictator and just a few weeks before Fish left on his now celebrated trip to Germany.

A Gesture to Return Fee

Those were the days when Hamilton Fish was the loudest isolationist of them all. On the floor of the House every day or so and over the radio of nights Fish was heard denouncing any strong front against the Axis and excoriating the President of the United States.

Just as he was about to sail for Europe Fish made a gesture toward returning the secret fee to General Trujillo, but it was only a gesture, for the $25,000 remained in the National City Bank in New York, subject to Fish's order.

Fish went to Europe as a delegate to the meeting of the Interparliamentary Union in Oslo. But he paused in Berlin for a chat with von Ribbentrop, the foreign minister of the Nazi government, whose propaganda papers featured Fish as a great statesman, with photographs and extensive quotations.

Suggested 30-Day Truce

The press next reported an interview, in which Fish called for liquidation of the Versailles Treaty clauses concerning German's eastern border. Germany's demands on Poland—said Fish—"were just."

Then, on to Oslo—in von Ribbentrop's private plane.

There, among his other utterances, Fish greeted the approach of the war with a suggestion for a 30-day truce, for "arbitration" of the Danzig question. Fish said he would be happy to take part. For some reason, the proposal fell through.

Fish got back to America in September and plunged into a new isolationist campaign—centered about the National Committee to Keep America Out of War. Fish was chairman. A special Federal Grand Jury in Washington denounced this committee two weeks ago as one of the instrumnts of a gigantic conspiracy to corrupt the loyalty and the morale of the Army and the Navy.

The treasurer of this committee was Fish's secretary, Walter L. Reynolds, and its headquarters were in Fish's office in the New House Office Building.

Oil Company Got $8000

Then it was that Fish started drawing on the $25,000 provided him by General Trujillo. More than $2000 was paid to Fish's Washington bank, to be followed by another $2000 a month or so later.

More than $8000 went to an oil enterprise—the Nepaug Oil Co. of Houston, Tex. Fish had dealings with the president, David D. MacDaniels.

During this period, Fish directed the National City Bank to transfer $12,500 to the account of General Trujillo. Whether he was giving back half of his fee or whether it was a new deal is not apparent.

Fish was not always an admirer of the Dominican dictator. During 1937 there were reports that several thousand Haitians were massacred by General Trujillo's soldiers. On December 21 of that year, Fish took these reports to the floor of the House.

But the View Changed

"This is the most outrageous atrocity that has ever been perpetrated on the American continent," Fish thundered, as he employed the report to point up some carping remarks about President Roosevelt's good neighbor policy. Fish said also, "I should like to see the Government of the United States withdraw our recognition of the Dominican Republic."

And on January 24, 1938, Fish was back on the floor, inserting a maga-

Pelley Guilty Of Sedition, Jury Holds

Indianapolis, Aug. 5 (AP).—William Dudley Pelley, former leader of the Silver Shirts of America, was convicted by a Federal court jury tonight on 11 counts of criminal sedition and conspiracy.

Pelley's two associates, Lawrence A. Brown and Miss Marian Agnes Henderson, who were tried with him, were convicted only on count 12 of the indictment which charged conspiracy.

Judge Robert C. Baltzell immediately set August 12 at 10 a. m. for pronouncement of sentence. Each count carries a maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment and a maximum fine of $10,000.

Floyd G. Christian, one of Pelley's attorneys, said that a motion for a new trial would be filed. If it is denied, he said, the case would be carried to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago.

'Superior Planes' Lose Fights

U. S. Airmen Down 13 'Zeros' Without Loss; B-17 Beats Six

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army last night answered charges that Japanese Zero fighters are superior to American planes by citing three recent air battles in which United States combat craft shot down a total of 13 Zeroes without a single loss.

In one of the aerial victories, a clash not previously reported, a lone Army flying fortress beat off six Jap fighters over Wake Island. The four-engined B-17 bomber, attacked while on a photographic mission, shot down four of the attacking planes.

American Army fighters also scored over the Jap Zeroes during recent attacks on the Chinese air base at Hengyang, an announcement declared. They shot down ten of the Zeroes during the July 30 and 31 raids on the Chinese base, previously reported from Chungking.

Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, in commenting over these air victories won against considerable odds, said yesterday:

"These results speak for themselves and give ample answer to those who maintain that our enemies have better flying equipment than we have."

Airmen have admitted that the Zeros are more maneuverable and can climb faster than American planes, but declare that the greater fire power and protection of our craft more than offset this.

The prior reports on the air clashes over Hengyang had not given details of the Jap fighter vs. United States fighter action.

Yesterday's War Department announcement declared that 27 Jap Zeros attacked the Chinese air base on June 30 and that our fighters

Queen Wilhelmina Cheered Despite Unpublicized Arrival

By Christine Sadler

Queen Wilhelmina, doughty 61-year-old ruler of the staunch Netherlands Empire, in a symbolic exchange of toasts with President Roosevelt last night at the White House, declared the hardships of war are strengthening the will of her people to hold out until "at last victory will be ours."

The motherly monarch, who came to Washington yesterday as the culmination of her month-long visit to this country, kept her chin up and her back straight as she faced a "barrage of cameras" at the southern entrance to the Executive Mansion.

Although details of her arrival were unpublicized, Washingtonians gathered along the streets when they saw the lines of soldiers forming—and cheered as she rode by with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, their automobile followed by others bearing Cabinet members and official dignitaries.

The first reigning queen ever to visit the Capital of the United States, she traveled with only her secretary, a lady-in-waiting and a military aide. She wore a long, black lightweight coat over a sheer black and white print that came almost to her ankles. Her stockings

Indians Would Fight 'Aggressors' If — —

Must Have Home Rule Before Aiding Allies, They Say

By the Associated Press

Bombay, India, Aug. 5.—The working committee of the All-India Congress Party nearing a showdown with the British Empire on the issue of independence, adopted today a resolution serving notice that India would become an ally of the United Nations if granted freedom.

The working committee's 1200-word resolution demanded the "withdrawal of British power so as to enable India to become an ally of the United Nations and fight aggressors."

But, the resolution warned, the Congress Party was prepared to launch a civil disobedience struggle if necessary to gain independence.

Gandhi Would Lead It

The working committee also drew up a resolution to be presented to the full committee meeting here Friday recommending if Britain rejected a demand for Indian independence that full powers to lead a civil disobedience movement be given to Mohandas K. Gandhi.

The draft of the resolution dealing with India's role against aggressor nations in the event of independence said the government "will wholeheartedly and unreservedly declare itself on the side of the United Nations, agreeing to meet the Japanese or any other aggressor with armed resistance."

It was said the new resolution was drafted to comply with "reasonable and constructive" criticisms made after the British disclosed the original draft of a resolution offered by Gandhi. In the original draft, the Indian leader threatened civil disobedience action against the British if demands for independence were refused and stated the first move of an independent government probably would be to negotiate with Japan.

A Plea to Free China

Gandhi has said that if independence came immediately he would ask to be sent to Japan to plead with her to free China or else "count on the stubborn resistance" of millions of Indians.

The resolution finally acted upon several days ago by the working committee left out the reference to Japan at the suggestion of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, chairman of the committee. Adoption by the full committee of the civil disobedience campaign resolution as finally approved by the working committee is considered a certainty.

(There was no hint as to who put forward the new resolution, but a British broadcast heard in New York said Gandhi spoke to the working committee for an hour and a half this morning.)

With the approach of the full committee session many newspapers which normally espouse the Congress cause pleaded for a conference to achieve political unity before embarking on a campaign which might bring dangerous internal strife.

Cripps Appeals to India For Patience Now

London, Aug. 5 (U.P.)—Sir Stafford Cripps, who sought vainly through negotiations in April to avert the crisis now near in India, appealed to the Indian people tonight to await independence patiently and warned that Britain would not bow to Mohandas K. Gandhi's mass struggle.

In a statement which the Times is printing tomorrow, the Lord Privy Seal said that "no one will expect the British government or the Government of India will give way to threats of violence, disorder and chaos."

Confusion Feared

Any attempt to change the government in India at present would bring great confusion, even civil war, he continued.

"We make no threats, but we must assert unequivocally that our duty in India to the great minorities and to the United Nations is to preserve law and order until hostilities cease and we can give, as we have promised, the fullest opportunity for attainment of self-government by the Indian people," Cripps said.

He said it was not yet "too late for the Indian people to decide upon rapid ordered progress." The British people, he assured them, "are as determined upon self-government for India as they are themselves.

"We ask the great masses of India to be patient for a short time longer while the cause of freedom is being fought out."

"Impossible at This Moment"

The hard facts of war, not British desire to delay independence Cripps said, "make a complete change impossible at the moment."

Challenging the reasonableness of the Indian demand for immediate self-government, he asked whether it was "practical in the midst of a hard-fought war in which the United States of America, China and Britain are exerting all their strength to protect the eastern world from domination by Japan."

The change demanded by the All-India Congress Party would only result in chaos, he said, and "the evil-minded could pillage the land, and disorder and crime would run riot."

"Chaos in India at this moment would not affect India only," Cripps said. "It would affect vitally the whole war against the Axis powers."

U. S. Planes Darken Sky Over Britain

By the United Press

A North Atlantic Air Transport Command Base, Aug. 5.—The eastward flow of swift new American planes—giant bombers and other craft that will spearhead the promised offensive against Germany—is approaching floodtide.

The North Atlantic skies are getting darker and darker—with Uncle Sam's flying, fighting answer to Adolf Hitler.

Formations of combat craft, fresh off American production lines, roar into this field at frequent intervals. A few hours later they are off again, winging their way across great expanses of ocean on uneventful flights.

And this is only the beginning," officials remark as the planes zoom down onto the runways.

At the controls of these planes are youthful aviators who, only a few short years ago, were the boys who heaped hero worship upon such pioneer transatlantic fliers as Charles Lindbergh and Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

They are a smiling, happy-go-lucky lot who take this business of flying the Atlantic in stride. They eat, sleep and talk flying—without a thought of the heroism involved in their jobs.

Call Flying Ocean Monotonous

These here-worshippers of yesterday—the heroes of today—now talk about the monotony of flying the ocean.

They have their own way of breaking the monotony. Some fly at great heights, then zoom down and level out at a mere 50 or 100 feet above the water and skim along at high speed. Others try to break icebergs loose with motor vibrations from low-flying planes, but this trick seldom works.

Occasinally, a surprise breaks the monotony. For instance, one bomber crew speeding at low level far at sea recently saw shells exploding "not very close." They discovered that a surfaced German submarine was firing at them. But since they were in transit and unequipped for such combat, they had to ignore the U-boat.

Another bomber crew recently experienced a forced landing in a northern latitude. Before setting the plane down, they jettisoned much of their load to lighten the plane, but saved the emergency ration of whisky. On the ground they put the whisky to emergency use—pouring it over some damp sticks which soon served as a bonfire to keep them warm before they hiked to the nearest habitation.

Used Automatic Pilots

Automatic pilots are utilized to give the crew some rest as they fly hour after hour above the water. A sergeant radio operator said "Its a funny feeling to look into the cockpit when you're way out over the Atlantic and discover that the plane is flying without a man at the controls."

With the heavy traffic now moving there naturally have been some accidents, but the record is excellent.

So smoothly are operational details carried out over the stepping-stone route that planes arriving and departing from here cause no more excitement than a commercial airliner on a scheduled flight back in the United States.

"Sure, it seems commonplace," one officer remarked. "But down in our hearts we still think it's wonderful."

The heavy flow of planes is attributable in part to recent sensational developments in the American Air Transport Command Service (formerly the Ferry Command). These are providing one of the most stimulating chapters in the Allied preparations for a blow at Hitler from the west. Some achievements would have seemed ridiculous if they had been mentioned as serious possibilities little more than five years ago.

Does Variety of Chores

Much credit also goes to the weather section, which keeps special weather planes hopping from base to base reporting flying conditions.

The air transport command does such a variety of chores incidental to the main task of ferrying planes across the Atlantic that one pilot called it a "fresh air taxi service." These planes carry mail to and from American doughboys in outlying posts, bring food and equipment to them and carry scores of high military and government officials who commute between the United States and England.

And they get little requests, too—like this one addressed to a pilot en route to a certain destination.

"Pick up some candy bars while you're there and drop them off for us on the way back. I'm hungry for some chocolate."

Red Reserves Learn Use of Antitank Rifle

POOL OF MAN POWER—Reserve troops of Soviet Russia's army form an oval around an instructor as he teaches them the use of the antitank rifle, a weapon of importance with the heavy use of tanks by the Germans. and swarms of dive-bombers.

The defenders of the Kushchevka area repulsed wave after wave of German reserves but were threatened to be outflanked by the German push down the Stalingrad-North Caucasus railway in the Belaya Glina region 65 miles to the southeast.

Under cover of night, the fearless Cossacks slipped through the German lines at Kushchevka and charged the Nazi infantry. They cut down 3000 with their sabers and Tommy guns and chased the remnants nearly 2 miles, dispatches said.

Enemy parachute troops were dropped in groups of 100 to 150—complete with small tanks, light artillery, mine-throwers, mortars and machine guns—behind the Russian lines on the Caucasus steppes, seeking to disrupt communications on rail crossings and small settlements, striving to hold on until motorized infantry arrived. But for the most part, the Russians managed to exterminate them quickly, front line reports said.

Ironically enough in face of the aparent deterioration of the Russian position, the press sounded one of the most optimistic tones since Marshal Fedor von Bock started his crushing offensive six weeks ago.

"Russian strength in the south is increasing," the government newspaper, Izvestia, said in commenting on growing German pressure. "The southern commanders realize the German offensive must be stopped by all means."

"More firmness and stubbornness and the enemy will be stopped," said Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper.

(The Germans announced the capture of Kropotkin, a railway junction 125 miles southeast of Rostov, and said they had crossed the Upper Kuban River between that point and Armavir. The river was reached on a 60-mile front, the Germans said, placing vanguards within 60 miles of the Maikop oil fields. German troops between the Don and Sal were declared advancing eastward, menacing Stalingrad. Weaker Russian attacks were acknowledged in the Don elbow.)

Foe Hurling in Reserves

Russian troops who dropped back from Salsk, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, took up new lines south of the immobilized Stalingrad-North Caucasus railway.

The Russians said that the enemy tried to send reinforcements across the Sea of Azov but that Red fleet units sank the transports and interrupted the flanking operation. The ships could not have been large because the sea is shallow.

Artillery and machine-gun engagements were reported in the Voronezh sector on the upper Don, 300 miles north of Rostov, where the Russians held recaptured positions on the west bank of the river.

More activity was reported from besieged Leningrad, where the Russians said they captured a strongly fortified German point. The midnight communique reported lively artillery exchanges in the vicinity of Leningrad.

The fighting in the Caucasus, where the Germans were constantly driving nearer the Kaikop oil pool, however, was by far the most critical. The broad Kuban River presented the only natural defense line in the immediate arena whose terrain is favorable for Germany's motorized and mechanized might. Once again there was a complete absence in Russian dispatches of any mention of Red tanks in the Caucasus.

The Germans, in superior numbers, were using waves of 50 to 60 tanks against the Red forces. Dive bombers preceded the land forces, making the waving fields of sunflowers a veritable hell for the Russians.

Effective Russian camouflage, however, was reported holding Soviet losses from bombings to minimum. Dispatches said the morale of the troops was unshaken.

NAZIS CRASH THROUGH RED DEFENSE LINES—After advancing in the Belaya Glina sector (1), and claiming capture of Kropotkin, the Germans drove to Kotelnikovski (2), 95 miles southwest of Stalingrad, in a bold envelopment move against the great industrial city on the Volga. Russians also admitted withdrawals in the Tsimlyansk and Kletskaya sectors (3)

Reds Smash 5th Column Plot to Seize Leningrad

By M. S. Handler
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 5.—A German plot to capture Leningrad through the aid of fifth columnists recruited inside the city by Nazi spies has been smashed with the arrests of gangs of disaffected youths and former Czarist officers and civil servants, the newspaper Pravda said today.

All the traitors face death penalties.

The Nazi spies, including parachutists dropped behind the Russian lines in Red army uniforms, began infiltrating into Leningrad last September, Pravda said. The enemy agents, some of whom were women, were reported to have resorted to various stratagems to reach the besieged city.

P. Kubatkin, a high official of the commissariat of state security, was quoted as telling about the extraordinary case of a "Russian" soldier who was picked up on the battlefield with a head wound. The wounded man, who claimed he had lost contact with his unit, was taken to a Leningrad hospital where he questioned other patients on the military situation and tried to ascertain the disposition of Soviet divisions. After his recovery, he was sent to the front, where he was uncovered as an enemy agent. His alleged head wound had been faked by German surgeons, who performed an operation on him to enable him to cross the Russian lines.

Other agents were said to have posed as refugees from enemy-occupied territory.

Soviet authorities were said to have first suspected the German plot when secret police in Leningrad uncovered in September a counter-revolutionary group headed by a former Imperial officer and a former Czarist magistrate. The group, operating through disgruntled youths whose parents previously had been sentenced for anti-Soviet activities, had organized a "house committee" to obtain secrets of the Communist Party and Communist youths.

Westrick Follows Nazi Old Tricks Against French

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Dr. Gerhardt Alois Westrick, former trade counselor to the German Embassy at Washington, whose activities as Nazi contact man in the United States caused him to leave this country in 1940, is now in France doing virtually the same kind of work among French industrialists, the British radio declared today in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

The radio added that Dr. Westrick had been sent to the United States by the Nazi government to obstruct American preparations for turning over United States industries to full-scale war production.

It pointed out that the Nazis want to destroy French industry as an independent entity and reduce it to a "minor appendage to German industry."

Dr. Westrick, center of much publicity in the United States after the New York Herald Tribune disclosed that he was living at Scarsdale, N. Y., and enteratining prominent Americans, sailed from Wilmington, Calif., for Japan August 20, 1940.

Army Quarrel With Nazi Units Seen by Reds

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 5.—The official news agency Tass, circulated a purported captured secret order of the German High Command today seeking to dispel friction which was said to have developed between the German armed forces and the two uniformed Nazi Party groups—the SS, elite guard, and the SA, brown-shirted national Socialist militia.

The document, captured from the headquarters of the Second German Division on the Volkhov front, was signed by Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, commander of German armed forces, Tass reported.

It gave these quotations from the document:

"According to the reports of party organizations and in particular the Imperial leadership of the SS, a quite incorrect notion prevails in certain army units which finds expression in inscription on cars and even in mocking verses to the effect that men liable for military service who are members of the SS, SA or other party units remain at home while other men of older ages who participated in the World War are again called to the colors.

"Similar absolutely incorrect notions of the participation of the party in the war may lead to a violation of good relations and close cooperation between the party and the armed forces and also put in jeopardy the unity of the people.

"These notions should be eliminated as rapidly as posible, and the severest measures should be taken against their repetition."

Violent Battles at Rzhev

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—Russian attacks against the German-held city of Rzhev, 125 miles northwest of Moscow, are developing into a full scale offensive and violent battles are raging near the town and on a broad front to the north, a Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Stockholm, quoting German reports, said tonight.

War Sidelights

Briton Seizes U-Boat Crew Friend Led

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—A wartime story that sounds stranger than fiction:

Comdr. John S. Dalston of Britain's Fortieth Convoy Escort Group related how his unit captured several Germans from a destroyed U-boat on the high seas.

"When I went to question the prisoners," he said, "I opened my cigarette case and showed them one of the signatures engraved there. It was the name of a German naval officer who was a pre-war friend in China.

"The prisoners were considerably moved. It was the name of their captain, who was killed just the night before."

Buzz Wagner Operated On

Somewhere in Australia, Aug. 5 (INS).—Lieut. Boyd "Buzz" Wagner, one of the United States' top flight flying heroes, won't shoot down any more Japs for awhile.

But it took something more than a Nipponese airman to lay low the Johnstown, Pa., flier. An emergency appendectomy was performed on Wagner "somewhere in Australia." He is reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

'Black Book' on Press

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, Aug. 5 (By Telephone).—For governments of the United Nations that wish to penalize Quisling journalists after the war, the British Ministry of Information is preparing a "black book" of names and records of turncoat newspapermen.

On its completion the records will be made available to representative professional organizations as well as the Allied governments. The American Embassy in London is keeping in touch with the records, which were originated by Capt. F. D. Bone, the ministry's press librarian.

British Arms Doubled

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—Britain's 42 government ordnance factories are producing four and a half times as many guns as a year ago and twice as many as they were originally intended to turn out, Sir Andrew Duncan, Supply Minister, told Commons today.

He said that although 60 per cent of the 300,000 workers now engaged at the plants were women, the output per worker had increased 40 per cent in the past year.

Turks Hold Vichy Consul

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 5 (AP).—A Vichy French vice consul in the southern district of Turkey has been condemned to death for espionage against Turkey, it was disclosed today.

The case now is before an appellate court after being tried by a special tribunal. The vice consul, whose name was not disclosed, was stationed in Antakia (Antioch), in the Hatay District, which borders on Syria and lies close to Cyprus.

RAF Hits Ruhr Despite Snow At High Levels

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 5.—The R. A. F.'s new determination to raid Germany regardless of weather conditions was carried out with an attack on the Ruhr last night through thunderstorms, solid overcast and even snow at the higher altitudes, the Air Ministry announced today.

"It was like flying through a white woolen blanket," said the gunner in a Halifax bomber.

There was no indication of the size of the attacking force, but despite the poor weather only one bomber was lost.

One fighter plane was lost on sweeps against trains and other objectives in occupied territory, and fighters and fighter-bombers returned to the attack this morning in clear weather.

Improved British antiaircraft devices bagged six bombers yesterday out of small enemy forces ranging over southwest England and South Wales.

Two German fighter-bombers dropped explosives and machine-gunned a west country town from roof-top altitude this evening.

The working class residential area suffered the most damage there. Casualties included a number trapped in debris.

British Sub Sinks Italian Supply Ship, Damages Another

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 5.—Heavy bombers of the United States Army Air Forces hit one ship during an attack on an escorted enemy convoy in the Mediterranean yesterday, R. A. F. Middle East News Service said today.

Meantime, the Admiralty announced a British submarine in the Mediterranean had sunk one Italian supply ship and damaged another so severely she had to be beached.

The action described by the R. A. F. News Service was part of increased aerial activity over the North African battle areas and the sea lanes of supply to the Axis forces.

The news service said Tobruk harbor was raided heavily the night of August 3-4, in which a direct bomb hit on one vessel touched off a fire that could be seen for 50 miles. Another ship also was reported set aflame.

The news service did not specify whether United States planes participated in this raid.

Allied Bombers Blast Three Enemy Ships

Cairo, Aug. 5 (AP).—Heavy Allied bombers attacked three large enemy merchant ships in the eastern Mediterranean yesterday, hitting at least one squarely and scoring near misses on the others, a British communique reported today.

Other bombers, ranging westward as far as Bardia in air activity of rising pitch, scored direct hits on Axis lighters and pounded "enemy light shipping" with sea and air escort, the communique said.

Two German Messerschmitts were listed as downed in the aerial operations.

While the R. A. F. told of developing air action, the ground forces reported only patrol skirmishes Monday night and artillery exchanges yesterday on the northern and central sectors of the dormant battle line in the El Alamein region some 70 miles west of Alexandria.

German Plane Strafes Iceland Lighthouse

By the Associated Press

Reykjavik, Iceland, Aug. 5.—The Germans have made their second long-range aerial attack in 48 hours on isolated points in Iceland, the United States Army announced today in a communique declaring a lighthouse manned by Icelanders on tiny Grimsey Island was machine-gunned by bombers.

No casualties or damage resulted from the gunfire directed yesteray morning at the light about eight miles off Holmavik, on the northwest coast.

A Focke-Wulf plane bombed and machine-gunned a military installation on the southeast coast of Iceland Sunday morning, the Army said. No casualties resulted but small damage was done.

The Army added that two hostile planes were reported over Iceland early today but disappeared without attempting an attack.

The plane attacking the lighthouse apparently was the same which passed over western Iceland early yesterday and set off a 45-minute air-raid alarm in Reykjavik. Fighter planes went up but did not close with the raider.

2 Boys Await Jury Action on Gas Theft

Charged with siphoning 5 gallons of gasoline from an automobile in the 600 block of Atlantic Street early Tuesday morning, two boys were held under $1000 bond each in Municipal Court yesterday to await action of the grand jury.

Policeman P. W. Legg of the Eleventh Precinct told Judge John P. McMahon that he found the youths pouring gasoline into their automobile from a 5-gallon can.

Nearby, the officer testified, were a length of rubber hose and a gas tank cap, and parked in front of the boys' car was another machine with its tank cover missing. Mrs. Mary Myers, owner of the second automobile, was quoted as saying there were 6 gallons of gas in her tank when she parked the car the night before in front of her home, 640 Atlantic Street Southeast. The next morning it was almost empty, police said.

The boys denied the charge when they were arrested.

Knight, Disbarred Lawyer, Is Jailed

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Richard Allen Knight, disbarred attorney who once stood on his head at the Metropolitan Opera House, was sentenced to three months in the workhouse today for sending annoying letters to attorneys and judges.

The 47-year-old former lawyer had pleaded guilty. He was disbarred last May for assailing courts and officials concerned with the handling of his late father-in-law's estate.

Britain Gives Third-Class Burial to Infamous Munich Pact

By Frederick Kuh

London Bureau of the Chicago Sun

London, Aug. 5.—Britain today gave a third class burial to the Munich agreement by which Czecho-Slovakia was sold down the river to Hitler in 1938.

Arising in Parliament, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, always an opponent of the Munich policy, figuratively placed a lily on the corpse. Eden declared that, "since Germany has deliberately destroyed the arrangement concerning Czecho-Slovakia reached in 1938, His Majesty's Gvernment regard themselves as free from any enlargements in this respect, and in the final settlement of the Czecho-Slovak frontiers to be reached at the end of the war. His Majesty's Government will not be influenced by any changes effected in and since 1938."

The House greeted the announcement with cries of, "hear! hear!"

Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of the exiled Czecho-Slovak government, was seated in the diplomatic gallery. Broadcasting in Czech to Czecho-Slovakia tonight, Masaryk told his countrymen.

"I can reveal to you that I was in the British Parliament today for the first time since the day September 28, 1938, when we were betrayed by Munich."

In his concluding remarks Eden paid Britain's tribute to the "courageous and tenacious stand which the Czecho-Slovak people are making against their ruthless German oppressors. Acts such as the destruction of Lidice have disturbed the conscience of the civilized world and will not be forgotten when the time comes to settle accounts with their perpetrators."

An exchange of official notes between Eden and Masaryk was published by the British government this afternoon. The Soviet government has also made clear its attitude on Czecho-Slovakia. When Commissar for Foreign Affairs Molotov visited London about two months ago he gave the Czecho-Slovak President, Edouard Benes, formal oral assurance that Russia favors the restitution of Czecho-Slovakia's pre-Munich frontiers.

Wilhelmina Gets Royal Welcome Here

were of black lisle and her white wedge-style shoes had very low heels. Sitting level on her head was a medium large white straw hat with a cluster of white flowers at the crown.

The Dutch and American anthems were played for her arrival by a composite band from the various United States armed forces, drawn up on the White House lawn alongside full military companies of marines, soldiers and sailors.

At the state dinner in her honor last night the President, who prides himself on his Dutch ancestry and has publicly praised the "indomitable will" of Queen Wilhelmina's people, called attention to the part the Dutch played in the colonization of this country and the Queen responded.

Text of President's Toast

The following is the President's toast:

I think that all of us at this table tonight realize the symbolism of the visit of Her Majesty to this country of ours. We know the great part played by the Dutch people in the exploration and colonization that began in the earliest days of American history.

And we remember that very soon after we engaged in war to gain our independence, it was a Dutch officer on a Dutch island in the West Indies who fired one of the first salutes to the flag of the United States carried on an American warship under the command of Capt. Isaiah Robinson.

The friendship between our great nations has never ceased. It has been the friendship of peoples who lived for the same kind of human rights and the same kind of national independence.

May I add a personal note? The people of this great democracy everywhere hold the head of the Netherlands' nation in respect not alone for her great leadership and high achievements, but they have in addition a deep and affectionate regard for her personality as the mother of her people.

My wife and I will always remember the privilege we have had, and are having, in a personal friendship with her and her daughter and grandchildren. That friendship will always endure.

All of us here tonight join in a toast to the Queen.

Queen "Touched" by Welcome

Responding, the Queen said:

I am greatly touched by the friendly welcome you and Mrs. Roosevelt have extended to me at the White House.

This visit to this Capital City is to me the culminating point of my stay in the United States.

Great thoughts have been thought here, and great decisions taken, and the portraits of your predecessors which adorn these walls are a most expressive epitome of America's stirring history.

I know that, when you make me feel a welcome guest, your thoughts are, like mine, with my country, where at this time, in East and West, oppression breeds resistance, and cruelty increases determination to hold out.

These hard times will pass, and when at last victory will be ours, my compatriots like myself will know that this will be largely thanks to American spiritual and material forces alongside those of the other United Nations.

I therefore raise my glass to drink the toast of your health, Mr. President, as the head of this great country, and of the success of its armed forces.

Embassy Dinner Tonight

This morning the Queen, who has reigned over the Netherlands since she was 10 years old—giving her the longest rule of any monarch now alive—faces a full schedule.

She will hold a press conference for members of Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference Association, answering eight questions selected from lists submitted in advance. At noon she will address a joint session of the House of Congress and then go to the Washington Navy Yard to become the first reigning monarch in the year-long parade of crowned heads visiting Washington to christen a warship.

Tonight she will be feted with a dinner at the Netherlands Embassy, but will return from there to the White House—as she is spending her entire visit here with the Roosevelts.

Guests at the White House dinner last night were Jonkeer George van Tetz van Goudrian, her secretary; Maj. Gen. L. L. Van Oyen, her aide de camp; Baroness Ethel von Boetzelaer, her lady in waiting; Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; Dr. Eelco van Kleffens, Netherlands Minister of Foreign Affairs; the Netherlands Ambassador and Mrs. Alexander Loudon; the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull; Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally; Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley; Representative Sol Bloom and his daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff for the United States Commander in Chief; Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Mrs. King; George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, State Department; James C. Dunn, adviser on European affairs, State Department, and Mrs. Dunn; Ray Atherton, acting chief of the European division, State Department; Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Kindler; Miss Malvin C. Thompson; Miss Grace G. Tully; Maj. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, United States Army aide to Her Majesty, and Mrs. Benedict; Rear Admiral Monroe Kelly, United States Navy aide to Her Majesty, and Capt. and Mrs. John L. McCrea.

Guests invited to the reception held for the Queen on the White House lawn upon her arrival were: Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Stimson, the Attorney General and Mrs. Biddle, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Walker, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Knox, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Ickes, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wickard, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jones, Secretary of Labor Perkins, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Welles and Associate Justice James Francis Byrnes and Mrs. Byrnes.

Most of these guests also were present to greet Queen Wilhelmina when she arrived at Union Station. The Presidential lounge at the station, now used by the U. S. O., was cleared of soldiers and U. S. O. workers to accommodate the royal welcoming group.

Immediately after the reception for these American officials a diplomatic circle was formed in the Blue Room of the White House and the Queen was greeted by the heads of Diplomatic missions in Washington.

Although her schedule here will take her to places that will "necessitate her doing a lot of sightseeing," all pomp and circumstance have been cleared from her visit and few of her activities will be announced in advance. She will be here for the remainder of the week, and will return to Lee, Mass., where she is spending the summer with her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and her grandchildren Princess Beatrix, 4, and Irene, 2. She braved a flight across the ocean to visit her family, who have been living in Canada in exile for two years while she has been head of her exile government in London.

$25 Fine Levied For Street Fire

A $25 fine was imposed in Municipal Court yesterday on the Highway Engineering & Construction Co., Seventh and T Streets Northeast, for violation of a District fuel-burning law in connection with an accident July 15, in which a 4-year-old boy was badly burned on both feet.

Policeman James Roche of the Eighth Precinct brought the charge when attention was drawn to a pile of smoldering rubbish through the injuries suffered by Jackie Markham of 5101 Forty-fourth Street Northwest. The boy had jumped onto the mound of embers covered with sand. The accident occurred at the scene of a street paving job on Harrison Street, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets Northwest.

WLB Requests Power to Veto Voluntary Increases in Pay

mula would add over three billion dollars to the national wage bill.

Meanwhile, it became apparent that prevailing uncertainty over national wage policy had created a stalemate in many collective bargaining negotiations including 1800 cases before the Conciliation Service of the Departmen tof Labor.

Two of the most significant cases involve a total of 200,000 workers employed by Westinghouse and General Electric. Both companies had tentatively agreed to grant the C. I. O. United Electrical Workers a wage increase of 5½ cents an hour in conferences before the Conciliation Service, it was understood, but contracts incorporating the increase have not been signed because the companies learned that present OPA policy prevented the price control agency from recognizing the increase unless it was ordered by WLB. Both companies are now waiting for clarification of national policy before going ahead with its collective bargaining negotiations, but considerable tension has developed meanwhile in their plants.

Yesterday an Electrical Workers' spokesman in Pittsburgh denounced OPA "interference" with the Westinghouse negotiations and stated that he feared restlessness in the plants might develop into a strike.

Rosenman Studies Order

The board's proposed executive order was sent to Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of New York, who has been collecting and boiling down data on wage stabilization for President Roosevelt. It carried with it the support of other Government agencies dealing with labor, including the labor production division of the War Production Board and the War Man Power Commissin. It is expected to be vigorously opposed by Price Administrator Henderson, who has proposed the creation of a wage czar outside WLB to have overall authority over wages.

Under the draft, Government agencies would be forbidden from recognizing wage increases not approved by WLB or a designated Government agency, thus preventing employers who grant unrecognized wage increases from securing appropriate adjustments in contracts with Government procurement agencies and in price ceilings. WLB officials believe this would have the effect of outlawing virtually all voluntary increases.

However, the board's draft proposed to break the present deadlock in bargaining by ordering all Government agencies including OPA to recognize wage increases made in accordance with the WLB formula and approved by a Government agency. The board would be permitted to delegate its authority to approve wage increases made in accordance with the formula to such agencies as the Conciliation Service and the labor division of the War Production Board.

This section was included to relieve the board of a portion of the tremendous burden of work involved in reviewing all wage adjustments. Even with it, however, board officials assumed that the administrative staff of the board would be greatly increased to permit it to handle many more cases if the draft receives a White House "go ahead."

Another refinement of the order would give the board authority to make wage adjustments needed to aid the Man Power Commission in carrying out its job of mobilizing the country's man power.

Meanwhile, the WLB began hearings on the request of 60,000 textile workers in northern and southern mills for an increase of 10 cents an hour in both the North and South and an additional increase of 10 cents in the South to eliminate the Southern wage differential. Three panels which conducted preliminary hearings on the dispute asked the board to grant an increase of 7½ cents an hour on the ground that textile wages were substandard.

The question of the Southern differential which has important bearing on the industrial economy of the South was referred to the board without recommendation by the panels.

Union representatives asked the board to order the full 10 cents an hour increase instead of the amount recommended by the panels. Company representatives recognized the need for an increase, but contended that 7½ cents was too great.

Material Lack Laid to WPB; Conversion Failure Charged

pected to sell twice as much to the military as it ever did to civilians, was permitted to make nearly 900,000 civilian radios after the cut-off date.

Similarly, the domestic laundry industry, another of the great consumers of vital metals in peacetime, was allowed to make more than 43,000 units, the vacuum cleaner industry more than 100,000 vacuum cleaners and the sewing machine industry more than 38,000 units.

But, say officials in the WPB section responsible for the report, two other practices for which WPB and the armed services are held jointly responsible resulted in consumption of far more steel, aluminum, copper and brass than was chewed up in making more radios, washing machines, etc.

One of these was the insistence of the services, to which WPB deferred, that they should be permitted to continue procurement of civilian durable goods manufactured from critical materials.

Procurement Policies Assailed

Another materials-consuming factor, say officials, developed as a corollary of Army and Navy procurement policies. The textile industry was cited as an example, but not as an isolated case.

Army and Navy officers, assigned to procure large quantities of, say, shirts, entered into agreements with manufacturers which were conditioned on Army and Navy ability to obtain for the manufacturers priorities for expansion of their facilities. In some instances, expansion of facilities for making "soft" goods encouraged manufacturers of factory equipment to seek, and obtain, priorities for enlarging their own plants to meet additional demands of their customers. The result was a "snowballing" of material consumption.

Expansion and the resulting diversion of war metals might have been avoided, it was contended, if industries accepting war orders had been told that their civilian business would have to be curtailed to the extent that was necessary to produce goods for the services.

Armed Services' Demands Assailed

WPB officials who support the stand taken in the report were especially critical of the armed services' insistence on continued deliveries of metal furniture and typewriters after production for civilians virtually ceased.

The Army was said to have maintained that it couldn't use wood furniture under certain circumstances. Wood, it was explained, was liable to splinter if used in buildings subject to bombardment, and wouldn't stand up in tropical climates.

The Army also came in for criticism for demanding new construction machinery, obtained with Army and WPB priorities, instead of requisitioning idle equipment.

WPB Takes Action

This week WPB moved in three directions suggested by the report and its backers. Two of the moves were made yesterday, another Tuesday. They were:

H. O. Penn, chief of the used construction machinery section of WPB's construction machinery branch, announced a nation-wide survey of used construction machinery to make it available for war production.

WPB instructed manufacturers of metal office furniture to work on no order—old or new, military or civilian—unless specifically authorized by WPB.

WPB's director general for operations Amory Houghton, announce that typewriter manufacture will be stopped completely on October 31, except for a relatively small number to be made for Government agencies by the Woodstock Typewriter Co.

Meanwhile, reliable WPB sources disclosed that plans are under way to take more "fat" out of the civilian economy. In the process, WPB is expected to cut into consumption of needed metals for repair and maintenance of civilian durable goods.

Reds Say Oil Output Topped July Quotas

Moscow, Aug. 5 (AP).—The oil industries of the Urals, the Volga and Middle Asia are being developed constantly and exceeded their quotas in July, but the Baku fields in trans-Caucasia are still first in the nation, Pravda reported today.

The oil refining industry has substantially increased its output of aviation gasoline, it was said.

Cargo Plane Program Given New Impetus as WPB Urges Doubling Program

and that there is "satisfactory" development toward using other available materials such as wood and steel. The report turned thumbs down on the use of gliders as an answer to the long-range cargo problem, declaring them to be a "special expedient for use in special cases."

Navy tests on the Martin Mars indicate it will be "very successful," the committee said, adding that the Navy has adopted some Martin patrol bombers for cargo carriers, and will receive a number of Sikorsky four-motored flying boats for flying freighters this year and next.

Other principal cargo types now under construction include the Douglas C-47, Curtiss C-46, Douglas C-54, and Consolidated B-24 converted bomber, the report said. Some hundreds of the cargo planes have already been delivered to the Army and Navy, and requisitioned commercial air liners are being used by the armed services, the committee said.

21% of U. S. Production

General Arnold told the Lee Committee that cargo plane production during the last half of this year will total 21 per cent of the production of all multimotored planes, and 30 per cent of the planes with ranges comparable to the long-distance cargo planes. In the second half of next year, these percentages will be up to 24 per cent and 32 per cent, he said.

General Arnold volunteered no information about the carrying capacity of these planes, but he did say that the Army has scheduled loads up to two and a half million pounds a week on contract with commercial air lines, as the latter receive necessary equipment. The recent schedule for this service, he said, has been 170,000 pounds a week.

A stratoliner-type plane in this service, General Arnold disclosed, recently took off from Bolling Field, Washington, with full load, flew to London, unloaded and took on another full load, and returned to Bolling Field, all in 48 hours.

Bomber Conversion Plan

Nelson said the cargo planes committee had recommended that doubling the output of cargo planes be achieved both through an increase in present procurement of cargo planes, and through conversion of certain bombers to cargo types.

The committee also recommended, Nelson said, that further impetus be given to the development for longer-range land and sea planes, and that facilities for manufacturing and transporting gasoline be increased to match the greatly expanded movement of air cargo.

Nelson renewed assurance of his interest in the Kaiser program, declaring that "the War Production Board will continue to study the situation to see whether it is going to be possible to expand our production of cargo planes through new facilities or by using other industries such as shipbuilders."

Going at Full Speed

The committee recommendations, said Nelson, were to be considered in the light of the existing plane production program, and the demands it makes on the country's resources and manufacturing capacity.

Nelson said that under the President's airplane program for production of 185,000 planes this year and next, the "proportions as to trainers, fighters, bombers and transport planes were of course balanced according to the recommendations of the Chiefs of Staff and the chiefs of the Army and Navy Air Corps."

"The manufacturing facilities necessary to execute such a program—engine plants, plants to produce Government-furnished equipment, fabricating plants, air-frame plants, and so on—are being greatly expanded," Nelson said. "The country's airplane manufacturing capacity is today working at full speed in order to meet the President's goal.

"If we now undertake to build a substantially larger number of cargo planes than is already provided for in our schedule, we must, of course, cut down the number of some other kind of airplane in our program. That is a decision for the chief of staffs to make, since it is essentially a matter of high military strategy."

While admitting that under the present program, a substantial cargo carrying fleet will have been built up by the end of next year, the report said that even doubling this program would provide only a fraction of the carrying capacity that could be used for air-borne import and export of war supplies.

Probably as high as 50 per cent of all military tonnage which the Army and Navy must ship overseas during the next year would be suitable for transport by planes if planes were available, the committee found. In addition 20 per cent of nonmilitary but vital exports, including special machine tools, electrical equipment, surgical and medical supplies, concentrated foodstuffs and repair parts for machinery, could be carried by planes.

On the import side, the committee said that 37 highly strategic commodities, small in total quantity but urgently needed, which must be brought in from all parts of the United Nations, could be carried in full.

Doubled Program Essential

This assumption, said the committee, "does not allow for the use of a substantial portion of these planes in direct military activities—which means that actually the amount that could be carried with the present production would be very much smaller."

It is for this reason that this report repeatedly points out the necessity for at least doubling the present production.

Senator Lee, after hearing secret testimony from General Arnold, Brig. Gen. H. L. George, head of the Army transport command, and Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, declared they all agreed that the Kaiser proposal would be very welcome to the extent that it would not take materials from combat planes.

General Arnold, in a public statement to the committee, said that the Army Air Forces would welcome increased cargo plane production, but believes that it should be obtained without interference with the present program.

Calling the present program an "all out effort" on the part of industry, General Arnold said, "We believe it's possible to get more facilities, but they are not in sight at the moment."

Kaiser Program Boosted

What the Army is seeking for transport, said Arnold, is planes made of a minimum of critical materials, built simply and with half the man-hours of labor now necessary, and designed more for reliability than speed.

As for cargo planes for carrying paratroops, air-borne infantry, and supplies and towing gliders in the combat zone, General Arnold said "we just have to have them in the numbers that our military requirements dictate."

As for the Kaiser program, Arnold said, "we're for any program that will give us more cargo planes without interfering with the planned program."

"Our need for transports is right now, and of course, we will need them two years from now," he said.

The Lee committee also heard G. M. Bellanca, pioneer aircraft designer and producer, urge building of 10,000 to 20,000 cargo planes. They would be powered with three engines, and able to carry either a light tank, two to four combat planes, or 100 fully equipped soldiers, distances of 3000 to 4000 miles. He offered to resign from his company to build the planes.

U. S. Fliers Down 13 'Zero' Planes

shot down four of them without losing a plane or pilot.

The next day 35 Zeros again came over Hengyang. Fifteen United States pursuit planes met them and destroyed six Zeros certainly, again without loss of a plane or pilot. Three more of the Jap fighters are believed to have been lost.

The Army announcement said that 13 of the United States pursuit craft which licked the famed Jap Zeros on July 31 were Curtiss P-40s. The make and number of American fighters engaging the Japs on July 30 were not indicated in the report to the War Department from China, it was said.

Four of the enemy fighting planes shot down by the Army bomber over Wake Island were Zeros, it was said. The other is believed to have been a German Heinkel 112.

The War Department's announcement termed the Wake Island action as a "brilliant showing" by the American flying fortress.

Ship Sinkings Off U. S. Coast Show Decline

Navy Reports Three Md., Va. Men Missing

The Navy's ninth casualty list, issued yesterday, listed two men from nearby Virginia and one from nearby Maryland as missing after activities from July 11 to July 25.

Dead, wounded and missing in this list numbered 272. A total of 12,342 Navy casualties has been reported since the outset of the war. "The preponderant share of the casualties in this list resulted from direct action with the enemy or activities directly connected with the wartime operations and covers casualties with the Marine Corps, Navy and Coast Guard," the release said. No Coast Guard members were included, however, in this list.

The Virginians are Arthur I. Diaz of 622 Patrick Street, Alexandria, chief pharmacist's mate, and Clarence Lee Slaughter, jr., of Mervifield, machinist's mate, second class. Also missing is Charles H. Harris of 607 Forty-ninth Avenue, Capitol Heights, Md., pharmacist's mate, third class.

Diaz, 35, is a native of Ridgefield Park, N. J., and has been in the Navy for 18 years. He was stationed at one time in Washington. His wife, Mrs. Margaret W. Diaz, works at the Naval Torpedo Station. His mother, Mrs. Eliza J. Diaz, his brothers, Frank, Russell, Paul and Donald, and a sister, Mrs. Virginia Strickland, all live in Ridgefield Park.

Harris is a native of Capitol Heights and joined the Navy in 1939 after obtaining his release from the National Guard, in which he served for a year. He received his training at the Naval Hospital in Norfolk and was detailed to duty with the Naval Hospital in Washington until June, 1941. At that time his request for foreign service was granted and he was sent to the Canaco Naval Hospital in the Philippines.

His father, Charles E. Harris, is employed in the Postoffice Department. Harris' uncle, Sergt. Howell H. Harris, jr., also of Capitol Heights, was killed on Bataan January 27, it was reported.

Slaughter enlisted in the Navy May 5, 1938. His parents, who have not seen him in three years, last heard from him from Canaco Hospital December 5, 1941, where he was reported recovering from an injured hand. He was first reported a Japanese prisoner, his family said.

Listed as dead from Maryland was William Dashiell Hopkins, signalman, third class, U. S. Naval Reserve, son of Mr. Albert R. Hopkins, sr., of Tyaskin, Md. Listed as missing from Maryland was Vincent P. Timpano, seaman, second class, U. S. Navy, son of Michael Timpano, 26 North Streeper Street, Baltimore.

Also of Virginia listed as wounded Navy personnel are Thomas H. Padgett, torpedoman, first class, son of Rubin E. Padgett of Fries, Va., and William L. Rudolph, seaman second class, son of Mrs. Daisy Rudolph of Chester, Va. Two more Virginia men were reported missing. They are Andrew L. Overton, seaman second class, son of Mrs. Nellie O. Daughty, East Portlock, Va., and Victor F. Perciful, seaman second class, son of R. F. Perciful, Kilmarnock, Va.

MacLeish Flies Back From Britain

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Archibald MacLeish, assistant director of the Office of War Information and Librarian of Congess, said today on his arrival aboad a transatlantic plane that the English people were discussing a second front with enthusiasm.

"There is considerable talk about it and it is a very exciting issue," he said.

MacLeish spent two weeks in England setting up a London office for the Office of War Information. He said that it had three divisions concerned with propaganda, matters concerning United States Army and Navy relations and information on American activities for the British.

WPB Limits U. S. Imports To 500 Items

By Nicholas P. Gregory
New York Herald-Tribune Staff Writer

Imports into the United States were limited last night by the War Production Board to about 500 items on an "emergency shipping priorities list."

The war shipping administration was given authority to assign shipping space to the 500 items listed by WPB as essential to the Nation's wartime economy. Only exceptions to the emergency imports list were lower-rated cargoes from the Caribbean area, the British Isles, Canada, Newfoundland and territories and insular possessions of the United States, provided space is available after all listed items had been loaded.

Whisky, Tweeds Affected

If space is available the United States will continue to import Scotch whisky and tweeds from Britain, rum and bananas from the Caribbean and pulp and fish from Canada and Newfoundland. Among the products which have been given priority shipping rating are oil, sugar, coffee, wool, hides and skins, mahogany logs, balsa wood, rubber, spices, drugs, and others.

The list is subject to addition and revision in the future as needs change. On Tuesday the Board of Economic Warfare gave United Nations and Latin-American shipments priority to the least congested ports and advised American exporters to make arrangements with their buyers to cover additional costs of overland hauls across the continent wherever the Government deems it necessary to reshuffle goods to other areas.

United Nations Ships Concerned

The WPB order not only affected United States ships, but all ships belonging to belligerent United Nations countries. Neutral ships which are not under complete control of WSA may carry only such cargoes as conform to the regulations of general imports order M-63 if the cargo is to be legally imported into the United States.

For more than a year priorities on imports have been in effect, but after essential cargo has been moved, nonpriority cargo could be loaded. Now that the WSA has decided, in order to save shipping time, to load only priority cargo, the publication of the list is essential, WPB said.

Heavy Ack-Ack Fire Protects Alexandria

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 5.—One of the hardest-hitting and most effective antiaircraft barrages in the world is making Nazi bombers keep their distance over this key city to the Valley of the Nile.

The concentrated wall of fierce flame that spurts skyward from strategically-placed guns guarantees a hot reception for the enemy raiders who lately have been over Alexandria almost every night.

Alexandria's defenses generally were regarded as comparable to those of Malta and Moscow.

While the gunners here have not yet had a chance to knock down raiders in large numbers, they nevertheless make their shells count.

All shore batteries, going into action simultaneously, split the darkness like a series of giant Fourth of July sparklers, their light spreading fanwise into the sky and merging into a huge blob of white as projectiles explode in the area of the planes.

British night fighters also have been busy, and in the last few nights it has not been uncommon to see Italian or German bombers burst into flame and plummet into the Mediterranean.

The enemy thus far has failed to create widespread damage in this principal base of the British East Mediterranean fleet. There has been no indiscriminate bombing of the city itself.

Alexandrians, aware that the decisive battle between the British and Axis armies facing each other near El Alamein, 65 miles westward, remains to be fought, are taking every precaution to meet any big scale air raids which might be the prelude or follow-up of any new Nazi push.

The city's first aid and rescue squads are fully equipped and organized. Hundreds of private and public shelters have been built in recent weeks.

Although the war is at the city's doorstep and the rumble of artillery fire is audible, life goes on normally.

Night clubs, bars, restaurants, theaters and hotels are doing a rushing business despite the rigidly enforced blackout.

Police with rifles patrol the streets, alert for trouble within the city itself and keeping sharp eyes on the sky for any Axis parachutists.

Yanks Bomb Shipping at Yangtze Port

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Aug. 5.—American bombers in an attack on Japanese installations in the vicinity of Hankow, inland center on the Yangtze River, hit wharves, warehouses and shipping yesterday, a communique from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters said today.

"The results were very satisfactory," the war bulletin added.

Japanese warplanes attacked Kweilin, 250 miles northwest of Canton, this morning and early reports indicated three were shot down, the communique said.

Two were bagged by American fighters, it said, and one by ground fire.

The Chinese High Command said three Japanese launches landing reinforcements along the Kwangsin River in eastern Kiangsi Province had been sunk by Chinese gunfire, causing heavy casualties.

The Chinese said the reinforcements were intended to support Japanese troops under attack by Chinese forces between Yukan and Yukiang, southeast of Poyang Lake.

"The Chinese remained active on the river, where they disrupted enemy communications," a communique reported.

Appreciative Chinese have raised $6500 to buy gifts for airmen of the United States air force in China who, like their predecessors in the American volunteer group, have become popular heroes.

Several organizations announced they would pay a "comfort" visit to the Americans at the front August 14, China's air force day, as a tribute to "their brilliant success against the Japanese."

Stage Folk Plan Canteen For Servicemen

Plans for organizing Washington's own Stage Door Canteen for the entertainment of service men will be discussed at the National Theater tonight, with Helen Hayes, stage and screen star, as chairman of the new project.

The canteen, patterned after New York's successful Stage Door Canteen which has entertained more than 350,000 uniformed men since it opened last March, will open in the Belasco Theater early in September. It will be open seven nights a week from 5 p. m. until midnight.

Entertainment will be varied, with professionals contributing opera, comedy and dancing of all types. Theater, night club, radio and movie stars will participate. There also will be ballroom dancing.

Celebrities who will attend the opening, include Miss Hayes, Antoinette Perry, Tullulah Bankhead, Brock Pemberton and Milton Schubert.

The canteen in sponsored by the American Theater Wing.

The show is entirely for service men, with civilian sightseers being ruled out—with exception of occupants of the "Angel Table" which costs $100 and accommodates only six persons.

In addition to the Stage Door Canteen, the theater group also is doing other war work, including knitting clothes for service men and conducting first aid classes.

U-Boat Attack Upon Convoys Is Feared Soon

By Griffing Bancroft
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

There has been "a very definite decline" in the rate of merchant ship sinkings off the American coast in the last two weeks, an authoritative military spokesman said yesterday.

He coupled this good news, however, with a warning that the Nazis may now be preparing to bring the full brunt of their undersea attack against the heavily-convoyed supply lines across the North Atlantic to England and Russia.

One reason for this warning was the presence in the last two days of German planes over American-protected Iceland. This was interpreted as "long range reconnaissance, probably looking for convoys."

Since the only hostile act committed by the planes was the machine-gunning of a lighthouse, it was said here that they probably went around the island seeking to give information to submarines about ship movements. It was believed possible that this might foreshadow big scale U-boat attacks in those waters.

No More 'Easy Picking'

Up to now the submarines have preyed mostly on shipping along the coast which has been inadequately protected and therefore easy picking for the marauders.

There has, however, been a great stepping up recently, of all phases of our anti-submarine operations along the coast, it was disclosed. More planes have become available to search out the U-boats, more warships are being used in convoying, and drastic action is being taken against residents ashore suspected of aiding submarines in the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico.

An official source was quoted in London today as saying that German submarines no longer regard the American East Coast as a soft spot and may be forced to seek other waters to carry on their campaign against Allied shipping.

Unquestionably the Germans prefer to attack unprotected shipping, but if none of this easy prey is open to them and they are forced to risk combat with convoy, it is believed likely that they will strike at the most vital supply lines. These are believed to be the ships carrying arms, supplies and men across the North Atlantic.

Very Definite Decline

While there has been no apparent decline in announcement of merchant sinkings by the Navy, it was pointed out that losses are not officially disclosed until some long time after actual attacks occur. This means that official figures for actual losses during the last few weeks are not yet available.

"We can say now, however, that there has been a very definite decline in the rate of sinkings during the last two weeks," the spokesman said. "And we do not believe July sinkings were as bad as previous months."

Previously, Rear Admiral Clifford E. Van Hook, commandant of the Fifteenth Naval District in the Caribbean, said that July had been "particularly free from effective attacks on shipping," in his area.

None of these spokesmen indicated, however, that they felt the Battle of the Atlantic was by any means won.

The Navy today announced the loss of two additional ships, one a United States merchantman torpedoed 150 miles off the East Coast during the first part of July and the other a British vessel sunk in the Caribbean.

Sub Victims Get False Data, But Make Port

By the Associated Press

Forty-seven men who wandered 32 days at sea, after the submarine which torpedoed their vessel gave them false information about the nearest land, finally reached an East Coast port, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

They were survivors of the second United States ship whose loss was officially announced during the day. Added to the sinking of a British vessel, also announced, destruction of the ship raised the Associated Press tabulation of Atlantic losses since December 7 to 414.

Fourteen men were missing and 95 saved from the two ships announced earlier. Six were missing and believed dead, of the crew of the second American ship, and two more died while the survivors suffered 32 days of hunger and thirst in a lifeboat.

Sub Gave False Data

The survivors said the submarine surfaced after the attack June 27, helped pick up survivors, and gave the crew information about the closest land—information which proved false. However, Second Mate Frederick Sorenson said he gave the Nazi commander false information about the ship and its destination.

Crewmen said they had no navigation instruments, and Capt. John LaPoint of Baltimore steered by the sun and stars. For the last 15 days they had no food or water supplies left, but they caught fish and ate them raw.

Pelley Called Black-Hearted Traitor as Case Goes to Jury

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Aug. 5.—William Dudley Pelley was pictured as both "traitor" and "patriot" in opposing arguments before a Federal Court jury retired late today to decide his fate on charges of criminal sedition.

Oscar R. Ewing of New York, special prosecutor, and B. Howard Caughran, United States district attorney for southern Indiana, called the 52-year-old founder of the Silver Shirts a "traitor," and Defense Attorney Oscar F. Smith said his client was a "patriot."

Ewing labeled Pelley "a man who serves poison against his Government—sugar-coated with the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth."

Caughran, closing the Government's case and the final arguments, shook his finger at Pelley and said:

"You are a traitor to your country. You stabbed your country in the back while it was engaged with a foreign foe."

Caughran referred to a man convicted in the same courtroom a few years ago for killing an FBI agent after slaying his own mother and remarked to Pelley:

"But I don't believe that man has a blacker heart than you who were willing to murder the country that gave you birth and nurtured your ancestors for 200 years."

"The record shows plainly," the district attorney told the jury, "that Pelley wanted to be the Quisling of America. He was willing to see it the victim of a foreign nation in order to realize his dastardly ambitions . . .

"The Silver Shirts bristle through and through with militarism . . . it was the purpose of Pelley to raise a private army . . . as they say, it may have been disbanded in 1939, but I say it marches on today. I have seen it in this courtroom."

Judge Robert C. Baltzell cautioned the jurymen to disregard their own political affiliations in arriving at their verdict. They received the case at 4:45 p. m. (C. W. T.). The trial began July 28.

Smith concluded his arguments for the defendants by telling the jury that "Pelley intended to help the American people and to uphold the Constitution of this glorious republic."

Ewing, after using the word "traitor," had asserted earlier:

"We find Pelley doing just what anyone would do who was trying to help the enemy—that is, beat his chest and proclaim his patriotism vociferously in order that these false protestations of loyalty might serve as a smoke screen for the poisonous dagger he was aiming at the heart of America."

Attorney Floyd G. Christian, concluding for the defense, said there was a distinction between criticism of the Administration and criticism of the Government and asserted Pelley's writings were solely of the Administration.

The prosecution, while describing Pelley as the "moving spirit" of his publishing enterprises, argued for the conviction also of two co-defendants, Miss Agnes Marian Henderson and Lawrence A. Brown. Miss Henderson was Pelley's secretary and also treasurer of his publishing firm, Fellowship Press, Inc., at Noblesville, Ind., and Brown was secretary of the firm. The Government's case is based largely on articles in Pelley's magazine, "The Galilean."

Each of the defendants could be sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment and fined $10,000 on each of the 11 remaining counts in the indictment.

Gestapo Breaks British Spy Ring Headed by a Woman

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Aug. 1 (Delayed).—The German Gestapo has broken up a spy ring operated by a married woman, the mother of several children, which informed the British by portable short wave radio of the imminent departure of three German warships from Brest, and has sentenced 11 of its members to death, reports from Paris disclosed today.

(The dispatch did not say when the arrests were made but it was believed the case might relate to the departure of the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen from Brest on February 12. Those ships, heavily escorted, forced the English Channel and made their way to north German ports after a clash with British planes and light surface craft. However, British dispatches at the time indicated that the appearance of the German fleet in the Channel came as a complete surprise.)

The spy ring was said to have operated in both the occupied and unoccupied zones. The Gestapo traced several messages broadcast almost simultaneously from both zones five days before the warships left Brest, it was reported.

The 11 persons arrested in the occupied zone were sentenced to death by courts-martial at Paris. Ten were arrested in the unoccupied zone, but escaped from prison by bribing the guard. They are believed to have left France.

Meantime, German authorities were reported to have ordered sterilization of all children arrested in a round-up of 18,000 Paris Jews, and two prominent physicians, one named Wertheimer at Lyons and another named Bloch at Paris, were said to have committed suicide from worry over the new persecutions.

The Germans now are deporting entire families suspected of pro-French sympathies from occupied Alsace Lorraine, it was revealed.

Abandoned farms, securities, livestock and personal property are taken over by the Germans and given to German farmers.

The Germans also have posted an order mobilizing two new classes in Alsace-Lorraine for service in the German army, and have mobilized two other classes of 18 and 19-year-old boys for work in German labor camps.

Meanwhile, Vichy and the rest of unoccupied France are being showered almost nightly with American propaganda tracts dropped by R. A. F. planes. R. A. F. bombers also are active over France.

They scored a direct hit July 29 on a German tank assembly factory at Glen, south of Paris on the main railroad line to Moulins, and also hit a German-occupied barracks.

Two direct hits cut the railroad between Paris and Vichy, forcing the rerouting of trains.

6 Spy Helpers Fail to Win Lower Bonds

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Six persons charged with aiding alleged Nazi saboteurs protested loud and tearfully today as they failed to obtain reduction of their bonds of $50,000 each.

"This is worse than Hitler!" Walter Wilhelm Froehling sobbed as he was being led back to jail.

All the defendants cried throughout the hearing except Hans Max Haupt and his wife, parents of Herbert Hans Haupt, one of the eight alleged saboteurs whose fate is in the hands of President Roosevelt, after a military court trial in Washington.

United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker declined to reduce the bonds of the six and continued their hearing to August 26 at the request of United States District Attorney J. Albert Woll.

"Why don't they shoot us now and get it over with?" asked Otto Richard Wergin, as he was being led away.

Wergin's and Froehling's wives are the other two Chicagoans charged with unlawfully receiving, relieving, comforting, aiding and assisting young Haupt.

In asking for reduced bond and a shorter continuance, Attorney Benedict J. Short declared the defendants never had been in trouble before, that a bond of $3000 or $4000 each would hold them and recalled that Al Capone's bond was "only $50,000 although he had violated every law of the land."

Woll replied: "This is not an ordinary criminal case. We are fighting for our very existence and these people gave aid and comfort to spies. They are more vicious than any Al Capones that ever lived."

Secret $25,000 Fee Paid to Ham Fish by Foreign Power

zine article, which purported to give an account of the alleged massacre, into the Congressional Record.

Sometime, and somehow, in the year that followed, Fish acquired a new and different understanding of the state of things in the Dominican Republic.

George Jambar Djamgaroff, the White Russian mystery man who claims he turned down a Nazi offer of $200,000 a year to handle their propaganda in 1935, was a friend of Fish, of long standing. Djamgaroff has explained that they were brought together by their common bitterness against communism.

Fish interceded for Djamgaroff in 1932, when the Russian's immigration status was under investigation. And when Djamgaroff filed his registration statement as the $50,000-a-year agent of the Dominican Republic, in February, 1939, Fish was one of his references.

A Goodwill Junket

Soon after Djamgaroff got this job, he arranged for some American Congressmen and newspaper people to make a little goodwill visit to the Dominican Republic.

Fish went along.

This was in March, 1939. General Trujillo had given up his office of President the year before—after eight years in office—but was keeping his hand in by holding on as generalissimo of the Dominican army. (Reelected this year, the general is due to start his third term as President on August 16.)

The general, President J. N. Troncoso de la Concha and other high officials laid themselves out to show the visitors a good time. And in July, 1939, General Trujillo returned the visit, but as a "private citizen."

General Trujillo was the guest of honor at a banquet sponsored by the Pan American Society at the Biltmore Hotel in New York, on the evening of July 12, 1939.

There were pickets outside the hotel, displaying posters and giving out hand-bills which contained an article in which Gen. Hugh Johnson called the general a "blood-spattered bully" and other choice nicknames. They sounded much like the expressions of Fish himself had used on the floor of the House.

Golden Age, Says Fish

But the lumbering, florid New York Congressman was through with such language. He was the principal speaker at the banquet, and this is one of the things he said: "General, you have created a golden age for your country . . and as I am proud and happy to repeat at this time to a United States audience, you will go down in the history of your country as a builder greater than all the Spanish conquistadors together."

Less than a week later, the $25,000 was deposited to Fish's credit.

And just three years later, when a great many questions began to be asked of a great many people, in connection with grand jury investigation of the activities of foreign agents, Fish's friend Djamgaroff was called as a witness. Almost immediately Fish recalled the $25,000 and opened negotiations with the Internal Revenue Bureau.

These negotiations are still going on, but have been delayed by the primary campaign, in which Fish seeks renomination for his seat in Congress.

Patent Pool 'Stranglehold' On Synthetic Rubber Charged

By Philip G. Reed
International News Service Staff Writer

C. R. Starnes, Gladewater, Tex., independent oil operator, yesterday charged before the Senate Patents Committee that an international combine of oil interests had seized a stranglehold on the Government's synthetic rubber program to dominate the business after the war.

Starnes said he had been blocked by the group in efforts to get a share of the synthetic rubber output, although offering on the behalf of a Texas syndicate to invest 10 million dollars in production facilities.

Lists "Conspirators"

Charging the existence of "a conspiracy to prevent the development of synthetic rubber," Starnes said that opposition to the Government's synthetic rubber program was led by:

Frank A. Howard, vice president of the Standard Development Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Richard J. Dearborn, general counsel for the Texas Co. and technical adviser to the assistant director of the Government Rubber Reserve Corporation.

Starnes described Dearborn as "a lawyer of unusual acumen who is able to shape the country's synthetic rubber production while occupying a relatively minor position."

Howard operates on the "outside," Starnes said.

Patent Pool Domineering

Starnes asserted that the international group is composed of members in a giant patent pool, which embraces Standard Oil of New Jersey, the Texas Co., Shell interests and the I. G. Farbenindustrie, giant Nazi dye and chemical trust.

"Their plan," he said, "is to stop production by any group outside their own patent group."

Starnes said his group was advised to "shove up our costs" to meet the charges of the major oil companies in their bids to the Government. He did not say who ordered him to do so. He said his group compiled but couldn't get the costs up to these of the major companies.

He said the oilmen dominating the picture were working to get the Government to finance plants only for themselves, which Standard and others could then buy back at depreciated values after the war.

Involve Higher Costs

These plants, he asserted, involved much higher costs than those required for other known processes, but were needed by the international combine to make butyl, which he predicted would be the dominant synthetic after the war.

Illustrating his charge that large oil firms now control the Government program, he said that the application of his syndicate was passed upon at a conference in April in the board room of the RFC, attended by the following:

Dearborn, D. W. Wilson, vice president, Standard Oil of New Jersey; Fred Pyzell, in charge of rubber research for the Shell company; M. L. Griffin, Shell company; Frank Carmen, Armstrong Rubber and Linoleum Co.; Dr. C. P. Wagner, Pure Oil Co., and Dr. William Mendius, Sinclair Oil Co.

Cincinnati Goes Without Papers As Pressmen Strike

Cincinnati, Aug. 5 (AP).—For the first time within memory Cincinnatians went without their afternoon papers today as union pressmen stayed away from their posts and disregarded an order of their international president to return pending negotiation of wage difficulties.

Neither the Cincinnati Times-Star nor the Cincinnati Post, a Scripps-Howard publication, appeared on the streets.

Earlier, the Cincinnati Enquirer, a morning daily, was published with six members of one family as the entire pressroom force.

Hours after George L. Berry, president of the International Newspaper Pressmens Union (A. F. L.), telegraphed John Woods, president of the Cincinnati local, to "cease immediately" the walkout, officers continued conferences and members gave no indication of compliance with the request.

Nash Becomes Battalion Chief

Fire Capt. William H. Nash of No. 28 Fire Station at Connecticut Avenue and Porter Streets Northwest, was promoted to Battalion Chief yesterday, in place of Battalion Chief Engineer Frederick M. Edwards, retired.

Nash, who has been an acting battalion chief for the past three years, has been in the service for 35 years. Edwards, who has had 38 years experience, was retired because he will pass the 64 year age limit by September 1. Nash is 61 years old.

Plot Suspect Arrested in N. C.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 5 (AP).—U. S. Marshall Charles Price said today Hudson DePriest of Wichita, Kans., had been arrested in Charlotte to answer an indictment in Washington charging him and 27 others with conspiracy to promote revolt in the Army and Navy.

Russians Reported Firing Oilfields

London (Thursday), Aug. 6 (INS).—The Daily Express reported in an unconfirmed dispatch from Stockholm today that the Russians are setting fire to the Maikop oilfields in the Caucasus as the Nazis approach. The fields produce some of Russia's best aviation gasoline.

Clare Boothe Declines To Run for Congress

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 5 (AP).—Clare Boothe Luce of Greenwich, the author and playwright, declined today to seek the Republican nomination for Congress from the Fourth District.

Mrs. Luce, wife of Henry Luce, the magazine publisher, sent a letter to J. Kenneth Bradley of Westport, Republican State chairman, in which she stated that because she lacked intimate knowledge of local problems and interests and because the "time is too short" now to study the local situation, "I feel I cannot offer my name as a candidate for Congress."

D. C. Trade Board Warns of Bond Counterfeiting

Washingtonians were warned by the Board of Trade yesterday to be on guard against "becoming part" of a scheme involving the counterfeiting of war bonds and stamps.

In a letter to its members and to presidents of the city's clubs, the Board of Trade said the Secret Service had asked cooperation in calling attention to the fact that some instances of such counterfeiting have been uncovered, although no cases have come to light in Washington.

"We are advised that those who are connected with the photo-engraving industry might be particularly careful if requests are made to reproduce in whole or in part any of the insignia which might be recognized as a portion of a war bond or stamp," Clarence A. Arata, acting executive secretary of the board, declared.

Smith and Woodrum Win Lopsided Victories

Both to Have Socialist Opposiiton

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Aug. 5.—Lopsided victories in Tuesday's Democratic primary assured Representative Howard W. Smith and Clifton A. Woodrum, the only members of the Virginia delegation who had opposition, of terms in Congress.

Both will have Socialist opposition in the November election, but minor party candidates have never polled a large vote in the Old Dominion.

Smith, author of a bill to prohibit strikes during the war, defeated Emmett C. Davison, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Machinists (A. F. of L.) and a former Mayor of Alexandria, by better than 4 to 1 in the Eighth District, and Woodrum, a member of the House for the last 20 years, trounced Moss A. Plunkett, Roanoke attorney, 6 to 1, in the Sixth District.

When tabulation of the unofficial returns had ceased, Smith had a vote of 20,522 to Davison's 4904 in 183 of the Eighth's 218 precincts. Woodrum received 13,619 to Plunkett's 2273 in returns from all but 37 precincts in the other district. The missing precincts for the most part were in rural areas.

The voting in the contested districts:

All Incumbent Congressmen Win Primaries in 3 States

Results of the primary elections Tuesday in Kansas, Missouri and West Virginia as rounded up by the Associated Press:

KANSAS—Andrew Schoeppel, former grid star, and W. H. Burke, banker-stockman, won Republican and Democratic nominations respectively for gubernatorial race. Veteran Republican Senator Arthur Capper, faces Democratic former Senator George McGill in the November contest for United States Senate, both winning nomination by wide margins. All Congress members renominated.

MISSOURI—Young Republican Representative Walter C. Ploeser won renomination over six opponents, to face Democratic nominee Martin L. Neaf. Unopposed by Republicans, Representatives Dewey Short and Phil A. Bennett will run against Democratic Nominess Ralph C. Max and Sam A. Wear, respectively, in November. Six Democratic Representatives hurdled opposition to win renomination, three were unopposed, while Roger S. Slaughter won the party's nomination to succeed veteran Representative Joseph B. Shannon, who was not a candidate.

WEST VIRGINIA—Democratic Gov. Matthew M. Neely won Senate nomination over former Gov. H. G. Kump after rousing battle. Three Democratic Representatives, Joe L. Smith, Robert L. Ramsay and John Kee, won renomination. Raymond J. Funkhouser and Chapman Revercomb were still running neck-and-neck for the Republican senatorial nomination. Democratic Senator Joseph Rosier won nomination for the November 3 to January 3 Senate short term.

Pendergast Machine Beaten

KANSAS CITY—The once mighty Pendergast Democratic machine was knocked out of its last major patronage position in Jackson County's government—the county court.

Only one of the organization's endorsed candidates, Fred W. Klaber, for the three-judge court—governing unit for the county—was nominated at Tuesday's primary.

Martin Recalls Aroff Offered To Pay for Car

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 5.—Chief Specialist Tony Martin, testifying as the first defense witness in the Navy courtmartial of Lieut. Comdr. Maurice N. Aroff, disclosed today that Aroff had visited him at his home last night.

Several hours later, Martin said, he suddenly remembered a conversation in which Aroff, former assistant naval procurement officer here, had offered to pay for a car given him by the singer.

Martin's testimony repudiated his statement as a prosecution witness last week that Aroff never had offered him a cent for the automobile. The Navy charges that Aroff accepted the $950 sedan to facilitate the screen star's enlistment.

It all came back to him, the witness said, as he was lying in bed early this morning at his mother's Oakland home.

"I knew there was something I had to say," he testified. So he went into his mother's room, and called to her, "'Mom, wake up.' I told her I recalled that conversation as if it was this morning."

Aroff refused the money, Martin said, but told him instead that when he sold the car, "I'll deduct $200 and give you the rest."

The witness did not say immediately what he and Aroff talked about last night. Three weeks ago, however, Martin said, the officer met him on Treasure Island and said:

"Tony, I want to ask you something. I don't want to put any words in your mouth. I just want to see if you recall this conversation.'"

For more than a wek a succession of prosecution witnesses told Aroff's six-judge court-martial that the commander helped young friends obtain favored positions in the Navy, then asked them for rewards.

A half-dozen witnesses, it was understood, are to appeard in Aroff's behalf, with the likelihood the defendant would be among the first.

Opening of the defense case was preceded by an unsuccessful attempt to have all the charges against Aroff dismissed.

American U. Meeting Set

An International Student Assembly with 300 delegates will be in session at American University here from September 2 through September 5, it was announced yesterday at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference.

Mrs. Eliot R. Pratt, general secretary of the International Student Service, said the assembly has been called to help "the youth of the world to achieve a full understanding of the war and its problems.

"The first concern of the assembly is winning the war," she said, "but there will be discussion about the peace we all hope to get after the war."

Mrs. Pratt said that the Latin American republics will be represented at the assembly by 75 delegates, Europe by 50, Asia by 50 and Canada and the United States by 125. Because of travel conditions, most of the foreign students will come from American colleges where they are studying, she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt is a member of the excutive committee of the service. Chairman of the United States committee is Dr. Alvin Johnson, director of the New School of Social Research in New York City.

Chicago Women Must Sit Down to Drink

Chicago, Aug. 5 (U.P.).—The city council ruled today that Chicago women must drink their liquor seated modestly in a chair with both feet under the table.

No more drinking at bars where they jostle against soldiers, sailors and visiting businessmen—sometimes intentionally. The action was a surprise move to rid the bars of so-called hostesses and the girls who dropped in for a quick pickup—not necessarily alcoholic.

A Letter

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

In the Liquor Industry, already one of the most highly legislated businesses in the Nation, further important laws are passed or being considered. Pearson's takes this means of interpreting their significance to you in respect to the increased prices you must soon pay.

The Office of Price Administrator has decreed higher price ceilings on certain products, due to increased cost of shipment. That means certain stores will RAISE their prices ABOVE their March ceilings. PRICE INCREASE NUMBER ONE.

The new Federal Tax increase has passed the House. It provides for tax payments that will ultimately add from 36c to 50c to the price of a bottle of whiskey (various sizes proportionately increased). This must, of necessity, be added to the retail price to you. INCREASE NUMBER TWO.

To pay this Federal tax on their floor stocks, many distilleries must borrow huge sums of cash. And to pay the interest on these loans, their prices will inevitably go up. THERE IS PRICE INCREASE NUMBER THREE.

Some of the above situations obtain NOW . . . some are soon to come. And you, as the consumer, must pay the bill. So it behooves you to anticipate your immediate and near-future needs, AND SUPPLY THEM NOW WHILE PEARSON'S IS IN THE MIDST OF A STORE-WIDE SALE, in which NONE of the above price increases have as yet taken effect.

Respectfully,

Pearson's

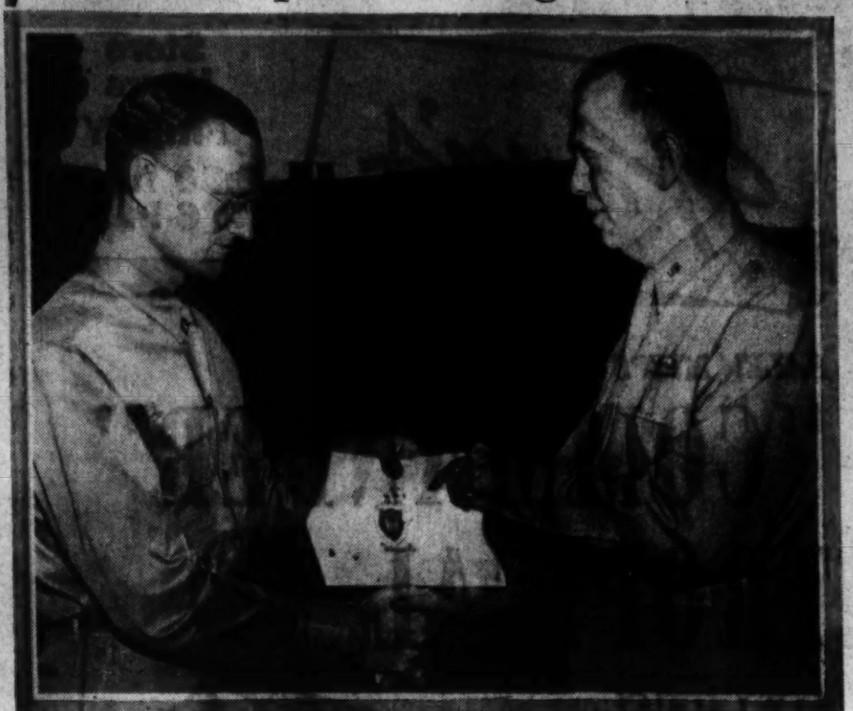
Rain Keeps Pershing From Seeing Son Commissioned



Photos by Associated Press and Wide World.

COMMISSION—Gen. George C. Marshall (right) presents Warren Francis Pershing his commission as second lieutenant in the Army Engineers

LIEUT. WARREN F. PERSHING is congratulated by his wife yesterday at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Because the weather prevented his father—Gen. John J. Pershing, the commander of the A. E. F. in World War I—from being there to present him with his commission, Warren F. Pershing yesterday received his diploma at Fort Belvoir from Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff.

The several hundred other candidates received their commissions as second lieutenants in the Army Engineers from the hand of Brig. Gen. Lehman W. Miller, commanding general E. R. T. C. at the fort. Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief, Services of Supply, came with General Marshall and also assisted in presentation of diplomas.

General Pershing told a Post reporter late yesterday afternoon that he "thought it best that he stay inside because of the rain" and that he expected a visit at Walter Reed Hospital from his son sometime in the evening. Lieutenant Pershing's wife, however, was able to attend the ceremonies.

"It is a great pleasure to me to welcome the son of John J. Pershing into the Army," said General Marshall when presenting Lieutenant Pershing his diploma. General Marshall was General Pershing's chief of staff during the first World War.

Brig. Gen. Roscoe C. Crawford, commandant of the engineer school, gave the introductory address, and the oath of office was administered by Capt. Joseph M. Plant, adjutant of the engineer school. Post Chaplain Alva J. Brasted delivered the benediction. Music was provided by the E. R. T. C. band.

Government Gets the Tires

"Dead Letter" Sale Starts Today at 9 A. M.; 1058 Lots to Go on Block—Fur Cape Included

From horse collars to sleds, the Postoffice Department's sale today of lost or unclaimed articles at the city postoffice, Massachusetts and North Capitol Street Northeast, includes almost everything you could mention—except rubber that might be useful to the war effort.

The Government made a large salvage haul itself long before the saleable goods were put on display yesterday, and eliminated all tires, tubes and other rubber materials.

However, if you need a little composition rubber to tide you over for the duration, you may bid on half a dozen bathing caps or on a box full of tires suitable for baby's tricycle. The tires are replaceable parts, and the bathing caps just don't have the type of rubber that Uncle Sam needs.

One thousand and fifty-eight lots are included in the sale, and many of them contain as many as 50 pieces, taking up the entire space alloted on the third floor of the city postoffice building.

Most of the articles have come from the District, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, but a few are included that contained foreign addresses, but were badly wrapped and hence lost all identification.

Items of the sale have been accumulated since the last postoffice auction more than a year ago; only perishable goods have been sold in the intervening period.

The lots will go on the block at 9 a. m. today and will be sold at the rate of about 115 an hour until the last pair of shoes, the last book, the last piece of clothing have found new owners.

From Item No. 1, six pillow tops, to Item No. 1058, assorted jewelry, the sale offers more variety than an up-to-date drug store. The choice of china and glassware would do credit to a smart Connecticut Avenue shop, but there's one difficulty: you have to buy the whole lot, which may consist of 30 pieces. You can't single out a chinese vase or a handpainted ash tray; it is all or nothing.

The ladies who browsed through the collection during the 7-hour inspection period yesterday were particularly interested in a short fur cape. Gusses were that it was dyed squirrel.

Fishing rods, bed linen, a mandolin, a first edition on the New York World's Fair, 84 spools of sewing thread, a pressure cooker in perfect condition, a set of encyclopedia, two boxes filled with sun helmets directly out of "Trader Horn," electric clocks, shoes, stockings, dresses, furniture—all will go on the block, and nothing will cost less than a quarter. That is the Postoffice Department's bottom price.

DISH WARE to be auctioned is examined by Betty Bryner of 3438 Dix Street Northeast

LUGGAGE which will go to the highest bidder is the object of Ann Barney's inspection. She lives in Arlington, Va.

Twirlers' Teacher Is Ambidextrous

CORRECT STRUT FOR A DRUM MAJORETTE IS DEMONSTRATED BY MILDRED BRYAN

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—If you can rub your head and pat your stomach at the same time, you are in a fair way to being qualified for training as a baton twirler.

Mildred Bryan, an outstanding teacher of twirlers, says that the ability to use the two hands simultaneously and independently is a prime requisite for twirling, which, of course, leads on to being a drum major or majorette, and a leader of parades.

In her studio at Wilmington, Del., and in her classes at Fort Dupont, she has taught her art to hundreds of boys, girls, babies and soldiers.

Now she's teaching teachers in attendance at the convention of the Dancing Masters of America, Inc., in the Hotel New Yorker.

Miss Bryan considers baton twirling as possibly more important than the rhumba in America today—"because look at all the parades and the military drills, and think how dull they'd be without a pretty strutting majorette out there in front."

What a twirler must have, Miss Bryan says, is good posture, good body movement (this so you can do a good lively strut), a sense of rhythm, personality, and a pair of tall boots. Your age can be anything from two years up.

In the first lesson, you learn a military salute and two "carries." The formal carry places the baton smartly under the right arm with the right hand grasping the ball, the left hand on the hip.

Some teachers say let the left hand hang straight in the formal carry, but Miss Bryan thinks this spoils the style of the strut.

The cradle carry, with the baton lying across the forearm, "gives you relaxation so you can let your hair down in body movement, especially as you pass the reviewing stand."

Then you learn finger rolls, figure eights, the mixing bowl (a horizontal spin), flips, and how to handle two or three batons at once, passing them under the legs and behind the body as you strut.

Senators Hear Plea for 5% General Sales Tax

By the Associated Press

Urging Senators to vote a 5 per cent sales tax for the duration and six months afterward, a spokesman for the National Retail Dry Goods Association declared yesterday that such a levy would be "distinctly deflationary" and not inflationary as Treasury officials contend.

"All economists agree on the deflationary aspects of such a tax," Jay Iglauer told the Senate Finance Committee, which is considering the tax bill recently approved by the House.

"You mean all economists except those in the Treasury, don't you?" Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, asked wryly. Later Vandenberg told reporters he was "perfectly amazed" by the Treasury's continued opposition to a sales levy.

"When the retailer himself has agreed—is even urging—to accept the load of collecting such a tax, then the last man who has a right to complain has disappeared," Vandenberg said.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, said he thought Iglauer had made an excellent case for the sales tax, but Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan, told reporters he was not ready to support a tax on all the necessities of life. Brown added he was working on a proposal to increase the excise rates on certain luxury products.

Estimating that a 5 per cent general sales levy would bring in about $2,500,000,000 additional revenue, Iglauer recommended that the tax be paid by the consumer.

He said it should apply not only to ordinary consumers' goods, but also to purchases of machinery, fixtures, supplies, factory and store equipment, "exempting only the purchase of such items as are required for the production of war materials."

If the tax is voted, he said, all manufacturers' excise taxes except those on tobacco, liquor, gasoline and oil should be repealed, as well as retail excise levies on furs, jewelry and toilet goods.

Because of administrative and collection difficulties, Iglauer said the sales tax should not apply to personal or professional services, such as those of physicians, dentists and attorneys, or to salaries and wages, rents or the cost of insurance.

Senator Brown disagreed with him on that point, expressing the belief that any administrative difficulties could be overcome.

"When you are considering the question of the extremely low income tax exemptions provided in the proposed bill," Iglauer said, "remember that it is far easier to collect war retail sales taxes from the lower income groups than to collect income tax through the lowering of exemptions."

Mrs. E. G. Bell Made Probation Officer

Mrs. Ella G. Bell, former Juvenile Court clerk of 1040 Quebec Place Northwest, was sworn in yesterday as assistant probation officer of Municipal Court.

Walter F. Bramhall, chief clerk, administered the oath following announcement of the appointment by Joseph N. Sanford, chief probation officer.

The position, carrying a salary of $1800 a year, involves supervision of female probationists.

Those Theater People Get Out There and Give

Katharine Cornell Latest to Stage Service Show; Local Stage Door Canteen Attracts Broadway; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE EAGERNESS of the theater and its people to pitch in for the entertainment of uniformed service men, and the maintenance of suitable recreational facilities for them in their off-duty hours, is without limit.

KATHARINE CORNELL

Its most eloquent expression, of course, is found in the American Theater War Wing Services, Inc., whose best-known activity is the establishment of the Stage Door Canteens that are springing up all over the East. That is the Theater, working en toto. Individuals also are doing their bits, over and above their contributions in time and effort to the canteens.

Katharine Cornell, for example, will present "Kit Cornell's Jamboree" in the high school auditorium, Vineyard Haven, Mass., on Saturday night. Miss Cornell's husband, Guthrie McClintic, and four or five other theatrical celebrities will take part in the "Jamboree." Soldiers and sailors stationed on outpost duty at the island will act as ushers. A group of Army nurses from Camp Edwards, at Falmouth, will attend in their officers' uniforms. After the performance the auditorium will be cleared for a barn dance.

Miss Cornell is paying all expenses so that the entire proceeds—at a scale ranging from 75 cents to $3—may go to the USO.

In the meantime, preparations for the organization meeting of the Washington Stage Door Canteen, to be held around the supper table on the stage of the National Theater this evening at 7, are booming. In conversation with Brock Pemberton and Milton Shubert, cochairmen of the branches committee, yesterday afternoon—or as much of it as could be heard above the constant jangling of EX. 4583 in the office of the Theater War Wing—it was learned that tonight's New York delegation will number nearer 50 than the 20 originally estimated. Lee Shubert, Vinton Freedley, John Golden, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, if they can make it from Wisconsin in time, and numerous others now have signified their intention of being on hand. Not forgetting Sol Lasser, West Coast producer now in the East gathering material for the motion picture he will produce based on the operation of the Theater Wing canteens—all proceeds to go to the canteens. Offers of wholesale contributions of cigarettes, foodstuffs, etc., etc., that have already poured in would make an item longer than this one.

Motion picture exhibitors from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia met in the Washington Hotel yesterday to lay plans for the theaters' September drive for the sale of a billion dollars in U. S. War Bonds and Stamps. Harry Brandt, of the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry, came on from New York to address the meeting, along with Treasury officials. Cochairmen John J. Payette, of the Warner interests, and Carter T. Barron, of Loew's, Inc., heading the local committee, presided. Among the projects discussed was the direct delivery of bonds and stamps, on a cash sale basis, by the theaters. It is expected that before the end of the present month it will be possible to secure delivery of bonds from a majority of the Washington and nearby theaters every day in the week, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays included. That would put the theaters at least two up on the banks.

You might as well be warned now that Howard Acton and Phelps Adams, authors of "Wave That Flag, America," have another song coming up, which they modestly claim outrates its popular predecessor by a million tingles up and down the spine. I'm on their side. At least until I hear it!

Anyhow, by the time the month is out Washington ought to be fairly "Out of the Frying Pan" conscious. With the Cross Roads Theater putting the Francis Swann comedy on for a fortnight's run, beginning next Monday night, the Footlight Club of Maryland University is staging the piece for a three-night engagement in the University Theater, at College Park, beginning tonight at 8:30. Tentative arrangements may permit the cast to move over to Camp Meade for a fourth night dedicated to the entertainment of the soldiery.

Hope-Dashed-to-Earth Note

Well, it didn't turn to snow, after all. Better luck next time!

Columbia

Having enjoyed a tonic week at the Capitol, "Maisie Gets Her Man" now takes over the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for a resumption of its exhilarating hijinks on F Street.

With Ann Sothern continuing her exploits as the indomitable trouper, Maisie Ravier, and Red Skelton in there to "corn up" the comedy with his gags, this latest release in the M-G-M series could almost stand on that, alone. Add to the cast such favorites of flippancy as Leo Gorcey, Allen Jenkins, Donald Meek, Lloyd Corrigan, Walter Catlett, Fritz Feld, "Rags" Ragland and Frank Jenks and you have a roster of principals uniformly expert in the antic requirements of free-for-all fun.

The Invader and the Mayor

CONRAD NAGEL AND ART SMITH

as they will be seen in the principal roles in John Steinbeck's dramatization of his novel, "The Moon is Down," coming to the National Theater next Monday night to inaugurate the new theatrical season of 1942-43. The engagement is announced for one week only, at popular prices

Hitler Is Pilloried at the Little

By Ernest L. Schier

A dramatic scenario and a series of now historical newsreels, combine to make the latest Little Theater attraction a powerful and important one. Fully intended to be a "propaganda" picture, "After Mein Kampf" paints with realistic truth the horror of Hitler's rise to power, with no punches pulled.

Less a character study than a documentary, the film traces, from Hitler's early desires to the current conflict, the part the world played in lackadaisically allowing the madman to carry out his plans for world domination. In the long run it calls upon each of us to examine his own conscience for a lack of guilt in not protesting with all our power, the early atrocities which were a forewarning of what was yet to come.

Stills, newsreels and narration are used to show Hitler as a wandering, unemployed Austrian, whose maniacal ideas began to form while he was a corporal during the First World War. An insight into his personality is shown when he fails as an artist and cleverly forges names to reproductions of great masterpieces. His unquenchable urge to become a figure of national importance led him to lead a coup that failed and resulted in a prison term, during which he wrote his handbook of dictatorship and superiority.

On his release from jail he found Germany in a state of hunger and depression resulting from the enforced conditions of the Versailles treaty. Acting quickly, he formed his party, which was later to be known with terrifying dread by the name of Nazi. Aided by many of the great industrial firms of Germany who were looking for a man to enlarge their power, he soon rose to position of Chancellor.

Aided by his own private army of S S troops he invoked his reign of terror on the people of Germany, not even stopping at the murder of his own friends. After occupying the demilitarized Rhineland he began the famous "Drang Noch Osten" while the democratic nations stood by and watched. The rest is known but too well to all of us.

A professional cast of English actors, who prefer to remain anonymous, perform such scenes as the murder of Roehm, the trial of Von der Lubbe for the burning of the Reichstag, which was instigated by the Nazis themselves, the persecution of Jew and Catholic alike and many others.

The well known sermon by the English minister John Donne, spoken over three centuries ago, strikes home now with full impact, "No man is an island entire to himself, each man is a continent, a part of the main." The picture closes with a question mark, leaving it up to each of us to determine what part we will play in bringing about an end to the tumor which now grows upon the face of the earth.

HEDDA HOPPER

Mr. Eagle Did It the Hard Way!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 5.—In "Tales of Manhattan" you'll see a fantastic story dreamed up by a man whose own life is more fantastic than the picture. Born Samuel Spiegel, in Jerusalem, son of one of the pioneers of the Zionist movement, he came here to do research in the American theater. A friendship sprang up between him and Paul Bern, husband of Jean Harlow, which led to his being sent abroad to handle Universal's European production of antiwar pictures. Though the Nazis were then coming into power, Sam Spiegel (whose name is now S. P. Eagle) made a German version of "All Quiet on the Western Front," and actually got it released in Berlin, where it was immensely popular, despite sabotaging by Hitler's Brown Shirts, who threw stink bombs and started riots in all theaters where the picture was shown.

GARY COOPER

Eagle, his life in constant danger, carried on and managed to produce a successful musical film, after which he was sent to Italy to make the Italian version of "All Quiet." The film was previewed by Mussolini, who complimented him, and next day banned its showing thruout Italy. Returning to Berlin just as the Reichstag fire occurred, with its bloody aftermath, he was saved by his barber who whispered to him "don't go home tonight!" Eagle, hatless, and with a few marks in his pocket, caught a train for Vienna. He crossed the border two hours before it was permanently closed by the Gestapo.

In Vienna he produced "Invisible Opponents" with Oscar Homolka and Peter Lorre, on which he made money, but lost it on a revue, "Mexicana." 1939 saw Eagle back in Hollywood and broke. His idea for "Tales of Manhattan" was met with jeers, until he ran into Boris Morros, who finally persuaded Twentieth Century to produce it. Now the rest of 'em are kicking themselves, 'cause the picture's caught on, and you'll be seeing a rash of 'em next year. That's the way we do things in Hollywood.

The location "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is high up in the Sierra Nevada gold country, which Mark Twain and Bret Harte wrote about, and gold is being returned to the spot now—Paramount gold, scrambled eggs for breakfast cost $1.50 and dinner, $2.50.

Swinging over a 1500-foot gorge was a camera on a huge crane, and Director Sam Wood was showing Akim Tamiroff (who plays Pablo) how to climb the face of the cliff. Akim was scared stiff—and so was I, just watching.

Ran into Gary Cooper in front of a little green shack, where he's living with his family. He was watering flowers. Said he'd hate to have the owner come back and find all his flowers dead." "I don't see how a film could be more important today than this," Gary said. "It shows the uselessness of civil war, brother killing brother. It's the real thing."

Words to the Wise

New York, Aug. 5.

ELIZABETH DILLING: One of your 27 other codefendants indicted by the Washington grand jury last month has signed a confession. And George Sylvester Viereck, the jailed Nazi agent, is talking. He probably will plead guilty and testify in behalf of the Government . . . ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE: After the cases of the eight Nazi saboteurs are disposed of this week, the President will name a permanent Military Commission for spy-trials. Its membership will be different from the present body of Army judges . . . WILL HAYS: Robert Riskin, the famed scenarist, will join Robert E. Sherwood in the making of 8-mm. films for underground exhibitors in the conquered countries.

BETTE DAVIS

o+o

RAY BOLGER: King George of Greece made one regal wish, and it was fulfilled. He asked for a luncheon date with Constance Moore, your leading lady in "By Jupiter." They lunched at the St. Regis Roof . . . GOVERNOR LEHMAN: Mayor LaGuardia has been in Washington, conferring with Jesse Jones about alleviating the unemployment situation in New York. The mayor has a new project, which will soon be announced . . . PAUL ROBESON: John LaTouche, who wrote the lyrics for your "Ballad for Americans," enlisted in the Army. But before reporting, he's received permission to go to the Congo, for a documentary film, as the guest of the Belgian government.

SENATOR JIM MEAD: Jim Farley plans to invade your home town, Buffalo, by holding a political dinner there . . . CORDELL HULL: The New Yorker magazine, about to publish a profile on your assistant secretary, Adolf A. Berle, jr., sent a reporter to Washington to see him. Berle is reluctant about having such an article appear and asked why he had been selected. "Mr. Berle," said the reporter, "it was an act of God." REALTY BOARD: Leon Henderson, whose job includes the problem of easing the house-renting situation in Washington, himself will have to go house-hunting next month. His landlord now has a Navy job in Washington and needs the place.

FCC: During Friday night's blackout here the city station, WNYC, stayed on the air 22 minutes past its scheduled closing hour. WNYC—which has been petitioning for a license to broadcast at later hours—now can prove that there'll be no conflict with other station . . . FORT MacARTHUR: Bette Davis is opening a Stage Door Canteen in Hollywood . . . GENERAL HERSHEY: Eleanor Roosevelt visited Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" twice last week. Pvt. Hank Henry told her: Mrs. Roosevelt, you may not know it, but I've corresponded with your husband. His last letter to me began this way: 'Greetings.'"

o+o

ASCAP: Broadway veterans are delighted that Warner Bros. signed Jack Norworth, husband of the late Nora Bayes, to assist in the movie based on her career. Norworth wrote all her songs, but put her name—instead of his own—on this output, and so never has collected any of the royalties . . . CHARLES BOYER: Henri Diamant-Berger, the French movie producer, has set up an information center in Hollywood for DeGaulle's Fighting French. His bureau will assist any film company which might need material about DeGaulle's men . . . EQUITY: Alan Corelli, head of the New York Theater Authority, has been elected president of the United States Army Ambulance Corps.

JOHN RINGLING NORTH: "Hiwer," the famous elephant at the Vincennes Zoo—who is the oldest living resident of France—has lost 200 pounds since the Nazi occupation . . . COL. DARRYL ZANUCK: The Army's film division in Astoria will make more than 125 movie shorts in four languages this year. They will be training shorts, in Russian, Chinese, Spanish and English . . . GENE KELLY: Your mother went to "This Is the Army," to see your brother, Corpl. Fred, who dances in the show. Fred, who is one of the blackface chorus in the "Mandy" number, knew that she wouldn't recognize him. He attracted her attention by pulling off one glove.

RKO-Keith's

"The Pride of the Yankees," as was to have been expected, is going into extra innings at RKO-Keith's Theater.

In picturizing Paul Gallico's life story of Lou Gehrig, as adapted to the screen by Jo Swerling and Herman Mankiewicz, Samuel Goldwyn utilized baseball only as background for a character study in which, simplicity, courage and high qualities of mind and heart were the dominant factors. The picture's action—covering Gehrig's life from his kid days, through college and big years on the diamond to his death—therefore covers a variety of interests that extend far beyond the competitive rivalries of the national pastime.

Gary Cooper, in the title role; Teresa Wright, as his wife; Walter Brennan, Elsa Janssen, Ludwig Stossel and Dan Duryea do sterling work in the principal roles, with the flavor of the big leagues imparted to the biography by the presence of Babe Ruth, Bill Dickey, Bob Meusel, Mark Koenig and other baseball veterans playing themselves, with Bill Stern announcing from the press box.

District Recreation Board Gets 14 Sites For Playgrounds Under Expanded Program

Sites for 14 new playground and recreation areas were turned over to the District Recreation Board by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday at the request of the District Commissioners.

The sites acquired under the Capper-Cramton Act, had been held for the District by the Park and Planning Commission, but were released to the Recreation Board as another step in the program to centralize the District's recreational administration.

Prints of the boundaries of the properties, and general development plans for each were turned over to Milo Christiansen, District Recreation Superintendent. The plots thus transferred are:

Fort Reno Recreation Center, in the vicinity of Chesapeake Street and Nebraska Avenue and Fessenden Street and Reno Road Northwest.

Friendship Playground, east of Forty-fifth Street between Van Ness and Warren Streets Northwest.

Trinidad Recreation Center, north of Childress Street between Trinidad Avenue and Holbrook Street Northeast.

Abbott Playground, in the vicinity of Sixth and Penn Streets adjoining Brentwood Park Northeast.

Hillcrest Recreation, east of Thirtieth Street between Alabama Avenue and Erie Street Southeast.

Fort Chaplin Recreation Center, in the vicinity of Texas Avenue and C Street Southeast.

Oxon Run Recreation Center, between Mississippi and Valley Avenues and Fourth and Sixth Streets Southeast.

Congress Heights Playground, south of Alabama Avenue and east of Randle Place Southeast.

Barry Farms Playground, west of Nichols Avenue, north of Sumner Road Southeast.

D. C. Man's Ideas For Sailor Clubs Accepted by U. S.

Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping Administrator, yesterday announced inauguration of the United Seamen's Service to provide clubhouses and recreational facilities for American seamen in principal ports of this country and in "certain foreign ports."

"The need for such an organization has been expressed by the seamen themselves," Admiral Land said. Plans for the United Seamen's Service evolved from a suggestion submitted originally by Joseph Davidson of Washington, Admiral Land said, as "his personal contribution to the war effort and merchant seamen's welfare."

Henry J. Kaiser, the West Coast shipbuilder, will be chairman of the service's board of directors, Admiral Land announced, and in charge of raising a fund of approximately five million dollars for the project from shipbuilding concerns, ship operators, maritime labor unions and seamen welfare sources.

United Seamen's Service Clubs to be set up in existing facilities and expanded, will provide canteen service, motion pictures, radio music, and temporary housing facilities.

PRATT & WHITNEY CONGRATULATES CHEVROLET
on its record production of airplane engines for victory

PRATT & WHITNEY AIRCRAFT
DIVISION OF UNITED AIRCRAFT CORPORATION
EAST HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, U.S.A.
June 6, 1942
Mr. M. E. Coyle, General Manager
Chevrolet Motor Division
General Motors Corporation
Detroit, Michigan
Dear Mr. Coyle:
Our liaison engineer tells me that Pratt & Whitney engines were rolling off your assembly line with increasing speed during the month of May - just ten months after we first discussed the possibility of Chevrolet manufacturing these engines under license. This is a record which we believe has not been equalled and we offer our sincere congratulations on your outstanding achievement.
The writing of such a brilliant chapter in the war effort is a tribute to the enthusiasm, open-mindedness and competence with which Chevrolet tackled the job and is seeing it through.
I speak for our whole organization when I tell you that we are proud to have Chevrolet teamed up with us in this vital task.
Sincerely,
H. M. Horner
General Manager

Mr. H. M. Horner
General Manager
Pratt & Whitney Aircraft
Hartford, Connecticut
Dear Mr. Horner:
While we in Chevrolet are gratified by the progress we have made in producing Pratt & Whitney engines, your letter of June 6th gives us too much credit. Only the splendid co-operation we have had from every department of your organization made this record possible.
Chevrolet was requested to participate in this project at a very late date. Your Company had been required to increase your schedule importantly and was also assisting other contractors to plan their production program.
Regardless of your own heavy obligations, you gave us every assistance in your production technique, layout of your plants, machine capacities, drawings and blueprints, and most importantly, in preliminary training of our men. All this was done willingly and courteously. We consider it a privilege to be associated with you in this work.
Sincerely,
General Manager

Close, consistent, wholehearted teamwork between Pratt & Whitney, the Army Air Corps and Chevrolet has made possible the outstanding production record referred to in the letters reproduced above: : : : It is just such cooperative effort that will enable us to attain the objective we so strongly desire—the winning of this war.

Boys For The Farms

A way to overcome the shortage of farm labor this harvest time has been worked out in Montgomery County which might well be copied elsewhere. Early this year the AWVS, under its Montgomery County representative, Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, foreseeing difficulty on the farms, formulated a scheme for mobilizing the high school boys of the district. The idea was taken up enthusiastically by other organizations: the schools, the United States Labor Employment Service, the public health authorities, and the commissioners of Montgomery County under the chairmanship of Mr. Earl Hampton. The volunteers, who are between 14 and 17, were physically examined for their physical fitness. Montgomery County opened the public schools for their accommodation, and provided breakfast and supper. The farmers, of course, were only too grateful to avail themselves of such help in bringing in the crops. They paid the boys 25 cents an hour. According to all reports, the experiment has been a conspicuous success. If other counties had been as forehanded as Montgomery County, there possibly would not now be the outcry from the farm belt (and the country at large) upon which we commented on Wednesday.

Joint Commander

James B. Reston of the New York Times did a good valedictory reporting job for the New York Times before going to London to take up his duty as head of the London office of OWI. He brought out into the open all the difficulties that are still clogging unity of action among the Allies. There is the continuing failure on both sides of the Atlantic to match material with moral support of the unified command principle. This is a failure which may be partially explained by the practical difficulties of coordinating both countries' war production with over-all military strategy. To be sure, these are very great. And we shall probably see more evidence of those difficulties in the immediate future—when it will become necessary, because of the raw materials crisis, to review production prospects and to make new decisions.

For our own good, however, it ought to be acknowledged right now that production difficulties, however great, appear easier of solution than the difficulties involved in formulating over-all military strategy. Those difficulties are more personal. Joint military direction of the war is, whether or not we admit it, a political problem in the first instance, entailing consideration of factors that are quite divorced from the technical business of running the war. Yet the tendency seems to be to think that, as in the last war, the problem is unavoidable among democratic allies.

Indeed, the disturbing implication today, as Mr. Reston points out, is that in spite of the lesson of administrative conflict in the last war, there seems to be an almost fatalistic official acceptance of the notion that the Allies must go through even darker days before effectual establishment of the unified command principle. This, to say the least, does not make sense. We are confronted by the urgency of opening a second land front as quickly as is militarily practicable. Yet it has apparently not even been decided how the American forces are to operate in the British Isles.

The subject is, of course, up for consideration. But at this late date, in the light of the obvious advantages of a truly unified command, it certainly ought not to be a major political obstacle to concerted action. Clearly we need a joint high command in London with sufficient authority not only to decide how the British and American forces there are to be used, but also to plan over-all military strategy for the European theater. There is no such command at present. Instead, we have the Combined Chiefs of Staff Commission here in Washington, with its British members acting as the delegates of their superiors in London.

This, we submit, makes for administrative delays which neither this country nor Britain can afford. So far as the Nazis are concerned, there could be no more convincing demonstration of the probability of a second land front in Europe than for this country and Britain to surmount political obstacles which the Nazis are perfectly well aware of, and to get on with the business of deciding who is to command Anglo-American operations in Europe.

India On The Eve

The working committee of the All-India Congress Party has adopted a resolution demanding "withdrawal of British power so as to enable India to become an ally of the United Nations and fight aggressors." The British are given a week to comply, with the implied threat that if they refuse a civil disobedience movement will be launched.

The language of this ultimatum is very revealing. On the one hand it indicates that since the recent Wardha conference there has been no change in the attitude of the Congress Party leaders toward the desirability of immediate independence for India. But, on the other hand, the phrasing of the resolution suggests that at least some of the members of that party are now becoming perturbed over the growing tendency in United Nations countries to identify the Congress group as witting or unwitting accomplices of the Axis.

This view has been given great impetus by the publication of Mohandas Gandhi's original independence resolution. This showed that the holy man was so ignorant of the most elementary facts about the world situation—or so determined to close his eyes to them—that he was ready to propose that "if India were freed, her first step would probably be to negotiate with Japan." The British got hold of this document in a raid on the Congress Party's headquarters at Allahabad. Now Gandhi seeks to explain it away by saying that he was only establishing a bargaining position. But in disproof of this contention, there is the fact that the working committee's chairman announced that "there was practically no difference between the two drafts," that is, between Gandhi's draft and the one ultimately approved.

It is thus fair to assume that when the working committee speaks of an independent India becoming "an ally of the United Nations" and then being ready to "fight aggressors," its definition of the terms "ally" and "fight" are not the same as ours. They could only be the same if the committee were prepared to repudiate Gandhi instead of being, as is the case today, only the willing or unwilling mouthpiece of the mahatma. In other words, the text of the resolution suggests that the committee is only reflecting an uneasy conscience or is deliberately trying to throw dust in the eyes of the world.

The fact of the matter is that Gandhi is prepared to sacrifice India, India's independence, the United Nations, the Congress Party itself, in order to test out his doctrine of nonviolence. "India," he said in his draft resolution, "will attain her freedom through her nonviolent strength and will retain it likewise." This, of course, flies in the face of reality. The only hope India has of achieving her independence is through a victory of the United Nations. If the United Nations are defeated her hope of freedom will perforce go aglimmering. Many Indians, including members of the Congress Party, realize this, and that is why they have been restive under Gandhi's newly established leadership.

Some of them who are not yet prepared to break away from him—as did C. R. Rajagopalachari, a former Congress prime minister of Madras—comfort themselves, however, with the belief that if independence were immediately achieved, India would actually go about organizing her defense against invasion in a practical manner. But they are the victims of an illusion. This is clearly not what Gandhi has in mind. His course would doom India to internal chaos and ultimately to external slavery. Under existing circumstances his theory regarding the efficacy of nonviolence would undoubtedly result in fearful bloodletting and destruction. But Gandhi does not care—so long as this theory is tried. Great Britain, however, would be remiss to her obligations to the people of India, to the United Nations and to herself, if she bowed the knee to the Congress Party.

A group of American liberals headed by Herbert Agar have pointed out in an appeal to the Congress Party—prepared in advance of the British disclosures—that freedom is indivisible. Of course, it is. A free India cannot exist outside the framework of a free world and a free world can only be created after the Axis has been destroyed. In joining forces with the United Nations, India would not be sacrificing her freedom but would be only making its achievement possible. This thought is perceptible, though as through a fog, in the resolution of the Congress working committee. It may mark the dawning of realism in its ranks, but, with the enemy knocking at India's gate, the hour grows late.

One Up On Hitler

Perhaps the least important aspect of the decentralization of the Ordnance Department is that it will relieve the congestion in this neighborhood. That is important, but what is of far more significance is that the order is a demonstration of the vigorous policy inaugurated by the new chief of ordnance, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, jr. As his recent address at Salisbury, N. C., testified, General Campbell sees the need of relating ordnance intimately with our war factories. Hitherto the contractors have had to come to Washington, where they have had to kick their heels, and await the convenience of the War Department's procurement officials. That has meant the loss of valuable time when every minute counts in translating orders into work. General Campbell, realizing that time is more important than amour propre, accordingly has sent ordnance to the factories. That is to say, he has appointed subsidiary but autonomous departments in the main industrial centers. In Detroit, for example, there is now a branch ordnance set up for the Ordnance Department, and Col. A. R. Glancy, formerly president of the Pontiac Motor Co., is now head of the Detroit office with the rank of deputy chief of ordnance.

What is likewise required is that the Ordnance Department shall be as closely related to the using arm in the field. Technological improvement of the weapons of warfare is going on constantly. It is therefore vital that the Department be told instantly whenever a new weapon appears on the battlefield and whenever a new idea is suggested by actual tactical operations. No man realizes this better than General Campbell. He is on record as believing that on the day of victory all weapons will be much different from the ones in use today. But we cannot wait for the enemy to show us the way; we must show him—by keeping a model ahead. That is General Campbell's ambition. To keep America ahead of the game the ordnance head has arranged both for interchange of technical information among the United Nations and for constant visits by ordnance experts to the scenes of action. It is evident that under the new regime both the cobwebs and the fossils have been cleaned out of our Ordnance Department.

Why Delay?

Introduction of Nation-wide gasoline rationing as a rubber conservation measure has been delayed—presumably because the President dislikes the idea. Perhaps his attitude will change after the elections are over. Meantime, however, a highly critical fuel oil situation is developing in this part of the country which admits of no pre-election dawdling. Remedial action must be taken at once in order to avoid grave discomfort and maybe real suffering from cold during the coming winter.

As an emergency measure 5000 railway tank cars are to be diverted from the Midwest to transport oil into the eastern area. It is expected that this shift will create limited oil and gas shortages in unrationed States east of the Mississippi River, and possibly result in an extension of the rationed area on a restricted basis. But even with additions to eastern oil supplies in prospect, oil requirements cannot be fully met. In fact, unless weather and other conditions are exceptionally favorable, coupon rationing of fuel oil is likely to come. Warnings have also gone forth that gasoline consumption may have to be cut another 25 per cent in order to release still more rail equipment for hauling fuel oil.

Quite apart from the paramount need of saving rubber, it is essential for the sake of public morale that the sacrifices and hardships resulting from gas and oil shortages be shared by all sections of the country. The eastern States have been exceptionally hard hit, largely for reasons beyond control. But there is a limit to what the public will stand without protest if there is a suspicion of unfair treatment. Without doubt the difficulties of enforcing gas rationing in the East are increasing, due to a widespread belief that Nation-wide rationing would greatly relieve conditions in this area, as regards both gas and fuel oil. We are unable to say to what extent this opinion is justified, since experts disagree on the subject. But whether right or wrong, the opinion persists and strengthens an otherwise very strong case for prompt resort to Nation-wide gas rationing.

WONDER OF RAIN

It is raining tonight in the long valley of the Ohio:
A straight-down rain, quiet but strong in the darkness.
And the new corn is glad, and the trees exult, and the pastures,
After the brazen day, after the fierceness of sunlight.
No wind drives the clouds, no thunder speaks, and no lightning
Flares in the caverns of heaven. The rain that set in at twilight
Is answering prayers in the dreamful night of the valley.
Under the roofs that resound with the chant of its falling
Men and women wake and lie in the darkness and listen
And think of their fields and their gardens, their creeks and their cisterns,
Their apple trees and their cattle, their dead on the hill lying quiet
Under the spell of the rain, the good rain falling.

A Stroke That Would Get Us Somewhere!

Letters To The Editor

Transportation Facts

Being a newcomer from the Southwest, I particularly notice the crowded conditions. We people who work at the Government offices are all alike. Each of us waits until the last minute before leaving home to catch the street car or bus for work. Many of us do not like to ride crowded. A solution to this would be to start 30 to 45 minutes earlier. Have you ever noticed the streetcars and buses early in the morning? They are running as usual, yet very few people are riding.

Then, too, we passengers must be very annoying to the drivers. Some times when getting on the bus, notice how we take about three steps toward the rear, then stop. We are educated people, so why not act like it. Without a word being said we should go quickly to the rear. When the driver says: "Back behind the white line" or "All the way to the rear, please," he simply is trying to conform with the law in the first case and to make it more comfortable for all in the latter. Suppose we were standing on the curb and the driver passed us by because he did not want to crowd the passengers already on the bus. What would be our reaction? We would be furious.

During the rush hours have you seen the buses and streetcars lined up as thick as they could be, showing that someone is working on our problems? As you already know, new buses or street cars cannot be obtained simply by putting in a requisition. Think what a job it is, planning the routes for the buses; gasoline rationing; increased population and peak traffic on the various routes. Would you want it?

The Capital Transit Co. has a map of Washington with each of the bus and streetcar routes marked. Why not learn these routes? Many times you can arrive at your destination over a different route in the same length of time and be very much less crowded.

Let's put a little of this blame on ourselves, the passengers. We can all make it better with just a little cooperation. The drivers would appreciate it, I know.

Advance Information

The objects and purposes of the Price-Fixing Act are, among others, expressly declared to be the prevention of profiteering and excessive prices during the emergency.

Why, then, one may well ask, does Mr. Henderson always ballyhoo and propagandize his proposed and intended actions for days, weeks and even months in advance of official action looking to the rationing and price-fixing for commodities? Can it be intended that profiteers, chiselers and hoarders shall have their field days in advance of official action? Certainly, Henderson's manner of operation tends to that very end. Perhaps your readers would find some interest in this matter.

It certainly looks as though the official handling of price-fixing and rationing of sugar, coffee, tea, meats and numerous other commodities has been marked by very poor judgment, to say the least; and that there are indications that huge profits have been reaped by dealers and others who have had advance information.

If Mr. Henderson doubts these suggestions, his army of snoops, sleuths and investigators will find milk prices and the prices of other things fertile fields for work and action, in Washington as well as elsewhere.

DISGUSTED.

Washington, Aug. 2.

A Reply From Secretary Wickard

I am sure that The Washington Post did not mean to be unfair in its editorial of July 27 entitled "Easy Way." Consequently, I am writing you this letter to provide certain information which I do not believe you had at the time the editorial appeared.

The burden of your argument was to the effect that the Secretary of Agriculture could halt the increase in livestock prices if he so desired (and thereby keep the small meat packer in business), but instead the Secretary chose to subsidize the small meat packers so that livestock prices would go higher. You also state that "The Department of Agriculture has been adding to the troubles of OPA by paying prices above ceiling levels for meats purchased for lend-lease accounts."

To say as was stated in the editorial that "Mr. Wickard could, if he would, check the rise of livestock prices" is incorrect. The power to establish ceiling prices is in OPA. To be sure, any action toward establishing ceiling prices of livestock would require the concurrence of the Secretary of Agriculture. As a matter of fact, I proposed such ceilings some months ago. It was my feeling at that time that if ceilings could be established on live animals OPA could then determine the fair margins necessary to carry out the processes of trade from that point to the consumer of meat products. This, however, did not fit into OPA's over-all plan of fixing the ceilings at the retail and wholesale level. It chose that approach and any attempt now to fix general ceilings on the price of live animals would serve either to squeeze out packers working on a small margin or to increase beyond any justification the profits of those operating on wider margins. Also it should be borne in mind that the placing of ceilings on live hogs would immediately call for allocation of the hog supply among packers on some historical basis. In some cases that would be likely to mean telling farmers to which packers they could sell and almost certainly it would mean allocation of pork products among meat dealers. Everything considered, the establishment of individual packer and dealer ceilings would involve such complicated problems of allocation as among packers and dealers in live animals that it could not possibly have any beneficial effect for weeks and possibly months. In the meantime the heavy flow of hogs to the slaughter houses would have started and there can be little doubt that when this bumper crop of hogs begins to go to slaughter, the present squeeze between live animals and ceiling meat prices will be lifted from the packers. I have had no request from OPA to concur in ceilings on live hogs.

In considering this whole problem it should also be kept in mind that late summer is annually the period of short marketings and high prices for hogs. Hogs coming to market this time of year rightfully demand a higher price; they are high-cost hogs, having been farrowed in cold weather and fed on relatively high cost feeds. Because supplies of pork are normally low in late summer, this period is always the period of narrowest packer margins.

In other words, the situation in which we find ourselveh is normal except for the tremendous demands being made upon our meat supplies.

I am very confident that when the huge crop of hogs begins to go to market this fall most of the present difficulties arising from the fact that we have unusually heavy demands for meat in a low supply season will be overcome. At the same time, however, new problems will arise—particularly the problem of handling this record crop. To put it mildly, we shall need all the slaughter house facilities available. There are 18½ million more pigs being farrowed this year than ever before, you know. We are, therefore, taking steps to keep in business some packers who might be squeezed out by the current seasonal conditions. We propose to enable them to stay in business by commissioning them to do custom packing for the Government account until such time as the seasonal condition corrects itself, so that their facilities will still be available when the heavy flow of hogs begins this fall. To say that we are taking this action "For the sake of increasing the profits of the livestock growers" is to misconstrue the situation entirely. We are taking this action in order to maintain a vital wartime food processing industry. We are taking this action in behalf of the total public interest, not just producer interest.

In setting its ceilings for meat prices at the wholesale level, OPA took into account the fact that meat purchased for Lend-Lease shipment abroad requires special selection, cure, processing, and packaging, and is thus a more expensive product. OPA, therefore, set a higher ceiling for meats purchased for Lend-Lease account than for meat in the domestic market. This enabled us to procure the large quantities of the high-cost product needed for Lend-Lease. The Agricultural Marketing Administration has never paid any prices above the ceilings set by OPA for such meat. Now, for the time being, we believe that we can procure the meat needed for Lend-Lease at even lower prices than the ceilings established by OPA and we have accordingly announced our intention to purchase at below ceiling prices. Frankly, however, we should be apprehensive if we did not know that it is still possible, when and if necessary, to raise the prices again within the limitations established by OPA. Let me emphasize that ceilings on our Lend-Lease purchases were fixed by OPA.

As The Post has remarked, neither the Department of Agriculture nor OPA can prevent some shortages from arising when supplies are low and demand heavy. We shall, however, continue to take every step which we feel justifiable to alleviate such conditions while, at the same time, lending every effort to sustain the price ceilings' phase of the President's economic program announced last April.

CLAUDE R. WICKARD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

Washington, Aug. 1.

Editor's Note: We are glad to publish Secretary Wickard's explanation of his preference for subsidizing small meat packers as an alternative to setting ceiling prices for livestock. Regardless of previous wishes, it is evident that Mr. Wickard is now opposed to any move to set a ceiling on livestock prices. Since the Price Administrator cannot under the price control act take any action with respect to any agricultural commodity without the prior approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, it appears to us to be quibbling with words to maintain that "the power to establish ceiling prices is in OPA."

The Post Impressionist

Wolves Roam Only At Night

It is a well-known fact that there are numerous wolves around, but it nevertheless was somewhat of a shock to Henry to learn that he was looked upon (at least by some) as one of that dangerous group of predatory males.

It likewise was something of a lift. Henry, you see, is a steady suburban householder out in Virginia, husband of a beautiful wife and father of two lovely daughters and a son who seems to be shaping up O. K. Recently, at an early age, Henry became a grandfather which he sometimes felt put a sort of mark upon him. Add to these the fact that his favorite recreations are nursing a bed of herbs and keeping the weeds out of the flower borders, and you can readily understand how it might well have given Henry a lift to be considered a wolf.

Just the same, it left him a little nonplussed, because after all he was only trying to be a good citizen and do what the newspapers said.

It started two or three weeks ago when Henry and Marian, his wife, both of whom work for the Government, were driving to work along Lee Boulevard.

"I wonder," said Marian, "if we ought not ask someone to ride with us? With the gasoline shortage and the tire shortage and so many people having to ride buses, and all, it seems that as long as we have a B-3 card we ought to share our car. Maybe it will help a little to win the war."

"Good idea!" Henry agreed. "Let's pick up someone."

That morning they picked up a young first lieutenant in the Signal Corps, who was very glad to be dropped at the War Department on Constitution Avenue. It was convenient, too, since Henry and Marian parked nearby.

The next morning they picked up a girl who likewise was pleased, since she worked at the Navy Department on Constitution Avenue.

The third day it was a young matron who worked at WPB, and she was extremely grateful, because a jammed bus had just sailed right by her and the next bus would have made her late to work.

Henry and Marian were much set up because for three days in a row they had distinctly contributed to the war effort by bringing into work three people—maybe "key people," said Marian—in the war machine.

On the fourth day Marian stayed home to do some of the things the working wife somehow can't find time to do otherwise, and Henry drove into town alone. Without Marian by his side, he was a little timid, but he decided to keep on being a good citizen.

The first person waiting alone by the boulevard was an elderly woman. Henry swung the car to the side of the road, gallantly opened the door, and said: "I'm going to the War Department. May I give you a lift?"

The woman shrank back. She managed a frightened "No, thank you," and turned away.

Henry smiled understandingly, closed the door, let the clutch in too quickly and leaped away. "As if I would've hurt her!" he muttered.

The next one he tackled was a man.

"Sorry," said the man. "I'm waiting for a friend."

Henry felt a little rebuffed, but he nodded and smiled, and refused to be discouraged. A moment later he sighted a young woman. He slowed down to 3 miles an hour, released the door catch, and with a pleasant (but, he hoped, not leering) smile inquired: "War Department?"

The girl looked startled and replied (Henry swears to this): "No! Not that!"

Henry was startled, too. As he drove away he wondered: Do they all think I'm on the loose? Well, I'll give 'em one more chance.

Just then he saw another lonely young lady standing in the hot sun. This time he didn't slow up so sharply; he cut his speed to 7 miles an hour, swerved close, and yelled: "War Department?"

The girl turned her head away, her silly chin at an angle of extreme dignity.

Henry was now getting angry, and also he was more than halfway to town. He had about decided to ride on to work in lonesome grandeur, when he saw a man with a lunchbox waiting for a bus. Well, he thought, I'll give this guy a try. So he stopped and repeated the formula, but without much enthusiasm: "War Department?"

"Sure thing!" said the man. "That'll be swell! Thanks a lot!"

Henry's heart leaped. His efforts to be a good citizen were appreciated after all. The man got in and they chatted amiably of this and that for about a mile. As they approached the rear entrance to Fort Myer, Henry inquired by way of making talk: "Do you work at the Munitions Building or at the new War building on Twenty-first Street?"

"Neither," replied the passenger. "The one down on Columbia Pike. Isn't that where you——"

"Gosh!" exclaimed Henry. "I never thought——"

"Funny," said the passenger. "When anybody says War Department, I always think of the place where I work."

"Perfectly natural," said Henry. "I always think of the ones in town."

"Well, I'm sorry," said the passenger. "Just let me out——"

"Of course not!" said Henry grandly. "It's not far down there. I'll just take you down."

He swung the car with an air through Fort Myer gate, where his passenger's War Department identification admitted them, and they wound bumpily around behind Arlington Cemetery.

At Ridge Road, the first traffic light, the passenger suggested: "Let me out here. It's just a short walk from here, and you can go up the Ridge Road to the Memorial Bridge. It'll save you a lot of time compared to going over the highway bridge."

"Gee, that's swell!" said Henry fervently, and he meant it; "thanks a lot!"

"That's all right," responded the passenger graciously. "Thank you. So long."

"So long," said Henry pleasantly.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Sleepwalking—The Latest Model

THERE ARE now in circulation a number of catchphrases which men who are up to their job would never think of using until they had first sweated blood to avoid them. One of them is the "either - this - or - that" formula. Another is the formula which says: "You can't fight today's war with tomorrow's weapons." We shall not go far wrong if we adopt a strong prejudice and insist that the resort to either of these formulae is a good reason for asking whether the man who uses them is not walking in his sleep.

LIPPMANN

For, except in special cases, he is almost certainly the 1942 model of the man who in 1940 wanted to "superimpose" the armament program on normal business, and in 1941 did not think civilian industry could be converted to war.

THE VICE of the either-this-or-that formula—either bomber-or-cargo planes, either-merchant ships-or-escorts—is that it takes for granted a fundamental fact which is not true. It assumes that we are just about at the limit of our industrial mobilization: that we are near the peak of efficiency in the plants, that the flow of materials is effectively organized, that rigorous economy is being practiced, and that the civilian population has made all the sacrifices that can be asked of it. It assumes, in other words, so successful and so complete a mobilization of the American economy that nothing more can be squeezed out of it. Only when that stage has been reached, do we have to admit without searching inquiry that a new proposal is a case of either-this-or-that.

But in our present stage of partial mobilization we do not even really know how much fat and how much slack there is to draw upon. Therefore, before we can let anyone say that something can't be done because there isn't enough of something or other, we shall not be unreasonable if we insist that he step aside and let someone else try who has a tougher mind and a stouter heart. For under present circumstances the either-this-or-that formula is a self-justifying phrase for soft leadership, tepid administration, taking it easy and not sticking one's neck out.

THE FIRST-RATE men in Washington never use this catchphrase because they know only too well that we are only at the beginning of a thoroughgoing mobilization; that we have barely begun to scrape and drive and squeeze anybody or anything as our enemies scrape and drive and squeeze themselves. No doubt we are already getting immense results out of our immense resources. But we are not getting anything like what we could get or what we shall have to get before the end of this struggle is even in sight.

The armed services, the War Production Board, and the civilians are still in the mental and moral atmosphere of abundance. We are only at the beginning of a full-scale effort to simplify the military requirements. We have scarcely begun, as the Higgins testimony about steel discloses, to take control of the supply of materials. As civilians we are still being coddled to a degree which makes it positively embarrassing to look our fighting men in the face. We are told that we should conserve rubber, tin, fats, scrap, but nobody is insisting that we conserve anything, and nobody has as yet really taken the trouble to see that it is collected if we do.

It is in these margins of luxury and slackness and waste, not in the essential weapons we are already making, that we must first look for the surplus to make the extra weapons that we need.

THE FORMULA that you can't fight today's war with tomorrow's weapons is an even more dangerous symptom of sleepwalking. The plain truth is that everybody is fighting today's war with the weapons of yesterday. The planes, guns, tanks, ships that are now in service were designed and put into production 12, 18, and even 24 months ago. It is the fact, of course, that what we decide to produce today will not reach the fighting front this season, that some of it may not reach the fighting front for quite some time to come. But that is precisely the reason why, in addition to doing the utmost with what we have today, we should also be doing the utmost today to have better weapons tomorrow. The very fact that it takes time to design and produce tomorrow's weapons is the most urgent of all reasons for starting now.

Certainly it takes judgment, as well as vision and audacity, to prepare today the right weapons for tomorrow. But that is just what it takes to win this war: sound judgment in men who have bold hearts and seeing minds. If men of that sort do not come to the top, if they are not pulled to the top by our leaders and pushed to the top by the people, we shall never get the initiative in this war. We shall always be surprised by the Japanese zero planes and Rommel's anti-tank equipment.

THIS SORT of thing is the layman's business in this war. It is not for us to say when or where the offensive blows shall be struck. It is not for us to choose the weapons for the fighting men. But it is our business to insist that we exploit to the limit our superior resources, instead of using them to obtain relatively mediocre results with comparatively small sacrifice. It is our business to insist that the way to use our advantages to win the war is to use the last ounce of our surplus to do the things that are unexpected and that our enemies cannot match. It is our business to clear a path through all the deadwood, the red tape, and the rubber stamps for the brave, the bold and the enterprising.

That is one of the chief functions of a free press in war time: to run interference for the men who can carry the ball.

The men who can carry the ball are the men who are preparing tomorrow's weapons, and tomorrow's tactics, and tomorrow's war plans today. The men who have been losing this war and will continue to lose it are the men who are now thinking up answers to the things our enemies made ready to do last year. They are the men who did not build the escort ships while the Germans were building their submarines, who did not build the cargo planes while the Japanese were encircling the Philippines and making ready to close the Burma Road. These are the same gentlemen who do not think it worth our while to prepare today the weapons of tomorrow's war.

After the War In England

By Drew Middleton

Wide World Staff Writer

Good Old Days Gone

London, Aug. 5.—War has altered the face of Britain but little, yet underneath the surface you can sense ideas and forces generated by the world struggle and submerged by an all-out war effort which will force widespread changes in postwar Britain.

This is the opinion of parsons, army officers, editors, teachers, politicians of the right, left and center, plus dozens of workers and fighters whom I have met throughout England.

Not one person believed a Communist government possible in postwar Britain. A member of Parliament of extremely conservative views said, "there's undoubtedly great admiration for Russia in this country but after the war we shall answer tendencies toward communism as we have before, by improving social and economic conditions."

Commercial System Changed

How much have the great institutions which support Britain altered during the war?

The most important, the industrial and commercial system, which is the keystone of the Empire, has changed and will change more.

The system of world trade on which Britain's commercial might rests was built under protection of undisputed naval supremacy in the nineteenth century. Still powerful in 1939 after surviving the first World War and battling the commercial empires of the United States and Germany, it has been hard hit by the war.

Britain delivers the goods—but in decreasing amounts. While she fights, raw materials which once fed her looms and forges are being bought by other nations. The peoples to whom she once sold everything from steam shovels to collars are buying elsewhere.

Of Britain's 22 best customers, ten either are fighting against Britain, have been overrun by the German armies or are inaccessible to British merchantmen.

These ten countries bought four hundred eighty three million dollars worth of goods in 1939.

But the damage to Britain's world trade system will extend into the post-war years. For great factories built to make plows for the Argentine are making machine guns for the army. Similarly, hundreds of other factories are making war products of little value in post-war trade.

Expansion of industry for war cannot be reversed overnight, and Britain probably would not be able to reintroduce export trade on a large scale immediately after the war even if all the world clamored for her products.

Good Old Days Gone

There was no nostalgia for "the good old days" before the war among the people with whom I talked on my latest journey through England. So far as they are concerned, prewar England is dead and "a good job too." Anyone who attempts to revive it won't get their votes.

People seemed tired of the social inequalities which they claim limit opportunity. A reform of the educational system is the remedy most people advocate, and they are watching R. A. Butler's planning on the board of education carefully. They have seen so many fine plans go awry.

I asked 20 people at random what change they wanted most in postwar England. Fifteen said "equal opportunities through equal education for all." Three said a general election, although most included this as a second choice (there hasn't been one since 1935), and two wanted nationalization of all heavy industry.

These people believed equal education would end the great invisible and powerful oligarchy which, linking men through public schools, families, clubs and universities, contrives to populate the main government offices.

The system was held responsible for many of the weaknesses of the government, especially what they called its "inability to see this as a modern war, and fight it both from a political and military standpoint."

"They're brave and kind, those people, but slow in the head," said one lad from a tank regiment. "They don't understand the world and they don't want to. They want to look back. Y'see up to now they've made it a governmental war instead of a people's war."

Rebellion Against Class Distinction

Many of the group known to the man in the street as "the old-school-tie bunch" urge mass education as hotly as any coal miner. They realize it will be necessary if Britain is to compete with the United States and Russia after the war. Then, too, the lack of good mechanics, engineers and air navigators is a result of the low standard of education, they claim.

There also are signs of rebellion against the symbols of class distinction. Men and women in uniform think it's silly to stand if the third class railroad carriages are filled and there are seats in the first class. So they walk in and take the first class seats, scandalizing ancient dames and country squires who like their democracy diluted.

"It's ridiculous during a war," said a pretty W. A. A. F. A Welsh infantryman from the coal fields said "it's ridiculous anytime."

"You know," he continued, "if ten years ago anyone had told me I'd be fighting for England I'd have laughed. Me, fighting for England. With our village just dead from want of work and ashamed of our idleness. We got the dole and damned little else. I was a commie then as hot as the rest.

"When the war came they gave back the jobs, but who knows if they'll continue after the war. What chance have my kids got in that sort of life? I'm fighting to beat Hitler but I'm fighting to beat people all over the world, maybe here, too, who want to deny us education, medical care and a chance to get on in the world."

Canadian Budget

By Janet R. Keith

Its Inequities Necessitate Adjustment

WHEN the first fire and smoke of Canada's history-making budget had cleared away, certain startling aspects of the new taxes began to appear. Even the cleverest government economists hadn't bargained for the complications that would set in when the incomes of the great middle class were severely hit.

First, married women left their jobs by the hundreds. This, at a time when the government is appealing for more and more women in industry, promised to have disastrous consequences. But the women argued with justification that they didn't see why they should work for nothing.

A typical case would work out this way. As the budget was presented, a woman who earned more than $660 a year became taxable and her husband lost his exemption as a married man. A married woman earning approximately $21 a week reaches a total of $660 in 31 weeks. At that point she has no taxes to pay. Her husband, as a married man, pays $13.20 in taxes. But if the wife continued to work for the other 21 weeks of the year she would be taxed $210 of the $444 she earned, and her husband's taxes would jump from $13.20 to $247. By working for the last five months of the year the wife would earn $444 and the family taxes increase by exactly $444. Why should she work five months for nothing?

Expenses Balance Incomes

Or, looking at it another way, women have additional expenses when they go out working. The new taxes were making it impossible for them to pay these expenses and still have anything left over. Take the case of a man earning $2500 whose wife earns $1000 a year. It costs his wife $12 a week, or approximately $600 a year, for a part-time maid, lunches and carfare, extra stockings, and laundry sent out. Added to these expenses was an increase of $347 in the family taxes because the wife has an income. Out of a gross income of $1000 the woman would have net earnings of $53.

Immediately after the budget presentation, the civil service began to lose many of its best clerks and stenographers; industry began to lose its steadiest workers. The finance minister had to do something about it. So he made a concession.

An amendment to the budget rules that for taxation purposes the woman earning over $660 will be treated as a single woman; her husband will be treated as a married man. It is hoped that this change will induce married women to stick to their jobs. "It's hard to say what the total reaction will be," said one large employer of labor, "the crisis will come with the first pay check deductions in September."

The single girls are the ones who will be kicking now. The finance minister expects that he will receive many complaining letters. "But we cannot help it. We have to get these married women to work and keep them at work. So we had to make the change."

Taxes Hurt Army Merit System

The budget had a strange effect on military promotions. "If our N. C. O.'s are misbehaving," said one Air Force officer jokingly, "we can always sober them by threatening them with a commission." The new taxes hit officers serving in Canada so hard that many of them were netting a smaller income than the N. C. O.'s.

A flight lieutenant in the Air Force, married with one child, would have an income of $2300 left after paying taxes of $900. A warrant officer, first class, in a similar category, nets over $2800. The officer would get part of his tax refunded after the war under the compulsory savings feature, but right now he has to bear the heavy expenses of uniforms, mess fees and social obligations.

In response to complaints from military officials that the merit system of promotion was being ruined, the finance minister amended the regulations slightly. The changes will ensure that the net income of a commissioned officer in any of the three services is not reduced below the average pay of a warrant officer. This will be achieved by exempting officers' subsistence allowance from taxation, up to a maximum of $1.70 a day. No single officer in the forces will have less than $1600 left after paying his taxes.

A special feature of the budget was that insurance premiums on policies already in force would be deductible from compulsory savings. Premiums on new policies would not be exempt. However, the new taxes are so steep that a young man getting married could hardly carry the load of insurance premiums on top of the full weight of taxes and compulsory savings. It has been found necessary to amend the rules so that new premiums up to $100 a year may be charged against compulsory savings. This ruling applies only to insurance "not more expensive than the ordinary life plan."

No longer is a person left with a fair-sized annuity in a comfortable position. A widow with an annuity of $10,000 will have to pay an income tax of $4575. Total successions duties levied against the estate amount to $22,000, payable in four yearly installments of $5500. Therefore the widow, instead of being "comfortably fixed," owes the government more money than she is getting for the first four years after her husband's death. Her hardship may be eased slightly by a Dominion law providing that succession duties may in some cases be deferred. But they cannot be canceled or reduced.

Defends New Measures

Married men have been quick to detect the fact that the percentage increase in their taxes is higher than that of single men. In all except the $2000 incomes, percentage tax increases are uniformly higher as family responsibilities increase. For instance, the percentage increase in taxes for the $4000 salary is 33 per cent for a single man, 42 per cent for a married man without children, 47 per cent for a man with one child, 48.5 per cent with two children, 46.7 per cent for three children, and 82.8 per cent with 4 children.

In defending the new budget the finance minister has pointed out that a table of percentage increases does not give the true picture. "If you are taxing a man at the rate of 10 per cent and you raise his income tax by 50 per cent you are taxing him at the rate of 15 per cent. But if you are already taxing him at the rate of 70 per cent and you increase his rate by 50 per cent, you are taxing him at the rate of 105 per cent, which is impossible and absurd. The only fair way is to express the increase in tax as a percentage of this year's net income. If the increase in tax which we all have to pay rises in proportion, expressed as a ratio of our net income, then we have a real progressive increase. Actually, we have increased the amount of tax more on the single man than we have on the married man."

Canadians were surprised to discover that their taxes are well above those of Britain in many income groups and considerably higher than those favored by the Ways and Means Committee of Congress in the United States. In the $1000 class a single man will pay $172 in Canada, $177 in Britain, $84 in the United States; a man earning $2000 will pay $681 in Canada, $594 in Britain; $258 in the United States; a man with a $5000 income will pay $2,128 in Canada, $1,733 in Britain, and $875 in the United States.

Aside from the few groups who have secured amendments to prevent special hardship, the Canadian people are accepting without protest the prospect of a sharp drop in living standards. In spite of arguments and appeals from members of Parliament during the budget debate, Finance Minister Ilsley stood his ground. In the main the budget was put through the House of Commons just as it was first presented. The people of Canada, resigned to the inevitable, are bracing themselves for September when almost every pay-check in the nation will be substantially slimmer.

The Once Over

Dear Harriet—

Tell me more about life in the WAACS. I love it. The best news you sent me is that there is a complete blackout on dates with any officers or men at the camp. I trust you but I know how lonesome life in uniform can get.

• • • •

This is just a rush letter, so please excuse it being so short. I hear we are going to get busy on a second front witch is okay by me provided I use the same innoculashuns I got on my first front. I bet some of the women in the WAACS are so soar at being ordered around so much that they would make good fighters in commando raids right now.

Adois and lots of love,
OSCAR.

P. S.—I hear training has advanced with you girls so far that only 25 per cent of the time is taken out by cries of "Wait a minute. Where's my handbag?"

• • • •

Dear Oscar—

It is a good thing I know you are just joking you big twirp. Never mind about those handbags. We got over worrying about them the first week. I made one big discovery out here. It's true that there is such an hour as 5:30 a. m. You told me so, but I didn't believe it.

• • • •

Life is funny. The birds used to wake me up mornings. Now I wake the birds up. I am getting used to it now. But some of the girls still think the bugle is all in fun. There is one woman here who comes from high society. She has slept late all her life. So far we have not been able to get her up before 9 and even then we have had to use a bucket of cold water.

• • • •

There was a lot of excitement here the other day. We heard a rumor that Oveta Culp Hobby had breakfast in bed. A riot was avoided by the prompt discovery it was enemy propaganda.

• • • •

Do you get sick on the cafeteria plan? I do. And the longer I am here the more I am convinced that no man knows how to cook eggs. They look like they had been cooked, recooked and then disguised to hide the responsibility. They are getting up a female band. We are short a sousaphone and a couple of slide trombones. That's what comes of neglecting my musical education.

• • • •

Why music? There's nobody to dance with. It is a tough life, big boy. The moon out here is the biggest I ever saw but what of it? And the dance music on my portable radio comes through clearer than ever, worse luck. I hope you have the same complaints. This is a war in which we should all suffer alike.

• • • •

What we girls miss most is the polite attentions men pay to us in civilian life but forget entirely in the Army. As Jennie Winble said just now it would be so lovely if some man would step forward when we are drilling in the hot sun and say "Pardon me, but could I do this for you?"

Believe it or not, it's weeks since a man offered to light my cigarette or even asked if I would like his seat. Just hardening us up, probably. All the men in the world are soer at Hitler and now we're making all the women sore at him.

I must close now darling.

Dutch Await Call

By the Associated Press

War Tide Is Turning, Premier Declares

London, Aug. 5.—Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy of the Dutch government-in-exile told his people in the German-occupied Netherlands tonight that the war tide is starting to turn and urged them to "await with wise patience the moment when the call comes from here, not only to take a passive but also an active part" in possible second front operations against the Nazis.

The strategic picture of the war has improved, he declared in a radio appeal as Allied chieftains were reported reviewing alternatives to a mass invasion of the continent.

The Dutch premier cited these reasons for saying that the tide of war is beginning to turn in favor of the United Nations:

1. Air superiority, with heavy bombardments upon war centers which are but a prelude to what will follow.

2. Although the attacking powers of Germany and Japan are far from exhausted, their limits are becoming clear.

3. The military rise of the United States.

British and United States service chiefs, meanwhile, sought a swifter means of relieving the desperate Russian war situation than by R. A. F. bombing offensives.

The first sea lord, Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, master of the Royal Navy, has delegated part of his duties to Admiral Sir Charles Kennedy-Purvis in order to devote more time to plans and operations of the fleet, whose light craft are scouting the waters off the invasion coast of France after a series of sharp battles.

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today that Kennedy-Purvis had been appointed deputy first sea lord and assumed his duties July 29.

Invasion of the continent obviously would be difficult because of a lack of shipping.

Every alternative undoubtedly is being discussed, however. These, it was said, possibly include a limited diversion at some point where the German advantage of interior lines of communication would be slight, and an attempt to seize a bridgehead somewhere on the continental coast and hold it for subsequent exploitation by British and American armies.

Parliament recessed today after being assured by Sir Stafford Cripps, spokesman for Prime Minister Churchill, that it would be recalled if an "unexpected situation" developed.

Writer Tells of Mighty Nazi Coast Defenses

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 5 (AP).—One of a party of neutral journalists taken by the Germans on a tour of the occupied Channel coast told today of "mighty fortications of concerte and iron" prepared by Nazis against any Allied invasion of Europe.

These, the newspaperman said in a dispatch to the Zurich Dis Tat, are built in series, one behind the other.

The correspondent said supply bases for the occupation forces were placed close to the front and there were underground airdromes for bombers and fighters.

A Stockholm report to the Basler National Zeitung said that the German occupation forces in Norway were building extensive defense works on the Lofoten Islands of northern Norway—along the Allied route to Russian Arctic ports—in order to make "a single tremendous bridgehead in Norway together with the fortifications in other Norwegian coastal districts."

Clarification of Atlantic Charter Urged in London

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 5.—Answering a statement by Lord Bennett that the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic Charter is "nothing more than the expressions of hopes and aspirations on the part of the President of the United States and our Prime Minister," Lord Chancellor Viscount Simon declared today British-American cooperation is "the best hope for the world."

He added that the charter was really "a pledge of cooperation not only in framing plans for peace but in carrying them out. If that is achieved, there is no place in history too high to put this document." The Atlantic Charter was announced last August 14.

The debate was begun by Lord Davies, who urged establishment now of an interallied commission to study the implications of the Atlantic Charter and the British-Russian Treaty.

Lord Bennett said that in the United States legislation giving force to the operation of the charter declarations could only become effective after Senate approval.

That was why there was a treaty with Russia but not with the United States, he said, because it was by no means certain that the result might not be the same as when President Wilson gave his approval to the League of Nations.

Recalling the fate of Wilson's 14 points, to which the Atlantic Charter has been likened, Lord Bennett added, "nothing could be more fatal than to make a declaration of views with respect to peace and then have our enemies, defeated, saying they relied upon statements which we made but to which we could not give effect because they were our declarations and not the declarations of everyone concerned with us.

"We must be careful not to attach too much importance to speeches made by public men in the United States on matters of this kind.

"Here the Prime Minister could bind the government and country or else go out of office in the endeavor to give effect to his conclusions. In the United States this is not so."

U. S. Income Hits 52 Billions In First Six Months of 1942

Wage, salary, dividend, business profit and other income payments to individuals were estimated by the Commerce Department yesterday to have reached a record-breaking total of $52,071,000,000 in the first half of 1942.

While the department gave no estimates for the full year, income payments customarily run somewhat higher in the second half of a calendar year, indicating 1942 probably will set a new record in excess of 104 billion.

The half year total included a monthly record of $9,537,000,000 for June, which was attributed by the department to "a sharp rise in the steadily mounting total of Federal payrolls."

Part of the payroll increase, in turn, was credited to the pay raise given men in the armed forces.

"Factory payrolls," the department said, "continued to expand as the production of war goods more than offset the drop in civilian goods output."

June payments of dividends, rents, individual business profits and relief were about the same as in May.

Summarizing the first six months of 1942, the department noted that salaries and wages increased faster than any other types of income. Now they appear to comprise 69 per cent of total payments instead of the customary 65 per cent.

Murray Offers Pledge To End Jurisdictional Strikes For War

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, declared today that if given A. F. of L. cooperation, "I am prepared to assure America that there will not be another strike caused by a jurisdictional dispute in the United States during this war."

The C. I. O. chief made the statement during an address to the seventh annual convention of the Affiliated United Automobile, Aircraft, Agricultural Implement Workers Union.

He said he was prepared to give such an assurance if the executive council of the A. F. of L. agreed to delegate to its president the power "to mediate, conciliate and arbitrate" in proposed conferences aimed at labor unity.

"It depends on the A. F. of L.," Murray said. "I am ready to do my part."

Peace Parley Taking Shape

Arrangements for an historic peace parley between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. took shape yesterday when A. F. of L. President William Green announced here the federation's standing committee was ready to meet a similar group appointed by Murray.

The U. A. W. convention today adopted a resolution threatening to discontinue its policy of requiring no overtime pay for Saturday and Sunday work on war production unless rival labor organizations agreed to adopt similar overtime policies within 30 days.

After a similar resolution on overtime was sent back to committee yesterday because delegates from many locals argued it was not drastic enough, the expression adopted today was offered by the union's war policy committee.

The overtime resolution was vigorously opposed today by many delegates, one of them, William Mazey of the Hudson local, Detroit, declaring that "it doesn't offer the proper approach to our difficulties. We need the right to strike. It's our only defense against injustices by employers."

Murray told the U. A. W. convention he hoped the A. F. of L. would "discontinue its practice of racial discrimination and that equal and exact justice be accorded all wage earners."

"Many knotty problems will arise in the coming unity conference, and I appeal to the patience of American workers while the two committees strive to adjust differences," he said.

President Murray criticized Congress in his convention address for failure, he said, to carry out President Roosevelt's seven-point program for the Nation's internal war economy. He listed proposed $25,000 yearly salary ceiling, joint income tax returns, increased corporation profits taxes and taxes on municipal and Government bonds as necessary to insure an "equality or sacrifice" for the war effort.

Truman Assails Navy's Bureau Of Ships for Delay on Contract

By the Associated Press

A charge that the Navy's Bureau of ships was guilty of "negligence or willful misconduct" in connection with plans to build special tank-carrying vessels has been placed before Secretary of the Navy Knox by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee.

A letter from Truman to Knox, which contained the charge, also asserted the bureau had treated Higgins Industries, Inc., of New Orleans in a "biased and prejudiced" way in connection with the construction plans.

Truman explained to reporters that the Higgins firm was granted a contract for turning out tanker lighters, to be used for transporting tanks from ship to shore where no wharfs were available.

However, Truman said, production was held up for seven or eight months while the Navy checked on other types of tank lighters for possible use instead of those produced by Higgins.

"Finally, after our committee began investigating the matter," continued Truman, "the Navy ordered Higgins to go ahead with the production of the tank lighters as originally planned."

Truman said his complaint to Knox had nothing to do with the cancellation of the Higgins' contract to build Liberty cargo ships by mass production methods. This contract, a separate one, was canceled by the Maritime Commission on the ground that insufficient steel was available, and a hot controversy has resulted.

Truman informed Knox that the Senate committee had taken testimony on action of officers of the Bureau of Ships and would not make it public if Knox believed the committee should not do so. Truman said the testimony had been taken in executive sessions recently.

"But I cannot condemn too strongly the negligence or willful misconduct on the part of the officers of the Bureau of Ships entrusted with this vital matter," Truman wrote, "involving as it did both the success of our military forces and the lives of American marines, sailors and soldiers.

"The biased and prejudiced treatment received by Higgins Industries, Inc., from the Bureau of Ships is of secondary interest only, but a company possessing the skill and energy in both design and construction now admitted by the Bureau of Ships ought not to have received the treatment accorded to it in this matter. During the prosecution of a war where the very existence of the Nation is at stake, the Bureau of Ships should have accepted with gratitude the proved accomplishments of a private concern, instead of insisting as it did upon using models of its own design despite the repeated failures thereof."

The chairman said that the fact the war effort had not suffered an irreparable injury "is due largely to the ability and energy of Higgins Industries, Inc., and to its repeated criticisms of the shortcomings of the designs prepared by the Bureau of Ships."

3 Roosevelt Sons Reported In War Action

Boston, Aug. 5 (INS).—Three sons of President Roosevelt have been under fire in the war and the President's eldest son, Capt. James Roosevelt, was among the Marines who fought off the Japanese attempt to invade Midway Island, it was stated today by George Holland, Boston Evening American columnist.

The fourth and youngest Roosevelt son, John, will see action in the near future, Holland wrote.

Writing in his "Boston After Dark" column, Holland said:

". . . This column can now reveal that no men in the armed forces have undergone greater risks than Jimmy, Franklin and Elliott Roosevelt. . . . John's turn is coming.

"All three have been under fire and (with the permission of the military censorship) it is revealed herewith and for the first time in print that Son James was in the Battle of Midway as one of the valiant Marines who stood off the Jap aerial invasion . . . military censorship must cloak for the time being the nature of the dangerous mission now occupying the attention of another of the Roosevelt boys."

Activities of the Roosevelt sons in the war would make a stirring story, Holland wrote, but publication of that story "must wait until this war is ended."

Holland added that the war had become "a very personalized war" for Franklin, jr., because his best friend, Bill Lovering, former football star at Milton Academy, was killed in the Coral Sea engagement.

Wire News in Brief

Baby Slips From Fire Escape, Plunges Into Passerby s Arms

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

In Coffeyville, Kans., a man saw a small girl hanging by her hands from a fire escape high above the sidewalk.

As he watched, her fingers slipped. She fell.

He caught her safely, inches from the concrete.

The girl, 2½, had wandered from a parked car, climbing the iron stairway as a great adventure.

In Englewood, Colo., Quentin Horn's mother suffered a heart attack. He called the first-aid class he's been teaching. After two hours of artificial respiration, Mrs. Horn was revived.

In Springfield, Mo., T. B. Coppage, veteran Democratic worker got almost everyone in his ward registered to vote in the primary. Almost everyone—Coppage himself had forgotten to register.

Malcolm Reybold, jr., fast and 40, was seven floors up when he looked out of his office window and saw two men breaking into his automobile. He was seven floors down a moment later and legging it after the thieves. Reybold caught one and dragged him to a police station.

At Fort Blass, Tex., Sergt. Clyde Russ got beyond his depth while splashing about in Ascarate Lake.

He said his cries for help went unheeded—until he yelled, in desperation:

"Rescue me at once! This is an order!"

Two buddies quickly jumped in and dragged him ashore.

In Arkansas City., Kans., Realtor R. D. Anderson visited one of his vacant houses and found it had a new roof. Also new wallpaper and lustrous new paint. New plumbing, too.

He instigated and found a man who said he'd bought it at a tax sale. He hadn't. He'd bought a house at a similar—but different address.

Pullman Section Advance Sales Will Be Banned

Chicago, Aug. 5 (AP).—Discontinuance of advance sales of Pullman sections in standard sleeping cars August 15 to meet wartime railroad conditons was announced today by E. P. Burke, Pullman Co. passenger traffic manager.

Burke said, however, that conductors on the train will be authorized to sell a section for overnight occupancy where the upper berth is not needed. Until now, persons buying a lower berth and wishing more room could also purchase the upper berth.

Wartime troop transport problems prohibit this practice, Burke said.

Shipping Firm Control Over Airline Voided

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday ordered American Export Lines, Inc., of New York, a steamship company, to divest itself of control of American Export Airlines, Inc.

Basing its decision upon a construction of Section 408 (B) of the Civil Aeronautics Act by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the board said it "effectively elimnated common carriers, other than air carriers, from the general air transportation field in the future."

The board gave the steamship company six months in which to give up its control of the air line. The air carrier has temporary certificates to operate between New York and Foynes, Irish Free State. The New York-Lisbon service is not presently operated.

In a decision, July 12, 1940, the CAB dismissed for lack of jurisdiction the steamship company's application to control the air line. The appeals court, however, reversed the decision and sent the case back to the board for further consideration.

Section 408 (B) of the Civil Aeronautics Act provides, among other things, that the board not authorize a common carrier in another transportation field to control an air carrier unless it finds that the transaction proposed "will promote the public interest by enabling such carrier other than air carrier to use aircraft to public advantage in its operation and will not restrain competition."

Calling this provisio "extremely restrictive," the board said only those limited air transport services which are auxiliary and supplementary to other transport operations can meet the condition.

"While this case presents strong arguments in favor of approving the relationship in question because of the large sums of money which have been invested in the development of this new air transportation service, it nevertheless falls far short of meeting the conditions of the last proviso," the board commented.

American Export Lines owns 70 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of American Export Airlines. The remaining 30 per cent has been distributed as a dividend to stockholders of the steamship company.

Mrs. S. had one. She used to sit in it and brood by the day. Y'see, Mrs. S. wanted a really good cook . . . and Mrs. S. was strictly up-a-tree trying to find her Dream Queen for the kitchen.

Then things started to happen . . . She hardly had time to say, "I want a super-cook . . ." before her Help Wanted problem started to disappear with her Brooding Tree.

Mrs. S. is now raving over (1) her Post-Classified Cook (2) the trifling cost of the Help Wanted ad that got her (3) no tree in the living room.

Youth, 21, Not Yet Classified by Draft Board, And Working in Vital Defense Industry, Asks: Does Public Look Down on Chap Not in Uniform?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps I am leading with my chin, but I should very much like to know how the rest of the world feels about people in my position. I am 21 years old, working in a high-priorities defense job as an engineer; and going to a local engineering school at night to get my degree. I am physically fit enough for the draft; but I don't believe I could volunteer, due to a slight physical handicap. As yet, I have not been classified in the draft; but when the time comes, I am almost sure to be put in 2-B, as an essential defense worker.

I have many friends in the services, as draftees and volunteers, as officers and privates, in training and active overseas duty, and I cannot help feeling that I am not doing my share—in occupying a position where I can stay home, enjoy the fruits of my labor and have the freedom which Army life precludes. Sure, I work 10 to 12 hours a day, six days a week, with some Sunday work thrown in—plus school. But no matter how long or hard I work, I cannot forget that I am reaping a personal benefit, getting experience in my chosen profession, etc., while my friends are risking their very life, leaving ones they love and disrupting their future.

Part of the trouble, I admit, is the feeling I have when I walk downtown, that people are looking at me and saying to themselves: "Why isn't he in the Army, like my boy John?" I know that the girl I love (who has never professed love for me, incidentally) inclines to feel that way. Most of her boy friends are in the Army and I can see her whenever I have the time; but my status sort of puts a wall between us.

I wonder if there are other fellows who feel as I do—uncertain as to whether we are serving in the best way, even though the draft boards seem to think we are. Maybe you can put us straight. Thanks. BILL.

Civilian Is Soldier In New Kind of Army

DEAR BILL: The substance of your question was recently discussed by H. V. Kaltenborn, internationally respected news analyst, in one of his weekly movie shorts, in which (as you may know) he conversationally explores the significance of current trends. Mr. Kaltenborn indirectly "covered" your question in making reply to one citizen's inquiry as to whether a man's "first duty" is to his country's cause, or to his family (when he has dependents), in these critical days.

Mr. Kaltenborn sensibly explained that the executive branches of Government empowered to produce a "man army" sufficient to the country's needs are proceeding efficiently to "tap" and train the men they want; and, therefore, that any man whom Federal authority sees fit to exempt, at this time, from the uniformed services, is a man who is positively considered to be currently rendering maximum service to his country in his civilian capacity.

And this, I believe, is the attitude of most persons on the subject. One would be thinking in obsolete terms of war-making, who would suppose that the able-bodied man in civilian garb, seen on the streets of America today, is, per se, less patriotic than the man in uniform. Inasmuch as imperative emphasis is constantly placed on the fact that this is, essentially, a war of production—in which superior armament, rather than preponderant numbers of fighting men, shall determine victory—it follows that the laborers in "defense" industries, particularly those industries with "high priority" ratings, are making an aggressive contribution of superlative importance.

In my opinion, then, your present occupation automatically "rates" you as one of the most indispensable patriotic servants of the country. You are a new kind of soldier in a new kind of army, of incalculable value; and the fact that your apparel fails to proclaim your patriotic worth should give you no concern. A justifiable sense of high self-respect should be your shield and buckler, against stray gusts of disparaging comment or speculation from thoughtless or uninformed sources.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Molyneux' Millinery Makes Sense

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

THE DATELESS CHARM of classic simplicity has long been the keynote of dress for smart cosmopolites both here and abroad. This same feeling for clean-cut beauty is permeating the style of woman's hats. Inanities are passe.

One of the greatest exponents of unfettered beauty is Capt. Edward Molyneux. Long known for his unpretentious Parisian clothes and applauded more recently for h' designs out of London, Molyneux now turns his talent to women's hats. He has designed a variety of styles exclusively for a well-known New York hat company, famous for its men's and women's styles.

In his newly designed chapeaux may be seen Molyneux' creed of "understatement." His hats (as well as his dresses) are enhanced by taking from rather than adding to. Extraneous details are noticeably absent. Molyneux just can't help being a realist about women's hats—the quality which has always made his clothes appeal to American women.

Molyneux clings to lasting, rather than fleeting silhouetts. He doesn't believe in designing monstrosities just to be different. His hats are a frame for the face, highlighting the features but never distorting them. His lines are definite, clean-cut. The shapes outline real, honest-to-goodness hats. If it is a brim he meant to make, there is no mincing matters The brim is actually there with a full sweep. Small hats are definite, too. Their brims turn up in true style, the way the captain intended them. And as for his off-the-face type (for that is what it is with no new-fangled name) he captures the charm of youth by the addition of a perky bow. Every hat, if it could speak, seems to say, "Select a style that is becoming, regardless of what is in fashion."

Tea Rings

A VICTORY version of good nutrition is the combination of fruit and cheese. The fruit is a good source of vitamin C and minerals, and the cheese adds protein, vitamins and minerals. When these two foods are used to make tiny tea rings along with fluffy scone dough the result is something extra special.

Tiny tea rings have the delightful flavor of cheese baked into them and make an eye-appealing foundation for the fruit of the season. Pile them high with blueberries. Slices of peaches are luscious too when combined with these delectable tea rings. The tartness of new green applesauce heaped high in the center of this scone-cheese dessert will also be appealing.

Serve the tiny tea rings with a tall glass of cool milk and you will delight your tea guests. Or with a nutritious sandwich, the tea rings and an iced beverage you will have a luncheon menu filled with sustaining energy. Following is the recipe for making the tea rings:

Tiny Tea Rings

Sift 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 cups sifted enriched flour together. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Beat 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk, reserving white for tops. Add about ½ cup milk and 1 tablespoon honey or light corn sirup to the beaten eggs and add all to the flour mixture. Stir only enough to make dough hold together. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead a half minute. Roll out into a rectangle 8 inches wide and ¼ inch thick. Cut in half lengthwise. Spread each portion with grated cheese, using 1 cup grated sharp cheese, and roll jelly-roll fashion sealing edges. Cut into 8-inch pieces and form into rings on greased baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Brush rings with egg white. Bake in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Fill center with a spoonful of green applesauce, sweetened peaches or other seasonable fruit. Yield: about 8 individual rings.

"Oh Wad Some Power the Giftie Gie Us To See Oursel's as Others See Us! It Wad Frae Monie a Blunder Free Us."

By Ida Jean Kain

What do you see in the mirror? You think you see a true picture of yourself, but it's more likely to be two other people; the girl you used to look like ,and the girl you wish you looked like. Somewhere between the two you get a glimpse of yourself as you are.

All of us have certain impressions of ourselves—favorable, of course—that make it hard to take an unbiased view of the woman in the mirror. Just let me tell you a few instances that go to prove it. Not long ago I happened to hear a woman remarking on the dowdiness of a group of other women. She laughed lightly and said she hoped she didn't look like them. And then she added thoughtfully, "But maybe I do and don't know it." Apparently she didn't. She weighed not one whit less than 210 and was only slightly less wide than a dining table.

Optical Illusion

It is easy to be mistaken about size. I remember that when I interviewed Lily Pons she appeared so petite to me I couldn't help exclaiming, "Why, you're just a little girl!" And those around piped up with the sprprised rejoinder, 'She's bigger than you are!" It was news to me. Not that I could do anything about it.

The never-to-be-forgotten story is one a friend tells on herself. She was working abroad and living in one of those uniforms that are made to fit any size. One day some one said wasn't she putting on a little weight so the first time she got a chance, she weighed. To her amazement, the scales were up 30 pounds. She hadn't known she was gaining.

You can gain weight without knowing it, and even when you know you have put on too much poundage it is hard to believe what it does to you. At an age-guessing contest at a party, one young man was so undiplomatic as to put the age of a certain girl at "past 35 because," he reasoned, "her figure is so settled." Well! She is only 22! And she didn't believe anyone could make such an absurd deduction. The rest of the evening she kept remanding, "I'm not fat, am I?" She is.

Angles vs. Bulges

The thin girls can't see their angles any more than the fat ones can see their bulges. Another friend of mine appalled me by announcing that she intended to take off 10 pounds. She is already 10 pounds underweight and her lack of vitality is giving her the stooped posture of an older woman.

If you are inclined to be overly curvesome, you can get an idea of the way you really look by checking up on your weight and measurements now and as they used to be. If you weigh the same and have taken the same size dress over a period of several years, you can't have changed much in looks and probably your figure is good. But if you are having to let your dresses out through the waist and hips, take a critical look at those measurements.

Posture is a fairly good gauge of whether you are too thin. Remember when you used to hold yourself beautifully erect? Then you got in the habit of being tired, and gradually into the habit of poor posture. You'll have to feel fit again before you can change that.

Put Your Home in Compact Order for Post-War World

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

AMERICA HAS been sitting pretty these last few years, but now a Spartan order may transform our chairs and sofas to smaller scale. As any traveler will testify, you could have traipsed around the pre-war world in vain for the luxurious chairs that have been our daily pleasure in the United States. We've often heard Americans complain that there wasn't a comfortable chair in Europe.

Well, we're going to have to trim our sails in this department of life as in others. For several reasons—partly shortages of essential materials needed in making upholstered furniture; partly because the really democratic home of the future will be small and forthright and there won't be room in it for such big pieces.

Love Seat Is Practical

The sofa is a genial piece of furniture, besides being comfortable and sociable, so we aren't going to want to dispense with it entirely if we can help it. Instead we'll probably settle for a love seat, which is the sentimental name for the two-seat sofa. It is comfortable and gracious and really deserves its popularity in the compact home of today.

A modern love seat that can be used in either the modern or traditional room is the sectional type that comes in chair units so that they can be set together to make a love seat or even a sofa, or used apart as separate chairs. This is likewise practical in various rooms, including dining room or bedroom where comfortable seating is certainly genial, but where there is rarely space for a large sofa or even a full sized upholstered love seat.

That brings up another important asset of the love seat—it can go in so many places where a sofa wouldn't fit and it lends itself to much more versatile arrangements. A love seat can go under a window or at right angles to it; a love seat can also be placed at right angles to the fireplace or out in the middle of the floor, even in a smallish room where a sofa so placed would seem to crowd things.

Democratic Era Dawns

All along the line, the story of home furnishings is going to be one of curtailment. The sooner we all get in step with this trend, the sooner our world will be right-side up again. This shift toward simpler living is not merely a war-time measure. The post-war world will be far more democratic than any we have known before, with fewer expansive and extravagant homes, fewer hovels and poverty-stricken huts—and more of us living in pleasant adequacy.

The home of the future will be self-sufficient and servantless with just enough space for the family and no more, with excellent equipment and pre-fabricated construction. For all that simplification, however, there will still be plenty of margin for individuality, and on the whole we predict that American women are going to like this world of tomorrow.

Malvina Lindsay, author of "The Gentler Sex," is on vacation. Her column will be resumed on her return

Use Paint to Conserve Vital Materials

As a wartime measure to conserve critical materials and labor, the American Women's Voluntary Services has inaugurated a training course on home repairs. Practical painting was presented as a topic by Lee Moffit of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Mr. Moffitt stressed the significance of paint in conserving wood, metal, and other materials vital to America's war effort.

Screens, he said, should be painted regularly. Printed linoleum with worn off pattern can be saved from discard with new color, for its surface is ideal for repainting. Inlaid linoleum should be protected against wear and tear with a clear coating of lacquer or varnish. The life of many small metal objects can be extended by painting—for example, canisters, waste paper baskets, trays, lamp bases, and other household accessories.

Of importance as regards conservation are window sills, porches, and porch steps. If water penetrates into or behind wood, a different repaint surface is formed, and perhaps carpentry repairs occasioned.

Mr. Moffit listed important painting do's and don'ts, such as:

Don't open can and dip right in —Do read directions.

Don't use a wall paint for floors, nor a screen paint for walls, nor a strictly interior product for outdoors—Use paint for intended purpose.

Don't paint near an open flame and don't smoke while painting —Provide ventilation.

Don't leave brushes standing on their bristles—Clean them thoroughly, promptly, and wrap them in paper.

Don't buy a product or use it when not sure—Ask your dealer for directions.

A Simple Wedding

My Ideal Wedding Dress

I'm having my wedding at home and I've chosen a rayon faille dress banded with rayon satin that will rustle like a whisper when I come down the stairs. It cost $39.75 and that pleased Father—and Mother says that I do look like a dream in it! My bridesmaids are wearing pannier dresses, so pretty with roses and ribbons; just $19.95.

I'm being married in Church—by candlelight because I like dignity and tradition. I'm wearing a billowy skirted rayon satin dress with lace bodice and long train. Satin gleams so beautifully by candlelight. It was $49.75. Dresses for my bridesmaids are rayon lace and rayon marquisette, $25; in lush new Autumn shades.

I'm having a military wedding and my dress is rayon crepe with the bodice moulded by bands of shirring. It makes me feel tall and beautiful and gracious as the Colonel's Lady —and that's pretty good for a Lieutenant's future wife! It was $29.75—just right for my budget, and my bridesmaids will wear shirred rayon taffeta with silver color stripes against pastels. $16.95.

I want a simple wedding—but I do want it to be beautiful and memorable just the same! I've chosen a rayon chiffon wedding dress with softly shirred bodice and a full flowing skirt that makes me look as though I were walking on a cloud. It cost $35, and just what I wanted, too! My bridesmaids are wearing rayon net with rayon satin bodices, adorable at $19.95.

HOT SPOT—

"Theatrical Future Is Here"—Say Stage Door Canteen Enthusiasts

"Washington today is potentially the hottest theatrical town in the country." So say Brock Pemberton and Milton Shubert, New York producers who are in the city this week in the interest of their pet war charity, The Stage Door Canteen.

Sharing office space with members of the local branch of the American Theater Wing War Services, Inc. in the little tobacco shop just off the National Theater, Messers Pemberton and Shubert were in the throes of organization details and interviews yesterday. The stage was being rapidly cleared for the 7 o'clock supper tonight in Washington's lone theater when plans will be completed for the opening of a Stage Door Canteen here soon after Labor Day at the old Belasco Theater.

The once inhospitable Washington is making every effort to give the local service boys a canteen that will rival New York's fabulous cafe in the Forty-fourth Street Theater. Women prominent in war work societies as well as amateur and professional entertainers are offering their services for the project that bids fair to be the most popular gathering spot for soldiers and sailors in the Capital.

Preoccupied though they may be with plans for their organization party, the two gentlemen of the theater admitted to a healthy professional interest in what they consider the best bet in the theatrical business in this year of the war 1942.

"A boom town is always a good show town," said Mr. Pemberton, who started his career as a producer in the days of World War I. "But the trouble with Washington is the lack of theaters. At present the National is the only available building for show purposes in town and there doesn't seem to be any possibility of getting through a priority rating for building any new ones.

"Every producer in New York wants the opportunity for a run here," he went on. "As the real Capital of the United Nations as well as of the United States Washington offers the most varied and receptive audiences of any city in the world."

But both Mr. Pemberton and Mr. Shubert consider the immediate business of organizing the supercanteen for the boys in the services as their most important job at present. As cochairman of the national branches committee of the American Theater Wing

Brock Pemberton

War Services they are on a tour of several cities to aid local organizations in starting stage door canteens.

Mr. Shubert, a member of the famous theatrical family by that name, is the nephew of Lee Chubert, New York producer. He recently returned from two years in the motion picture business in Hollywood to take over his present job with War Services.

Mr. Pemberton brings to his work some 20 years of experience in satisfying critical audiences. A former newspaperman under William Allen White on the Emporia Gazette, he got into show business "by mistake" and liked it so well he stayed on.

"'Girls and Music,' that's our slogan," concluded Showman Pemberton. "And believe me, that's what the boys on leave are after."

Queen to Give Dinner This Evening

At the stroke of midnight, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands will call for her White House limousine and return to the Executive Mansion following the strictly official reception at the embassy this evening.

Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will be among the 60 guests dining at the embassy on Wyoming Avenue by command of Her Majesty the Queen tonight. Later—10:30 o'clock—to be exact, some 50 or more guests will drop in to greet the monarch. They will include a cross-section of official Washington with a few out-of-towners.

Last night the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts at a dinner party in the state dining room of the White House honoring their royal house guest.

Ellison Smith, Jr., Vivian Manning Are Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Meredith Manning of Greenville, S. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Vivian, to Ellison Durant Smith, jr., son of Senator and Mrs. E. D. Smith.

The bride-elect, who is a twin, is the granddaughter of the late Gov. Richard I. Manning of South Carolina.

The wedding will take place in September in Greenville.

Miss Huntt Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Huntt announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Estelle Huntt, to James E. Bateman, son of Mrs. Joseph L. Bateman and the late Mr. Bateman. No date has been set for the wedding. At present Mr. Bateman is completing his naval training at Norfolk, Va.

She'll Answer Call To The Colors

Busy packing her bags and practising a military step is Miss Clare Hall, who will leave the Capital shortly for Des Moines, Iowa, where—right—she will join the WAACs training center.

Before her departure for Iowa where her days of military discipline will begin, Miss Hall has been the honoree at a number of goodby-and-good-luck parties, among them the "military shower" at which Miss Anne Spence entertained earlier in the week.

Emily Tice Engaged To Sergeant Warren

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Tice of Orlando, Fla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily Tice of Washington, to Technical Sergt. George B. Warren, formerly of Orlando, now stationed at Bowling Field, Va.

The wedding will take place in the chapel of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church on Friday evening. Following the ceremony, there will be a reception at the home of the bride's sister, Miss Elsa Tice.

NO COUNT—

Former French Attache Renounces Title to Become U. S. Citizen

Yesterday he was a French count. Today he is an American citizen and just plain MR. Andre Marie Adrian de Limur.

The former Attache of the French Embassy, who resigned his post when he could not see eye-to-eye with the Vichy policies, swore a special oath renouncing his title yesterday when he became a naturalized citizen. He came to Washington to take his oath of allegiance from Burlingame, Calif., and is en route back to California now to join his wife. Mrs.—until yesterday, Countess—de Limur, an American citizen, is visiting her home there. She and her newly naturalized husband will leave Burlingame, a peninsula suburb of San Francisco, September 7 for New York where they will spend a week. Then they'll return to Washington and their home on R Street.

Mr. De Limur served a tour of duty at the French Embassy here during the last war, after which he had diplomatic appointments in London and Rome. He returned to this country in 1939, with his wife and their three children, for a stay in California. Soon afterward the war clouds broke in Europe and he was called to Washington by his then-Allied country. But with the Petain peace, Mr. De Limur resigned his embassy post and now, like Charles Boyer, he is an American who "speaks English with a Free French accent."

Comdr. and Mrs. Windsor Have Philadelphia Guests

Comdr. and Mrs. Charles Windsor have as their house guests Mrs. Windsor's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Chew Stephenson of Philadelphia.

The visitors, who arrived Sunday, will be here for several days. Mr. Stephenson is a sergeant in the First City Troop of the Philadelphia Cavalry.

Czech Prince Added to Staff Of Legation

Even in this town—where kings and queens come and go at will—a prince hailing from democratic Czecho-Slovakia is a rarity.

Prince Edward Lobkowicz, a veteran of the Libyan war, has arrived in Washington and will serve as assistant military attache of the Czecho-Slovak Legation here. Prince Lobkowicz is a member of one of the few royal families that remained in Czecho-Slovakia after 1918 when all aristocracy was abolished.

Prince Lobkowicz flew here directly from the Libyan desert, where, as a captain in the Czech army, he tasted both victory and defeat. He plans to go to New York tomorrow and it will be there that he will make his headquarters. At present he is a guest of the Minister and Mme. Hurban.

In 1925 he fell in love with an American girl, Anita Lihme, and they were married at Watch Hill, Rhode Island. Princess Lobkowicz, who is a member of an Illinois family, is in New England at present.

Margaret Wenger, Benedict Genua Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. Clement D. Wenger of Harrisonburg, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Wenger, to Benedict Joseph Genua, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicolo Genua of this city.

Miss Wenger was graduated from Madison College in Harrisonburg, in 1940. Mr. Genua was graduated from George Washington University the same year. He is now attending the school of engineering, where he is a member of Theta Tau, professional engineering fraternity.

The wedding will take place October 3, at St. George's P. E. Church, Arlington, Va.

Down Virginia Way

LATEST NEWCOMER to Loudoun County from war-time Washington is Francis Hoge of New York, who at present is doing war work in the Capital. Mr. Hoge has purchased the Victor Emmanuel farm, a tract of land that lies along Route 50 at Atoka and is erecting a temporary stone cottage for occupancy this winter. He spends most of his weekends with Mr. and Mrs. James McCormick at Dover House near Middleburg.

Guest of Mrs. T. Richard Cowell at Sunny Side near Upperville is Miss Lelia Gordon Dickey of Washington. Miss Dickey is spending the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. George Barnett at Wakefield near Front Royal.

The former Miss Bettina Belmont, Mrs. Newell J. Ward, jr., left Middleburg this week by motor for Fort Riley, Kans., to join Lieut. Ward who has just graduated from Officer's Training School there. Mrs. Ward has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Arthur White, for several weeks at her home, Chilton. Mrs. White and her son, Ridgely White, accompanied Mrs. Ward and will remain at the Western post for a few weeks.

T. BEATTY BROWN of Mount Airy in Upperville was guest of honor at a dinner given this week by Mrs. Luddington Patton. Mr. Brown will leave this week to enter the Army. Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman and her two children, Carolyn and Bobby, have gone to Ocean City, Md., where they will be joined on weekends by Capt. Cushman, United States Army, who is on duty in Anacostia.

House guest of Mrs. Charles M. McCormick at Dover House is Mrs. Christabel Cummings, Washington artist. Miss Ellen Whitaker of Bristol, Tenn., who is now employed in war work in Washington was the guest of Mrs. McCormick early in the week.

Susan Carter Becomes Bride of Lieut. Phillips

Fort Belvoir Chapel was the scene of a quiet wedding yesterday when Miss Susan Ashley Carter became the bride of Lieut. James A. Phillips. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George McGill Carter of Chester, Pa. and the late Mr. Carter of The Plains, Va. Lieutenant Phillips is the son of William G. Phillips of Mount Joy, Pa.

Chaplain Dee officiated at the 2 o'clock ceremony attended by members of the two families. Given in marriage by her brother, George McGill Carter, jr. of Baltimore, the bride wore a gold crepe costume with a yellow hat and a bouquet of gardenias and gladioli.

Miss Ann Carter of Alexandria, served as maid of honor for her sister, wearing a white silk grown and a green hat. Her bouquet was of summer flowers. F. Seiler Phillips of Mount Joy, Pa., served as best man. A reception followed at the Alexandria home of Miss Ann Carter. Both the bride and bridegroom attended the Pennsylvania School of Industrial Art.

Guests attending included Mrs. Carter, down from Chester, and Mr. Phillips, father of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hannum Carter of Media, Pa., Mrs. George McGill Carter, jr. of Baltimore, William Irwin Carter of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Henderson Carter, Mrs. Julian Burke, Miss Helen Seiler of Mount Joy; Mrs. Seiler Phillips, Mrs. Peter B. Woods of Baltimore; Miss Jane Palmer Foster of The Plains; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dulany Tayloe of Baltimore and James Gillis of New York.

— Purely Personal —

Senora de Concheso, wife of the Cuban Ambassador, will entertain at a luncheon tomorrow in honor of Senorita Patria Mencia, Attache of and Vice Consul of the Embassy, whose marriage to Serge Krizman will take place on Saturday.

The Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Georges-Picot have arrived at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., for a brief stay.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military and Air Attache of the Cuban Embassy, Col. Felipe Munilla, left for Havana yesterday. The trip, a sudden one, was occasioned by the serious illness of her father.

Lieut. Col. Charles F. Schneider, and his daughter Nan, have gone to St. Louis, Mo., where Colonel Schneider was transferred. He is in the Ordnance Department. Mrs. Schneider will join them early next week. Miss Schneider will study for her master's degree at the University of Wisconsin this fall.

Mrs. Breckinridge Long is vacationing in Hot Springs, Va., and others from Washington stopping at the spa include Mrs. Ray Atherton, Mrs. John L. Newbold, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. William Hill.

MISS BETTY LEE MILLER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Miller announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Lee Miller, to Thomas F. Carter, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carter of Alexandria, Va.

The prospective bridegroom is at present stationed at Fort Story, Va.

Army Junior Married in Fort Monroe

The Army tradition was carried on yesterday when Miss Jeannette Van Volkenburgh, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. R. H. Van Volkenburgh of Hampton, Va., became the bride of First Lieut. William Scott West, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. West of Bremerton, Wash. Chaplain R. L. Bates of Fort Monroe officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony in the Church of the Centurion at Fort Monroe, Va.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Brig. Gen. Laurence B. Weeks, in the absence of her father, who is overseas, wore her mother's ivory satin wedding dress trimmed with heirloom lace. Her veil of tulle fell the full length of her court train and was held in place by a tulle coronet. Her shower bouquet was of white roses and bouvardia.

The maid of honor, Miss Vita Krarup, wore a peach organza dress which was set off by a pompadour hat in a matching shade of net. Her bouquet was of matching gladioli and talisman roses. The only other attendant was Miss Genevieve Meyers, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Harry Meyers of Fort Monroe, who acted as flower girl. Her dress was of yellow organza and her bouquet was like that of the honor attendant.

Capt. William T. Boyd served as best man and the ushers were Lieut. William C. Cogsweet and Lieut. Barry Owens, all of Fort Monroe.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Colonel and Mrs. Meyers. After a brief wedding trip, the couple will make their home at Fort Monroe.

The bride attended Marot Junior College in Thompson, Conn., and her husband was graduated from the University of Washington.

Junior Red Cross To Keep Youths Busy

By Genevieve Reynolds,
The Post Club Editor.

DAD RUSHES out at night to attend an air raid warden's meeting. Mother dashes out to her first aid, sewing or nutrition class. Many high school boys and girls are left sitting at home with no particular war job to do. From now on the boys and girls will have their war duties to keep them busy. At least these are the present plans of Miss Elizabeth Etheridge, newly appointed executive secretary of the District Junior Red Cross.

"There are 96,000 children in the District of Columbia," she said. "With all the war work crying to be done, there is a job for each high school boy and girl in the Junior Red Cross groups of the city."

Miss Reynolds

For example, she cited the facts the boys and girls could make wooden ash stands, ping pong tables and paddles for recreation rooms of service men. Also, there are plenty of copper, rubber, iron and other materials needed in the war production program.

"With America at war the role of the Junior Red Cross is more vital than ever in making of articles requested by the armed forces," Miss Etheridge declared. "For instance, there are the victory book campaign and salvage drives that need to be intensified."

Before taking over her job as executive secretary of the Junior Red Cross here Miss Etheridge did an outstanding job in organizing the junior group in Jackson, Tenn.—her home town. But she confesses that two years ago Junior Red Cross activities were little more than a name to her. While teaching in the high school there she was asked to serve as adviser to the junior group. Thereupon, she pitched in and put the boys and girls to work.

Commenting upon her experience with the boys and girls of high school age, she said: "I found that they work more enthusiastically and harder than their mothers in the adult groups of the Red Cross."

Her job in Washington is to assist Junior Red Cross sponsors in the schools to work out and to correlate an effective wartime program for 'teen-agers. One of her aims is to emphasize first-aid courses.

Bachelors to Give Benefit

A NUMBER of Washington's eligible bachelors will play host at the gala benefit party given by the Newspaper Women's Club tomorrow night following the benefit performance of "Carmen" at the Watergate.

Gladstone Williams is chairman of the host committee for the party and has serving with him the managing editors of the four local papers, Alexander F. Jones of The Post, Herbert F. Corn of the Star, Mike Flynn of the Times-Herald and Aubrey Graces of the Daily News. Others who will be hosts are: George Abell, John A. Logan, Edgar Morris, William Wadsworth Wood, Edward Vandevanter, James Preston Parks, Hugo Rennert, George Besler, Robert Keaseby, William Canby, John Eversman, Jack Hayes, Herbert Koether and Earl Nash.

Mrs. Cordell Hull wife of the Secretary of State, will turn on the lights for the club's benefit supper which will be given at the new Normandy Farm's Watergate Inn. Miss Marjorie Hendricks has donated the building and food for the party. Also assisting with the party is Miss Genevieve Hendricks (sister of Marjorie), who designed the decorations for the new inn.

Proceeds from both the party and the "Carmen" performance put on by the San Carlo Opera Company will be used for maintenance of the club's bed at Children's Hospital.

Coe Glade, who will sing the title role in Bizet's opera, is flying to Washington for the club's party. Other guests of honor will include members of the cast of "Carmen."

Mrs. Long Is Honored

MRS. VICTORIA FABER STEVENSON, president of the National League of American Pen Women, was hostess at an informal luncheon yesterday honoring Mrs. Winifred Long of St. Petersburg, Fla. Sharing honors with Mrs. Long was her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Kloss of Washington, whom she is visiting.

This was the second of a series of informal luncheons being held throughout the summer honoring members of the league who come to the Nation's Capital. Mrs. Long is one of Florida's best known artists.

Two of her pictures, both portraying native Florida scenes, were chosen from the exhibit staged this summer by the Florida Federation of Artists for inclusion in the circuit art shows that travel all through the State. Mrs. Long was also awarded first prize in oils in the Pen Women's Southern Regional Art Show, her picture, "The Home Front," receiving the popular award.

Mrs. Merle Lyon, newly appointed Social Chairman of the National League, arranged the details of the luncheon which was held at the Willard Hotel.

Among those attending the luncheon were: Dr. Florence Everhart, past national chairman of art; Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, past national president; Mrs. Ellamay Colvin Thomas, Mrs. Beth Heath Olmstead, Mrs. Rosamond Gaydash, newly appointed national chairman of art; and Mrs. Edward R. Seal.

The discussion carried on through the luncheon hour brought out the fact that artists in the league throughout the Nation are vitally aware of the part they must play in the war effort, and are effectively wielding their brushes with patriotism as the central theme.

Did You Know That:

THE WOMEN'S DEFENSE Training School now is open for registration at its new location on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays between 7 and 10 p. m. at the American Legion Headquarters, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

Beginning Monday, August 10, the school will feature its courses for air raid wardens in order to help fill the need for adequately trained civilians in the District. Included in the wardens training course are gas defense, stretcher drill, first aid and wardens' work.

See the answers through The Periscope!

This is a time to peer ahead of the news . . . without self-deception or wishful thinking.

A time to be watchful of what's behind the news as well as what's in the news.

And NEWSWEEK is the one magazine that is basically designed to fulfill these needs—every week!

Every week NEWSWEEK's Periscope . . . amazingly accurate, amazingly perceptive . . . turns an uncanny eye on the news that hasn't happened—yet. The Periscope covers the world . . . while in "Washington Trends" it concentrates on the behind-the-scenes events in the Nation's Capital. And better than 4 out of 5 of Periscope's predictions have become fact.

No wonder the Periscope is regarded as the most daring and successful development in modern journalism.

The News—In Focus

True news coverage . . . the kind readers find in NEWSWEEK . . . does not stop at news-reporting. It rounds out the background of the news. It shows the impact of world events on history in the making. It seeks out the significance of the news as it occurs.

Thus, news plus news significance gives the complete picture. It renders a valuable service to the American public—in focussing the headlines of the day on the realities of yesterday and the probabilities of tomorrow. Without bias. Without editorial "slant."

Opinions of Men Who Count

Finally, NEWSWEEK provides the salt of wisdom that every intelligent mind seeks—the comment and opinions of men who are qualified to speak.

Every week there are Admiral William V. Pratt and Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, on the war . . . Raymond Moley, on national affairs . . . Ernest K. Lindley, on the Washington front . . . Ralph Robey, far-sighted economist . . . and John Lardner, war correspondent.

These men sign their names to their opinions. They are seasoned, responsible observers who stake their personal reputations on the words they write. That is why their opinions count—why their comments are worth reading—worth mulling over—why they are eagerly sought by thinking Americans.

NEWSWEEK is the one news magazine that speaks out in all three tenses—past, present and future. Because it serves a national need, more than 500,000 alert American families read it each week. And these include the largest concentrated group of opinion-forming leaders in business, industry and government reached by any magazine.

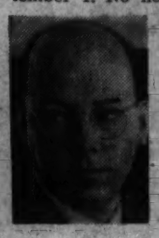
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Personnel 'Freeze' Continued at War Dept.



The personnel "freeze" at the War Department has been continued until September 1. No new employes paid less than $2300—and that's 90 per cent of the employes hired — will be taken on until September 1. The first "freeze" order became effective about six weeks ago. War Department has an estimated 50,000 civilians here now plus about 7500 officers and enlisted men on duty. The department, meantime, is planning to set up some sort of control unit to pass on the need of additional workers. Navy has a personnel control unit which was created following a long moratorium on the hiring of new workers. Some Navy people believe the controls are too complicated and restrictive.

Navy's Bureau of Ships will limit its employes to 15 days annual leave during the 1942 calendar year. Its policy has been 12 days plus the time going and coming from the employe's vacation destination. The 15 days limit will conform to that of the remainder of the department . . . William P. Lehman, chief of the Interdepartmental Placement Service, is now a lieutenant (j. g.) in the Navy Aviation Volunteer Service . . . Frank Settle is executive officer to Emory Houghton, the War Production Board bigwig. He formerly was with Agriculture.

Employment Troubles

Employment Service is having its troubles. Two congressional riders are playing hob with Administration. One keeps the salaries of field employes at the State level rather than the higher Federal scale. Another permits Unemployment Compensation to rob Employment Service of its best employes. A goodly number of top people have quit ES recently and its work has bogged down in some places. Budget Bureau is reported to be interested in the situation.

The new efficiency rating system appears to have worked pretty well at Navy's Bureau of Ships. Of its 2569 employes rated as of April 15—there are now more than 3200—12 per cent were rated excellent, 46 per cent very good, 28 per cent good, and 4 per cent fair. Eight employes were rated as unsatisfactory and they have been or will be dropped. Some of those with the ratings of fair will be demoted and none will get automatic promotion under the Ramspeck-Mead Act. Only the "good" employes who are paid below the average of their grade will get automatic promotions. Lieut. Comdr. Carl Haglund has installed the CAA system at the bureau whereby the employe talks with his immediate supervisor both before and after he is given his rating. He formerly was a CAA personnel chieftian.

Baltimore Guinea Pig

Baltimore is the guinea pig for the War Man Power Commission. Officials are being sent there to work with both labor and management, especially in the recruitment of new workers, try-outs for women workers and the like. When the Baltimore methods prove feasible they will be extended to industrial areas the country over. Man Powed has appointed half a dozen regional directors but they haven't been announced yet . . . Half a dozen war agencies have cautioned officials recently not to talk for publication. It's reported the Office of War Information inspired the warnings.

The trial period for war service appointees—all new employes are now war service appointees—has been extended to one year except for persons appointed for a specific period of one year or less. The new trial period was made retroactive to June 8. During the trial period an employe can be dropped without formality and without good reason. If the employe is rated satisfactory after a year he can be dropped easily under the reduction in force procedure. Otherwise, charges must be preferred against him to bring about his "separation." Trial periods have been six months in most agencies, but it's still possible to raise the salaries of new workers during trial periods.

War Man Power is holding up the new transfer system and the new draft policy for Federal workers for no apparent reason . . . Plumber, $9.12, $9.60 and $10.08 . . . Senior tool and gauge designer, $2300 to $2900 . . . electrician, $1620 to $1860 . . . Pipefitter, $6.72 and $8.92 . . . Sheet metal worker, $1620 to $1800 . . . Electrician's helper, $5.47 a day . . . Machinist's helper, $5.04 to $5.68 a day

How About Back Seat Drivers?

Whether the female of the species is or isn't more deadly than the male is a moot question, but the 1942 edition of the National Safety Council's "Accident Facts" states that women were involved in only 30 per cent of all accident fatalities, accounting for 23 per cent of motor vehicle fatalities, 13 per cent of firearm deaths and 13 per cent of drownings.

Police Get the Bird

When traffic jammed on Wisconsin Avenue yesterday, harried policemen hurrying to the center of the trouble were ready to take somebody to court.

Instead, they took a strutting male peacock, followed by an admiring female fowl, back to the zoo.

Inter-American Defense Chiefs Visit Edgewood Arsenal Today

Forty-three members of the Inter-American Defense Board, composed of high ranking military, naval and air representatives of the 21 republics of the Americas, will visit Edgewood Arsenal today for an inspection of the Army's chemical warfare service.

Laying of a smoke screen from mortar smoke shells, as contrasted to the airplane-spread smoke screen, will be demonstrated by troops as will the use of 100-pound phosphorus bombs and methods of storing toxic gases in the open air without deterioration.

The visitors will be welcomed by Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, chief of the chemical warfare service, and will be escorted by Brig. Gen. Haig Shekerjian, commandant of the chemical warfare school, who also will speak to them during luncheon.

Gas Demonstrations Set Tonight, Tomorrow

Two field demonstrations for instruction in war gas identification will be held tonight and tomorrow for air-raid wardens and residents of the Forest Hills Defense area, it was announced yesterday by Deputy Warden Joseph Sanders.

Tonight's demonstration, at 7:30 o'clock, will be held for Zone 3 in a vacant lot on the west side of Connecticut Avenue between Brandywine and Chesapeake Streets, and tomorrow's, for Zones 1 and 2, will be held at the same hour in a vacant lot near the rear of Devitt School, 2955 Upton Street Northwest.

Deputy Sanders will conduct both demonstrations.

Defense Group Will View Film Tonight

Motion pictures relating to defense and addresses by civilian defense officials will feature the outdoor program which the Municipal Center Defense Area will hold at 8:30 p. m. today on the West Plaza of the Municipal Building at Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue Northwest. Other entertainment features, including music, will be presented.

Kaufman Stores Top War Bond Quota

The D. J. Kaufman Stores have exceeded their quota for the sale of war bonds and stamps to customers by more than 400 per cent, it was announced yesterday.

In addition, employes of the two stores have signed up 100 per cent under the payroll allotment plan for purchase of bonds and stamps.

Mason Defies Churches on Walkathon

The Commissioners' latest alibi for doing nothing about the walkathon is that the District Federation of Churches let the press read its protest against the "moronic" exhibition before the letter arrived at the District Building.

"I intend to do nothing about it," said Commissioner Guy Mason last night, when asked what would be the official response to the Federation's appeal that the Commissioners seek "congressional legislation against walkathons and similar exhibitions in the District."

"I didn't get the letter from Mr. LaRoe (chairman of the federation's committee on civic affairs) until after I read it in the morning papers. I am not going to do anything about it," Mason stated.

LaRoe's letter was received at the District Building shortly after 1 p. m., according to Geoffery Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners. Since the board meeting had been concluded, Thornett personally delivered the letter to Mason for consideration. The next board meeting is scheduled for tomorrow.

With Mason thus on his dignity, there is less chance than ever that the Commissioners can be aroused to interest themselves in the city-wide indignation against the so-called endurance contest at Riverside Stadium.

Commissioner John Russell Young, president of the board, is away on another of his ten-day vacations.

Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz has stated for the record that he "knew nothing to the contrary" but that the walkathon was worth-while entertainment.

President Joseph D. Kaufman puts the two facts together for this deduction: "You can sell a product when you believe in it yourself." Prizes of bonds and stamps furnished by the management were awarded in the customer-sales drive to employes of the stores.

30,037 Pleas Received For Supplemental Gas

Applications for supplemental gasoline allowances totaling 30,037 had been received by the local rationing boards as of August 4, it was announced yesterday by L. P. Steuart, chairman of the District War Price and Rationing Board.

All but 4136 have been acted upon, with applicants being notified by mail as to the rejection or approval of their applications.

Persons whose applications have been approved are being instructed to call at their local rationing board with their registration cards to pick up their coupon books.

Special Phones Are Ordered For Use of Raid Wardens

Official telephones for air-raid wardens to use for reporting incidents to the seven substations for the defense communications control system were ordered yesterday by Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham.

There should be one telephone for every four city blocks, Mileham said. The preferable location is in a sector post as near as possible to the intersection of the four squares. No report is to be given in from any other telephone, and these official ones are not to be used for any other purpose during an air raid, simulated or real.

The telephone company has agreed to make mechanical arrangements so that these phones will receive priorities over all other neighborhood calls during an air-raid period, Mileham said.

Mileham said that the use of the one telephone to report incidents for every four blocks would prevent clogging up of the exchange and of the control center switchboards, and would effect an economy of equipment dispatching, as there would be no overlapping or repetition of calls.

Only One Court In Session Here

With Justices James W. Morris and Bolitha J. Laws leaving yesterday for their summer vacations, only one branch of District Court will be in session until September 4.

The lone jurist is Justice David A. Pine, who will hear motions until August 20, when Justice Matthew F. McGuire will take over until the criminal and civil courts reopen.

Assignments for the remainder of the summer recess, which began July 6 and ends October 5, are: September 4 to 19, Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher and Justices F. Dickinson Letts and Jesse C. Adkins; September 20 to October 5, Justices Jennings Bailey and James M. Proctor.

Nazis Sink 3 Ships In English Channel

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), Aug. 5 (AP).—German motorboats torpedoed three steamers totaling 5000 tons, sinking two of them in the English Channel Monday night, the German high command reported today.

Boy, 8, Drowns As Father Saves Other Son's Life

David Patrick Williams, 8, of 3801 Thirtieth Street, Mount Rainier, Md., was drowned yesterday despite his father's efforts to rescue him after their outboard motorboat overturned near Selby-on-the-Bay, Md.

DAVID

Thrown into the water when the boat sank, the father, James Frederick Williams, managed to help one son, Russell, 10, swim to safety, but David sank soon after they started for shore. Dr. John Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, issued a certificate of death by drowning.

RUSSELL

David, one of five children, was a newspaper carrier. He had gone with his father and brother to the beach yesterday morning to visit friends. His body was recovered a short time later by Capt. Vinton Bull of the State Conservation Department.

D. C. House Group Gets Bus Protest

Two Northeast Civic Units Tell Need for Shepherd Street Line, Curtailed by PUC

Northeast civic groups carried their protests against the proposed elimination of the Twenty-second and Shepherd Street bus line to the House District Committee yesterday.

Representative of the John Burroughs and Rhode Island Avenue Citizens' Association told Chairman Randolph that withdrawal of the route would leave the area without adequate service and would seriously crowd other lines.

Curtailment of the Shepherd Street route was advocated by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer in his plan for a sweeping revision of the city's transportation routes. Randolph said that the Public Utilities Commission had indicated it would hold hearings on Van Duzer's proposal in the near future.

In the meantime, he said that he would urge the PCU to give "sympathetic consideration" to the demands of the citizen organizations. Officials of the Capital Transit Co. have already registered their opposition to the elimination of the Shepherd Street line, which connects the area at the District Line near Bunker Hill Road with Twelfth Street Northwest.

New Bus Terminal To End Va. Bus Jam

Relief of the congestion of Virginia buses at Tenth and E Streets Northwest, was promised yesterday in an order by the joint board of the District commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission or the establishment of a bus terminal in front of the old Postoffice Building at Twelfth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The order specified "runways and concrete platforms, all in accordance with the plan prepared by and on file with the Department of Highways." According to this plan, all of the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington buses will use this new terminal, and the Arlington and Fairfax ones will pass through the terminal and stop on Tenth Street.

In this way, it is figured that none of these Virginia buses need go north of Pennsylvania Avenue to add to the traffic congestion in the business district.

This plan is one of the points in the Van Duzer Defense Transportation plan, now under consideration by the Office of Defense Transportation and the District Public Utilities Commission.

Runoff Needed In Typographical Union Election

The balloting for president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 yesterday failed to give any one of four candidates the necessary majority for victory, and a run-off will be held to determine the winner, an official count of the ballots disclosed last night.

Leading with a total of 640 votes was Jesse B. Manbeck, who barely topped his nearest opponent, Edward C. McEntee. The latter polled 577 votes, which failed to give Manbeck the required majority.

Running close behind the two leaders were J. H. Abercrombie, with 444 votes, and Frank S. Lerch with 406 ballots.

The run-off between Manbeck and McEntee will be held August 19, officials of the union said.

Manbeck has been employed on The Washington Post since 1935, while McEntee is an employe of the Washington Daily News.

The election was to fill the unexpired term of Clarence J. Desper, who is now first vice president of the International Typographical Union.

Industrial Users Of Sugar to Get Extra Allowance

Extra sugar allotments for industrial and institutional users will be available with the regular allotments for the September and October periods on or after August 7, it was announced yesterday.

The additional allowances, amounting to 25 per cent of the amount used last July, August, September and October for the institutional users, and 10 per cent of the amount used during the same four months for the industrial consumers, may be obtained on the usual rationing form. No special application is needed.

L. P. Steuart, chairman of the District War Price and Rationing Board, emphasized that the extra allotments are granted only for the four-month period, and do not change the method of computing regular allotments for registering units.

Fish and Wildlife Officials, Transferred To Chicago, Are Bidden Farewell at Dinner

Skidding Auto Injures Six On Suitland Rd.

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 62
Deaths this date last year 49
District total last year 95

Six persons were injured, at least one of them seriously, when their car skidded off Suitland Road, near Cedar Hill Cemetery in Prince Georges County and crashed into a tree at 7 p. m. yesterday.

The Bladensburg and Branchville rescue squad ambulances removed the victims to Casualty Hospital where no immediate reports as to their condition were available. Waldorf police, however, supplied this list of the victims' names along with their injuries:

Robert Hogue, the driver, about 25, a first class private in the Coast Artillery, fractured skull; John Jameson, about 24, 188 Thirty-fifth Street Northeast, broken ankle; Melvill> Hogue, 23, of 915 Maryland Avenue Southeast, lacerated head, face and arms; Herbert Brensinger, about 21, of 1377 L Street Southeast, lacerations over his entire body; Daniel Fitzpatrick, about 28, 260 Sixteenth Street Southeast, facial lacerations, and Joe Hines, 1367 E Street Southeast, facial lacerations.

Inquests into two recent traffic fatalities were held at the District Morgue yesterday and the defendants, a motorist and a streetcar motorman, were exonerated.

Henry C. Worley, 27 of 1732 D Street Northeast, trolley operator, was freed in the death of William B. Edwards, 52 of 1501 North Capitol Street, who died at Sibley Hospital last Sunday.

It was testified the victim stepped into the path of Worley's car at First Street and Florida Avenue Northwest, early Sunday. The coroner's jury decided he died "due to his own negligence."

At the second inquest, Eppa H. Towles, 60, 323 Channing Street Northwest, was acquitted in connection with the death of James Guess, Negro, 20 of 1104 Sixth Street Northwest. The latter was fatally injured, July 28 when a truck he was operating was overturned at Eleventh and Q Streets Northwest. Guess was pinned beneath the vehicle and died at Freedmen's Hospital a short time after the accident.

Ernie E. Maxwell, 47, of 613 C Street Northwest, was reported in a critical condition early today at Casualty Hospital where he was removed Monday night after being struck by a streetcar at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Previously, the hospital, which announced the injured pedestrian had undergone a skull operation, had defined his condition as "serious."

Director Gabrielson and Jackson Feted; Sportsmen Present Gifts; 60 Attend

Fishermen and other sportsmen bade farewell and "good fishing" to Dr. Ira Gabrielson, director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, and his assistant, Charles E. Jackson, at a testimonial dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night, which marked the departure of the two officials for Chicago, where the service has been transferred for the duration to make room for war workers.

The hosts were close friends of the two department officials, and guests included outdoor-life lovers from Washington, Baltimore, Virginia and New York. Approximately 60 attended.

Both guests of honor were presented with fly fishing outfits. J. Hammond Brown, president of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, and Larry Richey, nationally known sportsman, made the presentations.

A motion picture on tarpon fishing was shown by William Briggs, Eastern Airlines official. Floyd D. Akers was master of ceremonies.

A buffet dinner of buffalo, elk and salmon was served. The buffalo and elk were provided by Akers.

In his presentation speech Brown told Jackson that "you don't need this (rod and tackle) to angle for friends, because you leave many fine friends behind." Richey presented a similar gift to Gabrielson, and expressed appreciation for "what you have done for sportsmen all over the country." Both guests of honor responded with speeches.

The order moving the Fish and Wildlife Service department, issued by the Department of Interior, affects more than 300 employes.

Loan Broker Held For Grand Jury In Tire Theft

Pleading not guilty to a charge of breaking into a gasoline station and stealing 13 tires, Henry Berman, 42-year-old loan broker of 4821 Third Street Northwest, was ordered held yesterday for grand jury action, by Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon.

Berman was arrested Tuesday and held in connection with the theft of 38 tires from Lehman's Super Service Station, Twelfth and K Streets Northwest, on July 23.

Only 13 of the tires were recovered, however, and Berman was not charged with larceny of the other 25.

Bond of $100 was fixed for Jay Paul Shelton, of Arlington, Va., who was held as a material Government witness.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When the time comes, at year's end, to call the roll of flopperoos, the Boston Red Sox will qualify for some kind of prize. The egg laid by the Red Sox in the American League pennant race tops, for size and odor, all other butch jobs that come to mind.

POVICH

A month ago the Red Sox were supposedly hot stuff. They won something like 23 games out of 27, and came back off a triumphant Western tour spoiling for knock-down battle with the Yankees, whose lead they had cut to three games. Look at 'em now, the Red Sox, we mean. In third place, 13 games behind the Yanks and their pennant chances deader than roast duck.

At that, maybe we are a little bit harsh on the Red Sox. Could be they were simply overrated. But they were supposed to be a sure-shot to finish at least second, and if they miss out on that one they must be tabbed as flops with a two-car garage. There didn't seem to be anything in the league except the Yankees that figured to top the Boston club.

Hindsight is better than foresight in any league, but it's evident now why the Red Sox, with the best pitching they've owned in years, are not even second in the league. No club can lose such run-producing hitters as Jimmy Foxx and Joe Cronin in the same season without being hurt. And with Jim Tabor having a horrible year at bat, Manager Cronin's plight is even more tough.

Indians Doing All Right

Sure the Red Sox have come up with Johnny Pesky, a .320 hitter and swell fielding shortstop to take Cronin's place, and the Red Sox are leading the league in team batting. But Pesky is no home run hitter, and the Red Sox aren't winning games this year because the likes of Cronin and Foxx aren't stepping up to the plate and rudely jolting the ball out of the park. Home runs and three-baggers usually get wonderful results.

The Cleveland Indians are doing all right. They were not supposed to be a second-place ball club this year, but they are despite the loss of Bob Feller. The Indians without Feller threatened, in fact, to be a second division outfit, and Boy Manager Lou Boudreau has been doing a clever sort of job with the Cleveland club.

If Boudreau's managerial responsibilities have affected him in any way, then they have served only to make him a better ball player. He's just about the best ball player on his own club, a smarter hitter this year than he ever was. The suspicion is, though, that Boudreau will have no long career as an active ball player. He flings himself into the game with such zest that his wounds are many and at this time he is a badly banged-up young man.

Boudreau has no easy time of it managing the Indians. It's a make-shift sort of club with no outstanding pitching, and not as much power as it is commonly supposed to have. When Jeff Heath and Rookie Les Fleming are hitting, Boudreau's job is not too tough, but when Heath and Fleming aren't hitting then Boudreau has quite a burden. Of late Heath and Fleming have been no threats whatsoever, and when they are not getting their base hits they aren't the two sweetest characters in the world.

If there is a man who can contest with Boudreau for the label of Manager of the Year and win it, then he is Luke Sewell, who has taken his Browns into the first division only 5½ games out of second place. Sewell has done a tremendous sort of job with the Brownies in a year when his catching staff is so poor he is forced to go behind the bat himself. That reminds us that nine years ago the Nats traded Sewell to Chicago because he was slowing up.

Stephens Spark Plug of Browns

The man to whom the Browns have been geared in their charge into the first division is their young shortstop, Vernon Stephens. He or Johnny Pesky of the Red Sox is a cinch to wind up as the Rookie of the year. Stephens has cured most of the Browns' infield troubles and he has come to be known as one of the dangerous hitters in the league. You may count on your fingers the number of men in the league who have driven in more runs than Stephens.

The fellow who is having it tough this season is Del Baker of the Tigers who is experiencing for the first time in his career at Detroit a lack of punch on his ball club. That comes hard to a man who could always depend on such as Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Charley Gehringer to rattle the fences or the bleacher seats with long blows. Pitching that is second only to the Yankees hasn't been able to carry the Tigers far on account of that absence of punch.

The other day, Baker finally benched Jimmy Bloodworth in an attempt to bolster the Tigers' attack. It was a sorrowful admission that Bloodworth hasn't panned out well. In the first month of the season, he was driving in runs at the terrific rate of one per game, but he has been no help to the Tigers offensively for several weeks. The trade with Washington that looked so good in the spring doesn't make the Tigers happy now. Doc Cramer was benched in the same week as Bloodworth, for nonhitting.

G. W. Names Busick Director of Athletics

Ex-Sports Writer Surprise Choice; Is Popular Here

By Jack Munhall

Soft spoken, mild-mannered John R. Busick yesterday made the sizable leap from director of sports publicity to director of athletics at George Washington University, effective September 1.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, in a move that surprised even Busick's closest friends made the 28-year-old McLean, Va. resident one of the youngest athletic directors of any major school. He succeeds Bill Reinhart who resigned recently to enter the United States Navy as a lieutenant commander. Busick's first official act may be to announce a new varsity assistant football coach and a freshman coach.

Busick, married and the father of two girls, is a former local sports reporter for the Daily News. He was named director of sports publicity at George Washington in 1937, replacing flamboyant Jack Espey, now entrepreneur extraordinary of the Washington Redskins.

After three years of thorough, though unspectacular plugging of Colonial athletics, Busick received his first promotion, moving up to assistant director of the university's combined press relations bureau, while retaining the supervision of sports publicity.

All Three Helped

The antithesis of Espey's high-powered, hit-'em-till-they-fall publicity methods was the work of the retiring, hard-working Busick. But his methods synchronized perfectly with the metamorphosis of George

Tribe Masses Hits to Beat Browns, 8 to 5

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 5.—The Cleveland Indians massed 5 of their 11 hits off three pitchers in the fourth inning tonight for an 8-to-5 victory over the Browns, who pummeled two Cleveland pitchers for 12 scattered blows.

Until that disastrous fourth, Denny Galehouse had sailed along allowing but one hit. Then the Indians began hitting everything he threw and collected five hits and five runs without an intervening out.

Vern Stephens, the Browns' freshman shortstop, singled home one run in home half of the fourth and a second run counted after an outfield fly, but at no time were the Brownies able to bunch hits in free enough fashion to catch the Indians.

Frank Hayes, regular Brownie catcher who has been on the shelf with an injured leg, pinch-hit a double in the eighth in his first appearance for many days.

Theft of Home Defeats Tigers For Chisox, 1-0

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The Chicago White Sox were unequal to the task of pounding out a victory over the Detroit Tigers today, so they stole the game, 1 to 0, when Don Kolloway, rookie second baseman, sneaked home with the only run of the game in the sixth inning.

It was the fifth straight triumph for the Sox and the first victory of the season for Thornton Lee, who was making his second start since injuring his arm during spring training.

The Sox won despite a five-hit performance by Hal Newhouser. The Tigers cut the Sox down four times with double plays and there was a double killing even in the inning in which the Chicago team won the game.

The game-winning run occurred in the sixth. Kolloway opened the drive with a single to center. He moved to second when Moses beat out a bunt to Newhouser. A moment later Hoag hit into a double play, but Kolloway reached third. Luke Appling was at bat when Kolloway elected to steal home.

Kolloway slid across the plate in what Eddie Parsons thought was a questionable decision. Parsons argued with Umpire Bill Summers and for his effort was tossed out of the game.

Reds' Errors Help Cardinals Win, 5-0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 5.—The St. Louis Cardinals took full advantage of a couple of strategic Cincinnati misplays tonight to whip the Reds, 5 to 0, and even the two-game series at Bucky Walters' expense.

While the Reds were committing four errors, young Johnny Beazley, with his peculiar delivery that looks like cross-fire but isn't, was the Cards' unbeatable ace of the evening.

He struck out eight, three of them the alleged heart of the Cincinnati batting order, in the second inning. Eric Tipton, Frank McCormick, and Ival Goodman were the victims.

The Cards really won the game on Walters' first two pitches, but four of their runs were unearned. Jimmy Brown hit the first pitch for a double and Harry Walker the second for a single and a run in the opening inning.

In the third, with two out, Walters fumbled Harry Walker's tap, and Enos Slaughter doubled Harry Home. Stan Musial singled, scoring Slaughter, then stole second and came in on Walker Cooper's single.

Nats-Yankees Idle; Engage Here Tonight

The Nats and Yankees tangle again tonight at Griffith Stadium, following a juggling of dates in the wake of yesterday's weather—which is a military secret.

The postponement yesterday had these effects:

The Nats-Yankees game originally scheduled for this afternoon, will be played under the lights tonight, starting at 8:30.

Ladies' Day, originally scheduled for today, will be held on Saturday when the Boston Red Sox play the Nats.

Yesterday's postponed game will be played as part of a double header when the Yankees next return to Washington.

In tonight's battle, the Yankees will send their league-leading pitcher, Rookie Hank Borowy to the mound against Washington's Buck Newsom. It will mark Borowy's debut at Griffith Stadium. Borowy, who came to the Yankees via Fordham University and Newark, has never been on the firing line in the Washington park.

Manager Bucky Harris, hopeful of having Second Baseman Frank Croucher in the Washington lineup during the Yankee series has now abandoned that idea. Despite Croucher's claims that his sore arm had recovered, Harris was not impressed with the throwing of the infielder in a special workout on Tuesday.

The Nats, enjoying their longest stretch of success of the season, today will be attempting to gain their ninth victory in their last 13 games.

Sewell Wins Twelfth for Pirates, 3-0

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 5.—The Pittsburgh Pirates exploded four singles after two were out in the seventh inning tonight to score their only runs in a 3-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Pirate Pitcher Truett (Rip) Sewell was never in trouble as he notched up his twelfth win of the season.

Sewell and Rookie Les Fleming engaged in a tight pitching duel with most of the fireworks packed into the seventh inning. The Cubs got two men on base in the ninth after two were out, but Sewell retired Pinch Hitter Bill Nicholson on an infield fly.

Sewell, himself, started the game-winning rally in the seventh. He singled after two were out, advanced to second on Pete Cosearart's single and scored on another single by Jim Wasdell.

Fleming then walked Maurice Van Robays to fill the sacks and finally was sent to the bench after Bob Elliott singled, driving in two runs for the final Buc tallies.

Rockingham Doubleheader Lures 25,000, Record Betting

$914,188 Pour Through Mutuels; Army Navy Fund Given $80,000; Track's Biggest Crowd

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Aug. 5.—Little Rockingham Park pulled out all the stops today with the first "double-header" in American turf history and presented approximately $80,000 to the Army and Navy relief funds.

Records cracked all over the place—except on the racing strip—as a crowd of more than 25,000 dug deeply to pour the amazing total of $914,188 through the scarcely adequate mutuel machines.

The morning program of six races, which attracted a crowd of 12,000 brought a handle of $263,906 and as the throng swelled over the 25,000 mark in the afternoon, the totalizator flashed gradually up to an additional $650,282 for the nine races of the double-header's "nightcap."

Even General Manager Lou Smith, who conceived the unique twin bill stunt as the track's contribution to Army and Navy relief, was amazed at the public response. He had predicted confidently that 20,000 would be present, that a mutuel handle might pass the $800,000 mark and that the track would be able to present about $50,000 to $60,000 to the funds.

Instead, Rockingham was able to make the largest New England sport contribution in its approximate $80,000 donation. The complete handle also smashed the Rockingham record handle of $641,675, although that mark was established for an eight-race card.

Otherwise, events of the day ran fairly true to the chalk with nine favorites coming down in front in the 15 races. Willie Turnbull, riding sensation of the current meeting, also signalized his mastery by bringing home the first winner of the long day, Merry Glow, and then brought three more mounts to the winner's circle.

The feature race of the day, which replaced the $2500 Added Matron Handicap when that event failed to fill, went to Mrs. C. C. Winters' Night Editor, which ran six furlongs in 1:12 and paid $14.60, $7.80 and $5. Siravo and Petrucci's Marion Collins was second, paying $3.80 and $3 while B. F. Lister's War Tower finished third, returning $6.40.

Varied entertainment featured the intermission between the morning and afternoon halves of the double-header. Included were battles of music between services bands and a pony race for servicemen.

Two young men, Stanley Gidelka and Joseph Degason, both of Haverhill, Mass., caught the full spirit of the occasion and enlisted in the Navy right on the spot.

Benjamin, who is 24, and lives at Framingham, Mass., was acquired by the Phils from Chattanooga of the Southern Association in 1939.

Garden Scene Of Wright, Stolz Fight

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 5.—For the first time since Henry Armstrong's heyday, a world featherweight champion gets a chance to show his stuff in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night when Chalky Wright tangles with the No. 1 lightweight contender, Allie Stolz, in a 10-rounder.

Wright owns only half the 127-pound crown—the half recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission. The National Boxing Association's portion of the bauble rests with Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson.

"The Chalk's" title won't be on the line this time, and this is probably a very good thing for the California Negro, too. For Stolz, a curly-haired Newarker with a lot of what the Jacobs' beachcombers call "class," is 5 to 9 favorite to thump the Chalk around more than a little bit before the evening's fun is over.

Allie, a busy little puncher who lost on an unpopular decision in a crack at Sammy Angott's lightweight crown a few weeks back, is a ring stylist who figures to give Wright as much pleasure as a flat tire in those days when Chalky used to chauffeur for Mae West.

Although the Garden's history is full of featherweights who couldn't put much meat on the table with their box office lure, this shindig brings together two good little men who figure to make a tough fight of it. An das a result, Promoter Mike Jacobs wouldn't be at all surprised—or disappointed—if more than 10,000 fans pay $28,000 to see what's cookin'.

G. W.-Hoya Game Set for Today

Rains yesterday postponed a pair of D. C.-Maryland summer baseball league games. Called off were scheduled contests between Georgetown and George Washington at the Hilltop, and Maryland and Catholic University at Brookland.

Officials hope to hold the G. U.-G. W. game at 4 p. m. today at Georgetown. No definite date has been set for the Terps-Cards game. It has been suggested that the game be played as part of a double-header August 22 when C. U. is scheduled to invade College Park.

Witek and Bartell Get Only Hits in Fast Twi-Night Game Played in Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 5.—Rookie Max Macon pitched two-hit shutout ball tonight as the Brooklyn Dodgers overpowered the New York Giants, 4 to 0, in a twi-night game before 23,232 fans at Ebbets Field. The contest was run off in 1 hour and 51 minutes, easily beating the dimout deadline, which had halted the two rivals two straight nights at the Polo Grounds.

Macon, the southpaw whom the Dodgers recalled from their Montreal farm club at the start of their last Western trip, held the Giants hitless until the sixth inning when Mickey Witek, buried eighth in the New York batting order, belted a double against the left-field fence.

However, this did not disturb Macon and he retired the Giants in order from that point until two were out in the ninth when Dick Bartell dribbled a tricky grounder, which Shortstop Peewee Reese had difficulty fielding just back of second base and which was scored as a single. He faced only 29 men.

It was the first complete game for the rookie, whose only previous start was at St. Louis, where he was knocked out but got credit for winning. He had appeared three times in relief.

The Dodgers made eight hits and drubbed across a run with three of them off Lefty Tom Sunkel in the first inning. Billy Herman singled, went to second as Johnny Rizzo beat out a bunt down the third-base line and scored on a single by Joe Medwick.

They received another run on an error in the third frame when Reese walked and went to third on a single by Herman. Rizzo fanned and Herman stole second, but Catcher Hank Danning made a bad throw trying to block the steal and Reese raced home unmolested.

Tex Hughson Allows 3 Hits as Red Sox Blank A's 7 to 0

Hurler Earns 13th Victory, Ties for Lead

Four Runs in Fourth Is Clincher; Lupien Leads Bat Attack With 2 Doubles

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 5.—Hurling three-hit ball, Tex Hughson gave the Boston Red Sox a 7 to 0 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today and ti . Phil Marchildon of the A's for the most games won this year by an American League pitcher. Hughson's triumph was his thirteenth.

The Red Sox scored a run in the second inning off Roger Wolff and sewed up the contest with a four-run barrage in the fourth that knocked Wolff out and brought in Dick Fowler.

Boston pounded the two Athletic pitchers for 14 hits, including four doubles. Tony Lupien paced the Red Sox attack with two doubles and a single for a perfect day at bat. Catcher Johnny Peacock also blasted out three safeties, including a double.

Bull Dog Colt Brings $4300 At Saratoga

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 5. The annual yearling sales here tonight took on a brighter outlook when optimistic buyers provided some spirited bidding in the third session at the historic George Street auction ring, contrasting sharply with the two previous vendues when averages dropped to unprecedented lows.

Tonight's sale saw some lively bidding for the fashionably bred youngsters. Forty-three yearlings were sold for a total of $40,450, averaging $941 per head. This compared favorably with the $1276 average of last year when the sales were conducted under much better world conditions.

Preston M. Burch was a consistent bidder throughout the sale and paid $4300 for a fine looking dark bay colt by Imp. Bull Dog—Nancy Dyer, which proved to be top price of the sale.

William Woodward, owner of the Belair Stud, offered 15 yearlings to open the night's sale, but only 14 were taken. A bay filly by Gallant Fox out of La Palina was withdrawn when the reserve bid of $1000 was not increased.

The Belair Stud received a total of $5350 for the 14 head sold under the hammer of "Doc" Bond. This group averaged $382.

Georgetown Orange Bowl Tackle to Play With Army Eleven

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Sergt. Joseph Daniels, a member of Georgetown's 1941 Orange Bowl team who has been serving as an airplane motor mechanic with the Army Air Forces at Cochran Field, Macon, Ga., soon will trade his overalls for a football uniform. He's been named to the squad of the Army football team which is being organized by Robert Neyland and Wallace Wade, former big-time football coaches now in the Army

120 to Seek Canadian Open Golf Honors

By International News Service

Toronto, Aug. 5.—A field of approximately 120 club-swingers from the United States and Canada will tee off tomorrow in quest of Slammin' Sam Snead's relinquished Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Entries totaled 109 tonight, with several others still expected for the three-day battle on the Mississauga Golf and Country Club course.

Although Snead now is in the U. S. Navy and will not be on hand to defend the crown he won last year, a repeat victory for the United States was a strong possibility, with Ben Hogan, leading money-winner, scheduled to be among a dozen stars from across the border who are expected to participate.

They include U. S. Open Champion Craig Wood, Clayton Heafner, Ralph Guldahl, Herman Keiser, Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Tony Manero, Lloyd Mangrum, Toney Penna, Jimmy Thomson, Joe Kirkwood and lesser lights.

One of Canada's strongest contenders is likely to be Phil Farley, the Ontario Open champion, who ripped five strokes off par with a practice round of 67.

The schedule calls for 18 holes tomorrow and Friday, with the 60 low scorers on those rounds to wind up with 36 holes on Saturday for prize money aggregating $3000.

Three-Star Ten Plays Hospitalmen Today

The Three-Star softball team, composed of Filipino and American players is scheduled to meet the employes' team of St. Elizabeths Hospital at the latter's own field at 5:30 this afternoon.

A double-header has been carded for the Three-Stars for Sunday afternoon at Diamond No. 9, Constitution Avenue and Twenty-first Street Northwest. The first game will start at 2 o'clock against the Army Coast Artillery. The nightcap will be played with the F. and Annandale Contractors.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 5.—What interests you?

BASEBALL?—Judge Landis was fixing to return to Chicago, after his short visit here, but he had time to talk a little about his game.

CONSIDINE

"What's going to happen to baseball? I don't know, and nobody else does. I'll tell you this much, though: it's doing a first-class job this first year of the war, and it's ready to keep doing it. We'll have an announcement about the World Series soon.

"That was a fine show at the Polo Grounds the other night. Fine show. All it needed, to circumvent that trouble at the end, was a clear announcement during the game that it would end at 9:10, no matter what was happening. But the important thing is that it raised money. The National League has done a wonderful job with its charity games. The American League still has a number of games to play. I know they'll go over real well.

"Say! You're the fellow who interviewed Connie Mack recently, aren't you? How about that old Connie!—saying he was worried about Griff and me. He's a fine one to worry about us old guys. He's 109 years old. Griff and I are only 104," the 75-year-old judge chuckled.

FOOTBALL?—Red Blaik did a great job with last season's West Point team. He picked up the remnants of a fearfully bad club and molded it into a winner—a spirited, plucky club that held Notre Dame to a scoreless tie and threw a mighty scare into a Navy team that had much better equipment.

But it would be a little unfair to expect a new crop of miracles from Blaik, though he is as good a coach as there is in the country. He saw little enough of his players last season because of their stringent curricular duties. This year he'll be given even less time with his Cadets. Many of his players are enrolled in the academy's new flying courses. Their daylight air training will conflict often with football scrimmage hours. Their night flying will cause them to be absent from Red's blackboard and moving picture classes.

RACING?—If you think that the thoroughly discredited term, "improving the breed," is something new, well, you're just plumb mistaken a'ready. Here's an excerpt from "Blooded Horses of Colonial Days:"

"Long Island was the chief place for horse racing as far back in time as 1665, when Governor Nichols announced that a horse race would be held at Hempstead, or Salisbury Plains, 'Not so much for the divertissement of youth as for encouraging the bettering the breed of horses, which through great neglect had been impaired.'"

Other swaddling stories of racing in this, the richest of the horse park States:

"In 1669 Governor Lovelace ordered that races should be run in May of each year over this course, the prize being 'a crown in silver or the value thereof in wheat.'" The fame of this New York course spread as far as England, where it was mentioned favorably in a number of racing papers. In 1757 another track was built at Jamaica. A year later one was built in Harlem. Later one was built on the Bowery, which may account for its present condition.

"A big day in colonial racing was announced in the June 4, 1750 issue of the New York Postboy." The story states, "On Friday last there was a great horse race on Hempstead Plains which engaged the attention of so many of the City of New York that upwards of 70 chairs and chaises were carried over Brooklyn ferry the day before, besides a far greater number of horses. The number of horses on the plains exceeded 1000."

They even had ringer trouble in those days. Not long before the Revolution, a British officer stationed in New York borrowed a fast horse from one of the colonists, without telling the colonist, and won a match race with it at a British officers' track on Long Island. Probably helped bring on the war.

BOXING?—Old Chalky Wright—nobody, including Chalky, knows how old—goes tomorrow night at the Garden against flashing young Allie Stolz. Ought to be a whale of a scrap. The Chalk will be outweighed, but then he always is. During his lean years, which means during about 15 years of his boxing life, he had to fight much heavier men. Nobody around his own weight ever wanted to mix with him. But now the Chalk is in the chips for the first time since he was Mae West's chauffeur. He finally has a title and all the fancy haberdashery that goes with it. He may be too smart for smart young Allie tomorrow night.

Bibber McCoy Pins Rudy Dusek In Arena Wrestling Match

Reverting back to his football days at Holy Cross, Bibber McCoy, the Bad Humor man from Boston, uncovered half-dozen flying tackles to down Rudy Dusek, an old fraternity brother in the gripey gentry, after 23 minutes of the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night. Some 1000 fans, pretty evenly divided as to partisanship, vicariously strained and grunted throughout the spectacle, which was a roughie all the way.

The match was a mean trick to foist upon the faithful, inasmuch as both boys are villains of long standing. The patrons had no hero to adore, the lack of which is a distinct injustice to all rassle addicts.

The referee, Casey Berger, was included in the hostilities when he was forced to fight off McCoy repeatedly, after warning that gentleman to behave himself. Several weeks ago Berger made so bold as to disqualify Bibber, and the Bostonian is still poutin' about it.

Dusek was a bit on the tough side himself, and one time he bellowed, "I'll knock your brains out!" as he staggered McCoy with a barrage of belts to the head.

Rudy was doing all right for himself at the 21-minute mark, what with eye-gouging and slugging. However, McCoy returned this attention in full measure and then came up with the gridiron strategy. Playing the ropes, he came off fast with a flying tackle that floored Dusek, and before Rudy could recover he was rapidly flattened five more times. Then McCoy flopped on the prostrate Dusek hulk with a body press and the match was over.

Michele Leone and Jim Austeri upset Ace Freeman and Johnny Melas, erroneously billed as heroes, in the two-man team battle, taking the first two falls.

This was a strange bit of business, inasmuch as the skits nearly always call for the Galahads to nose out the meanies in the two final falls, after enduring a terrific beating in the initial frame.

Melas first went out in 14 minutes on a back drop applied by Leone and Austeri. At the time this was happening Freeman was out of the ring visiting with the customers.

The second engagement saw Melas capitulate in six minutes after the dastardly duo had punted him all over the premises. He had little help from Brother Freeman in this go either, as that fellow was too busy trying to get back in the arena to be of any service. The blackguards had tossed him out six consecutive times as a prelude to Melas' downfall.

Coast Guardsman Dick Lever avenged last week's stalemate with Maurice La Chappelle by besting the Frenchman with a body press in 24 minutes.

Just before the end, La Chappelle had scored with a brace of dropkicks to Lever's ribs. Maurice missed a third boot and Lever evaded the charge to pin La Chappelle.

Tommy O'Toole, another member of the Coast Guard, and Hans Kampfer worked to a rough draw in the opening match, which saw the fans hissing Kampfer roundly for his foul deeds.—OSCAR ELDER.

Surging Phils Beat Braves Again, 5-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug., 5.—Tommy Hughes limited the Boston Braves to five hits tonight as the Philadelphia Phils won their second straight encounter from the Bostons, 5-2.

Superb in the pinches for his eighth victory, the young right-hander kept Boston in control throughout while his mates touched Tom Early and Johnny Sains for 10 hits.

The Phils jumped into the lead the first time up, getting a 1-0 edge when Danny Murtaugh singled, advanced on Al Glossop's safety and came home under Danny Litwhiler's fly.

Boston got this one back in the fourth after Ernie Lombardi walked, went to second on Hughes' wild pitch and romped across the plate when Al Roberge singled. Glossop broke the deadlock in the next stanza, getting on via a single and scoring when Pinky May slapped a one-bagger to left.

In the next inning, the Phils found Sain, who took over the pitching chores, much to their liking. With two out, he walked Danny Murtaugh and hit Glossop with a pitched ball. Litwhiler promptly tripled, scoring both, and soon followed on a wild pitch to Nick Etten.

Musto-Savold Expected Here Tomorrow

Leo Savold, Tony Musto and Pat Comiskey, three of the heavyweight stars on Monday night's all star boxing carnival at Griffith Stadium are to put in an appearance here tomorrow.

Promoter Joe Turner made this announcement last night while reporting a heavy advance sale for the show.

Savold and Comiskey will work in one shift at Turner's Arena and may spar with one another, while Musto will drill at another hour tomorrow.

Savold, undefeated within the past year and an upset knockout conqueror of Lou Nova on the Navy Relief boxing show at Griffith Stadium last June, is confident of his chances of beating Musto Monday night.

The short, squat 210-pound Mustomade one of the greatest fights of his career in a recent losing stand against Tami Mauriello who boxed Bob Pastor to a draw, and is easily one of the most dangerous trial horses among the big fellows.

Musto has been working out at Stillman's gymnasium, New York, within the past 10 days and expects to be in his best fighting fettle for the bout.

In Savold's last start he knocked out Bill Poland, one time knockout conqueror of Harry Bobo, in the ninth round of a thrill jammed battle.

Tickets are on sale at Turner's Arena, and reservations may be made through Michigan 6614.

Redskins Start Trek To Coast for Drills

8 Players Leave Today; 32 Already Signed; Espey To Accompany Squad

A near-ton of Redskin football players will shove off from Washington today toward San Diego, Calif., training site of the squad that will number 40 when all athletes are checked in next week.

The 8 Redskins who will entrain at Union Station at 5:45 p. m. will be chaperoned on the coast-to-coast trip by General Manager Jack Espey.

En route, they will be joined at Chicago by six more players. At various points farther West, more athletes will join the party.

Thirty players have already signed contracts with the Redskins and eight others as yet unsigned are expected to negotiate with the Redskin owners when camp is reached.

One backfield man, one end and six linemen will be in the party leaving Washington today. They are Rookie Halfback Dick Poillon, Center Ki Aldrich, End Ed Cifers; George Watts and Bill Young, tackles; and Clem Stralka, Joe and Joe Lamas, guards.

Among the recently signed Redskins are four veterans of last year, Backfield men Sammy Baugh and Roy Zimmerman, and Guards Farman and Steve Slivinski. Rookies recently signed are Poillon of Canisius College, Watts of Appalachian State; Joe Lamas, Mount St. Mary's guard; and Harley McCollum, Tulane tackle.

End Bob Masterson, who was due to leave today, will be detained at his home in Roselle, N. J., where his father is ill. Masterson is expected t fly to the coast next week to join the club.

The unsigned players are Joe Aguirre, end; Dean Chipman, lineman; Ray and Cecil Hare, Ed Justice, Bob Seymour, George Peters, backs; and Centers Bob Titchenal and George Smith.

Coach Ray Flaherty has listed the squad's first workout for Monday at the Brown Military Academy grounds at San Diego. Thirteen days later he will send his team into its first exhibition game, pitting the "Easts" against the "Wests" in an intrasquad battle.

On August 30, the Redskins will meet their first stiff test of the training season when they meet the all-Army team in a War Fund benefit game at Los Angeles. Following that contest, the Redskins will entrain for the East, arriving in Washington on September 3.

Four days later the curtain will go up on the National Football League season in Washington with the Redskins meeting the Green Bay Packers at Griffith Stadium. A week later, they will play a team known as the Chicago Bears in Washington.

Kimbrough On Eleven To Face 'Skins

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 5.—Jarrin' John Kimbrough, former All-America fullback from Texas A. & M., headed a preliminary roster of Army athletes announced today as opponents for the Washington Redskins here August 30.

Kimbrough, a lieutenant, has joined the football squad at Camp Cooke, Calif., which soon will go into intensive training for the game, first of a series to be played throughout the Nation for the Army Relief Fund.

The Redskins are due to start training at San Diego next week for their professional campaign.

Maj. Wallace Wade, visiting here to lay the groundwork for the game, said he would not announce a member of his squad until he had actually put in appearance at Camp Cooke.

On deck, and ready to start working out as soon as equipment is received, are several other prominent former college players, said Major Wade, a former Duke mentor.

Included are Joe Brunanski, tackle, Don Scott, back, Ohio State; Dick Schweidler, Utah, back; Vic Markhov, tackle, Washington; Joe Lindahl, end, Nebraska State Teachers; Pete Holovak, back, Fordham; Henry Gude, center, Vanderbilt; Leonard Dickey, tackle, Texas A. & M., and Kimbrough.

Great Lakes Amateur Golf Now National

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The Great Lakes Amateur Golf Tournament, inaugurated last year by the Chicago District Golf Association, became national in scope today with announcement by the C. D. G. A. that the name had been changed to the Chicago National Amateur Tournament.

C. D. G. A. officials also said the original dates for the 1942 event, scheduled for the Knollwood Club at suburban Lake Forest, August 17-20, would be extended one day. Sixty-four instead of the 32 low scorers in medal play will qualify for match competition this year, they added.

Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., twice a finalist in the National Amateur now canceled for the duration, won last year's Great Lakes tournament. Both he and Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, 1941 runner-up, were expected to be among the starters. The field will be limited to 150 players.

The winner will receive the Joseph G. Davis Memorial Trophy and a $100 war bond.

Splash Party

A Signal Corps Splash Party will be held tomorrow night, 7 to 9 o'clock, at the Chevy Chase swimming pool. Exhibition diving by A. A. U. champions will be featured. Among the divers will be Irving Bridges, D. C. A. A. U. junior champion; Nick Sheridan, the senior champion, and Jimmy Schim, widely known clown diver.

My One and Ida Time in Deadlock at Cumberland Track

Al Bocson Loses 'Bug' After Race

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 5.—M. B. Goss' My One was closing with a rush and W. B. Casilear's Ida Time was stopping badly when the pair came into the wire at the end of the Dapper Dan purse, featuring the Wednesday program here. The judges called for a photo on the finish and the picture revealed what many thought they had seen—a deadheat. The officials used a magnifying glass to try to separate the pair before flashing the all-even signal on the results board.

The Dapper Dan Club of Pittsburgh had a traveling bag to present to the winning jockey and announced that the prize would be duplicate. However, Jockeys Sammy Palumbo and Al Bocson marched off the infield platform, each carrying an end of the bag.

Backers of the two horses seemed satisfied with the result. The deadheat greeted with cheers on all sides and bettors split the mutuel. Backers of Ida Time, a 12 to 1 shot on the approximate odds board, collected $8.90 for each $2 investment while those who wagered on My One, the 6 to 5 favorite, took down $3.10. The rivals were clocked in 1:23 for the six and a half furlongs.

Bocson Loses Bug

Although only half a victory, the race saw the graduation from the apprentice saddle ranks of Bocson, a Detroit boy. The winner was Bocson's 40th since he rode his first winner at Charles Town's Spring meetings of 1941. Under the rules, he lost his 5-pound allowance.

Ida Time and My One came into the deadheat from different angles. Palumbo took the former to the front at once, set a good pace with her and she staggered into the wire to save half a lost. My One was caught in a tangle leaving the gate and Bocson was forced to take up. However, My One gained steadily thereafter and closed with the aforementioned rush that lacked an inch of a full victory.

The program was one of close finishes. The card opened with G. D. McCleary's Linden Girl and John Bosley jr.'s Feeling High inches apart with Linden Girl given the nod over the favorite. Big Sneeze was third to the $9.20 shot. Root rode Linden Girl and came right back to complete the daily double with a front ride on Claude Feltner's Terry May. This one scored by five lengths with Hedda Gab and Carolyn T. closest. The winner was a $3.90 favorite. The daily double paid $17.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LINDEN GIRL, $9.20, $4.10, $3.50; FEELING HIGH, $3.70, $3.10; BIG SNEEZE, $12.00.

LINDEN GIRL was in first flight from start and under vigorous handling rallied approaching stretch and closed with bold rush to catch FEELING HIGH in final jump. FEELING HIGH saved ground to take command, drew out, but weakened badly in final 70 yards. BIG SNEEZE had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:09. Winner, Claude Feltner's ch. f. (3), by Chestnut Oak—Willie Mae. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERRY MAY, $3.90, $3.60, $2.70; HEDDA GAB, $7.90, $4.80; QUATRE SONG, $3.40.

TERRY MAY took command at once, saved ground while setting pace and held away thereafter under good handling. HEDDA GAB lacked speed early, improved position steadily and closed willingly. QUATRE SONG raced wide and closed gamely. EL JELIS, off sluggishly, made up some ground on inside.

Daily Double, LINDEN GIRL and TERRY MAY, Paid $17.60

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:41. Winner, D. Gude's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDA TIME (dead heat), $8.90, $6.90, $5.00; MY ONE (dead heat), $3.10, $3.50, $3.00; INDIAN SEA, $3.50.

IDA TIME went to front at once, set good pace and held on under strong handling while tiring. MY ONE was caught between horses leaving gate and was pulled up, went to contention gamely and closed with good energy to be up for dead heat. INDIAN SEA closed willingly. RING UP was hard used while close up and weakened.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:50½. Off at 4:51. Winner, Mrs. P. G. †Dead heat for fourth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GINOBIL, $3.40, $3.30, $2.60; COL. SCOTT, $16.80, $6.80; CORORA, $3.40.

GINOBIL, showing fine speed from gate, set fast pace and was ridden out. COL. SCOTT chased winner throughout, but wasn't good enough. CORORA, hard hustled throughout, had no excuses. SUN SWEEP, showing fine speed from start, tired and just lasted to dead heat CAFFEINE for fourth. CAFFEINE raced wide and closed gamely. Others were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:37½. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Miles' b. g. (7), by Jamestown—Justa Pal. Trained by C. P. Miles. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES PAL, $9.20, $3.80, $3.50; GROUCHER'S BOY, $3.20, $2.50; CHANNING, $3.40.

JAMES PAL, close up from start, responded when placed to pressure and wore down GROUCHER'S BOY to win going away. GROUCHER'S BOY was sent to front at once, was under drive throughout and weakened in closing stages. CHANNING closed with good energy. JALAINE was held safe.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3 and 4 years olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:28. Off at 6:29. Winner, S. H. Hall's ch. f. (4), by Misstep—Poseur. Trained by P. Lawrence. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:54.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOT ALONE, $11.40, $4.40, $3.30; REAL BOY, $2.90, $2.30; GAY BOO, $3.40.

NOT ALONE was hustled to front, withstood repeated challenges of REAL BOY and held sway to end under strong riding. REAL BOY lugged in during early stages and Smith was unable to do horse justice, went to outside to take brief lead between calls and weakened right at close. GAY BOO saved ground, moved up boldly and then weakened. MY PAL BILL was not a serious factor.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

There's a parking lot not more than 300 yards from the track with a big sign: "Park here and save tires, oil and gas." The parking charges graduate according to the distance from the track, starting with a dime and going up to two bits. However, there's no charge for parking in the grounds as long as space lasts. Walter Haight, the colt, goes again today if owner Clark doesn't order him scratched. Shorty, as he's known around the barn, is sharp as a tack but appears to be slightly over his head. However, he is going to be trying and 02 might get you $14. Training methods seldom seen in these times made some of the horsemen here yesterday morning rub their eyes. Owner-Trainer Frank Frisbie sent the gelding a quarter in 0:26 4-5, then cooled him out and put him on the track again for a half in 0:54 1-5. This method, often used in the old days, is called "repeating." It serves to get the excess weight off a horse. Frisbie, from Laurel, Md., is said to have used the same tactics when he conditioned Effendi for his victory in the 1908 Preakness. Despite the fact that the crowd was slightly off opening day, betting topped the first card of last year's meeting. When good half-mile track rides are discussed don't forget Buddy Root's performance on Linden Star in yesterday's first race. He never gave up and the 3-year-old caught Feeling High in the last fraction of the final jump. Marandan, the horse that figured in a stimulating case at Hagerstown, has been purchased by George S. Fockler. Pat Poluch will do the training. Mike Prendergast, former scribe, is the proud father of a boy—the tenth child for the Prendergasts. Trainer Bowes Bond is at Saratoga where he hopes to pick up some runners. There are plenty of steeplechase horses here but they are not owned by enough different interests to make up a betting field. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan hopes to stage a couple of jumping events before the meeting ends.

BILL.

First race—DEAUFOOT appears well placed in the day's opener. Needs only a share of the racing luck. OUTCOME did everything asked here on opening day and is a threat. ELIZABETH K. should take part of the pay.

Second race—TAUT has speed to go to the top with these and I believe this one will stay there. SCOOTIE will be right there if taken off the reserve list. BRAINCHILD is a possibility.

Third race—INGERFIRE is better than that recent effort. This one has plenty of speed and may take it all. DARTING STAR has been freshened and belongs close. CHIEF TEDDY closes well and will be promient in the stretch run.

Fourth race—PANDORA MINT has been kidding. This one is capable of leading all the way. Will be all the more effective if the mud comes up. DON DASH and SMART LAD to take care of the place and show.

Fifth race—RANDLE'S QUEEN was knocked and blocked last out and then ran a good race. GLITTER GIRL has plenty of speed and is one to beat. WALTER HAIGHT ran his race last out and that would make him dangerous.

Sixth race—ZACPAM is better than that last. With an energetic ride this one could take it all. GROUCHY will be along in time to be a keen factor in the final stages. ALAMODE for the minor money.

Seventh race—MISS KSAR was bothered in her recent race. Seems a bit over her head with these but I'm going to take my chances in a shot for price. YANKEE LAD has been rested and belongs close. MR. JIMMIE awoke at Bel Air and is dangerous.

Eighth race—GROUCHER'S BOY is well down the list but will be hard to beat if in action. BIG GAY and CAMP MEETING to account for the place and show awards.

Best bet—INGERFIRE.

Evans, Wilson Golf Winners

Mrs. Davie, Johnson Gain Net Honors

40 Teams Hampered By Weather at Manor In Mixed Scotch Foursome Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The District Golf Association's annual Mixed Scotch Foursome tournament came within a few raindrops of being weathered out yesterday at Manor Country Club but 40 teams finally braved the elements and Prince Georges and Kenwood Clubs supplied the winners.

The surprise low gross scorers were Kenwood's Mrs. Fred W. Evans and Joe Wilson, last minute partners, who played the back nine first and turned in 38 strokes but came back in 42 for an 80, best score of the day by a pair of shots.

Mrs. Peter Davie and J. C. Johnson tied for low net at 73 with two other teams but their names were pulled from the hat. The Prince Georges duo scored 45-47, 92 and subtracted 19 handicap strokes, playing the usual selective drives and alternate shots.

The all-day rain held the starting field to 40 teams. The tournament was called off once, around 1:30, but the contestants on hand who had used valuable gas and taken time off from work for an afternoon's golf insisted on playing and the officials reversed their decision.

The rain made the course too long for most of the women golfers, however, and for the first time in many years all scores were out of the 70s. The favored team of Mrs. W. R. Stokes and Harry G. Pitt, who had won a club event with a gross 73 and the Maryland State Mixed Two-Ball at Chevy Chase with a 72, soared to 85, with five three-putt greens and three double bogeys.

Ralph W. Benner of Kenwood pulled the day's prize shot to enable him and Mrs. Gladys G. Surratt of the same club to take second low net with an 87-13, 73. Benner knocked a full six-iron into the cup on the par four sixteenth hole for a birdie three and the shot helped them to a back nine of 42 after going out in 45.

Third team in the net 73 bracket and the one left in the hat after the others were drawn was Kenwood's Gerry Weible and Dick Melvin, with 41, 42, 83-10, 73. Miss Weible and Melvin played their tee to green shots as well as any team in the field, but they ran into a flock of three-putts on the wet and heavy greens.

Pair Tie for Fourth

Two teams tied for fourth net and Manor's Mrs. J. T. Powell and William A. Covert, with 43, 42, 85-11, 74, won in the draw over Mrs. J. E. Nell, Manor, and Jim Wilmeth, Prince Georges, with 42, 41, 83-9, 74.

Second low gross went to Mrs. T. O. Brandon, the Columbia Club champion and Dr. W. R. McLister, with 39-43, 82. They had the best score of the day on the woods nine but too many coming back. Third low net went to Mrs. Stokes and Pitt.

Mrs. Evans, handicap chairman of the District Women's Golf Association, and Wilson, who made his foremost tournament bid in this section when he went to the semi-finals of the Middle Atlantic last month at Manor, were paired by mutual friends at the last minute when Wilson's original partner, Mrs. Don Dudley, was found to be without a District handicap.

The low gross scorers started on the back nine and using the formula of Wilson's drives, Mrs. Evans' seconds and steady but not spectacular putting, had a 38 with six pars and three bogeys. They had a little trouble on the woods, but not too much.

Pro-Amateur Set At Hillendale Club

The pro-amateur scene shifts to Hillendale Club for the next Maryland State—Middle Atlantic P. G. A. event next Monday, August 10, according to notices sent yesterday by the respective secretaries, Emmet Gary and Gene Larkin.

Mid-Atlantic Greenkeepers will also meet Monday in Baltimore at the Five Farms Club for golf at 1 p. m. and a business meeting at 5:30.

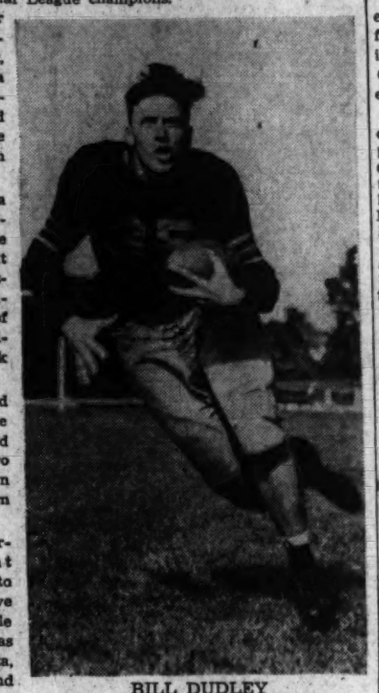
Pros will be allowed three partners in the Hillendale event, with a pro sweepstakes and amateur handicap tournament included.

Virginians Confident Dudley Will Star Against Bears

Cavalier Grid Great on College Squad Which Will Face Chicago August 31

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 5.—Another chapter in the football life of William McGarvey Dudley, who last year made gridiron history at the University of Virginia will be written August 31 at Soldiers Field in Chicago, where the college All-Stars will battle the tough Chicago Bears, National Professional League champions.



BILL DUDLEY

Selected to the All-Star squad through a Nation-wide poll, Bill Dudley, who rose to All-America honors in 1941, is generally regarded as the Old Dominion's most versatile backfield artist of modern years.

Those who were still a bit skeptical about Dudley's ability when he turned in his Cavalier suit last November were mostly convinced in early January when the pride of Bluefield led the East All-Stars to a 6-6 deadlock with the West aces.

Dudley rifled a 22-yard touchdown pass for the Easterners and intercepted four Western tosses, two that cut off touchdown drives deep in Eastern territory.

All of last year, Virginians wondered what Dudley would be able to do if he had to drive through the line and circle the flanks of such teams as Oregon State, Minnesota, Notre Dame, Duke and some of the other elevens which specialize in a stalwart forward wall and an air-tight secondary defense.

The Chicago Bears, with a lineup studded with gridiron greats of the past few years, have possibly the most potent eleven in football today, and Virginians as well as thousands of other fans throughout the South will be keeping an eye on what takes place in Chicago August 31.

Dudley, awarded the "Player of the Year" trophy of the Robert W. Maxwell Memorial Football Club in Philadelphia for 1941, really shot into the national grid limelight in 1940 when he took the opening kickoff of Tennessee's defensive Volunteers and waltzed 87 yards for a touchdown.

In receiving the Maxwell award, Dudley's name was added to the four previous winners of the trophy—Clint Frank, Davey O'Brien, Niles Kinnick and Tommy Harmon.

Dudley once paraded 47 yards through the entire Navy team for a score . . . led the Nation last year in point-making . . . kicked 23 extra points from placement . . . completed 58 of 107 forward passes . . . had a 36-yard average in punting . . . gained 957 yards rushing in 157 attempts.

Dudley—many people believe—reached the prime of his career last Thanksgiving when he ran wild against North Carolina State at Chapel Hill to bury the Tarheels under a 28-7 score.

Dudley sailed around end for 87 yards and one touchdown, shot down the sidelines on a reverse for 74 yards and another, zig-zagged through the line for a third, passed 12 yards for a fourth tally and kicked all four extra points.

After the game, a North Carolina student mumbled, "He'd make any team look sick." So it is little wonder that Virginians are anxious to see what Bill Dudley will be able to do against the veteran Chicago Bears.

West, South Dominate in Culver Tennis

By the Associated Press

Culver, Ind., Aug. 5.—California and the Southern States continued to dominate play today in the National Junior and Boys' Tennis Tournament.

In the junior division four of the eight singles quarter-finalists were from the Golden State, while in junior doubles two combinations from California survived third round eliminations this afternoon.

Three outstanding Southern players entered the semifinals of the boys' singles along with a single Californian. In boys' doubles three teams from Dixie joined the Mathey brothers, Dean and McDonald, from Princeton, N. J., in the next to the last round.

Tom Falkenburg of Hollywood upset second seeded Harry Lilas, jr., of San Francisco in junior singles play this morning, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5, to join his brother Bob, Defending Champion Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Arthur McDonald of San Gabriel, all fellow Californians, in the quarter-finals.

Bob Flakenburg and Patty, the first seeded doubles team, defeated Marvin Beskin, Chicago, and Richard Randall, Oak Park, Ill., 6—1, 6—4, this afternoon in the third round of junior doubles. At the same time Tom Falkenburg and McDonald were defeating Claude Luke, Tampa, Fla., and Howard McCall, Atlanta, Ga., 6—1, 7—5.

In boys' singles Tom Malloy of Memphis, Tenn., upset fourth seeded Alan Watson of Short Hills, N. J., 6—1, 7—5, to join Wade Herren, Birmingham, Ala., and Billy Smith of Orlando, Fla., in the semifinals. Gleen Bassett of Santa Monica, Calif., made up the quartet of semi-finalists.

The Mathey brothers each lost his boys' singles match play but they recovered their form while teaming together this afternoon to defeat Herbert Behrens, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and William Ogden, New Orleans, 6—1, 8—6.

Pairings for tomorrow:

Junior Singles (Quarter-finals)

Mrs. Lewis, Wright Win Duckpin Match

Mrs. Madge Lewis totaled 598 last night at Clarendon Bowling Center to outscore her high average partner, Al Wright, and lead the way to victory over Lillian Copeland and Paul James in a mixed doubles match, 1193 to 1156. Mrs. Lewis shared with James the honor of rolling 142 for high game of the evening. Mrs. Copeland had 546 for her set, while James had 610 to outbowl Wright by 15 sticks.

Sunday afternoon the Lewis-Wright duo will try for their seventh win in ten starts at Northeast Temple when they take on Bill Gartrell and an expert woman bowler yet to be selected.

Four stars of the Men's and Ladies' District Leagues will roll a mixed doubles match tonight at the Ice Palace, starting at 8 o'clock, with Mildred Brockdorff and Dave Williams engaging Ruth McClintic and Al Terry.

The inaugural meet of the men's doubles tournament at Bethesda Bowling Center got off to an auspicious start last night with 22 teams competing, a total of 44 duckpinners. A gross set of 809 by Clifton Henson and Paul James won first prize of $21 with Frank Riley and Bill King next with 806 good for $14. The event will continue next week.

$75,000 Goal Set For Packer-Army Grid Relief Game

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Aug. 5.—Green Bay Packer officials and civic leaders, meeting here today, set $75,000 as the amount they plan to raise for Army emergency relief through the Packer-Army all-star professional football game in Milwaukee September 13.

A committee of Milwaukee businessmen agreed to help promote the game and solicit 1000 contributions of $25 each. A reserve seat would be given with each contribution.

Marquette University is donating its stadium for the game and no player nor member of the Packer organization will be paid for his services.

Busick Named Sports Head At G. W. U.

Washington athletics from the shady side to a sunny spot in the intercollegiate world.

Busick, together with Max Farrington, Reinhart's predecessor as director of athletics, and Reinhart were the big three behind the clean-up of George Washington athletics to the point where the school now is on the preferred list of all sports rivals.

Never spectacular, Busick has always been thorough, honest and loyal and in a job where amiable relations with public and press are vital, he has never faltered.

These same qualities are expected to see him through on his new position, which, for all his previous background in college sports, is something new to him.

His appointment was hailed by associates and alumni alike.

An Ideal Combination

Dr. Marvin was enthusiastic, hailing the J. B. team of Johnny Busick and Johnny Baker as "ideal" for the university.

"Busick'll make us a mighty good man," he said, "because he has the background of the university. With Baker as football coach, we'll have an ideal setup, with two of our own boys, young and enthusiastic and ready to do a good job."

Marvin revealed that Farrington will remain in the newly created post as adviser to the president on athletics, and that Charles Wallace, Busick's assistant in sports publicity, will take over much of that work, with Busick in a supervisory capacity.

Baker, former Colonial football star who replaced Reinhart as head football coach this summer, said:

"I am more than happy that Busick was named to the position. There is considerable administrative and contact work to be handled by the athletic director, and Busick's experience and varied background equip him perfectly for the task."

Busick himself made the statement one would expect from such a modest fellow, simply:

"I am overwhelmed by this honor and I only hope that I will satisfy everyone concerned."

Manor Golf Event Deadline Saturday

Manor Club members have until Saturday at 6 p. m. to enter the annual two-man team championship, which swings into first round matches on Sunday. No qualifying is necessary.

The best ball handicap event will run through the next month. Clagett Stevens will accept entries at the golf shop.

Semifinals in the Manor women's club championship will be played this morning, with finals tomorrow. Mrs. W. R. Stokes will meet Mrs. G. E. Pugh in the upper bracket match and Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. Leo Butler will clash in the other round of four attractions.

Obituaries

J. H. Fitzgerald's Funeral Service Held in Rockville

Rites for John H. Fitzgerald, 88, descendent of Philip Barton Key, uncle of Francis Scott Key, composer of "The Star-Spangled Banner," were held July 30 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Rockville, Md. Mr. Fitzgerald was erroneously identified in The Post July 30 as John H. Scott, descendant of Francis Scott Key.

Born near Cloppers, Md., Mr. Fitzgerald had lived in Washington about 20 years. The last two years he spent at Sacred Heart Home until June when he was taken to Georgetown University Hospital. He died on July 28.

Mr. Fitzgerald was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's Church and of St. Vincent de Paul Society. He was an uncle of F. Scott Fitzgerald, novelist ("The Great Gatsby") and Hollywood writer, who died about a year ago.

Surviving are two nephews, the Rev. Thomas Delihant, S. J. of New York, and Gerald Delihant of Halethorpe, Md., and two nieces, Mrs. Richard C. Taylor of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Anabelle Sprague of Miami, Fla.

Funeral Held In Philadelphia For William E. Fort

Funeral services for William Edwards Fort, 67, former Department of Justice official who died Monday at his Ventnor, N. J., home, were held yesterday in Philadelphia, Pa.

In 1933, Judge Fort was appointed special assistant to the United States Attorney General, then Homer S. Cummings. He resigned in 1940 because of ill health.

Early in his career he was senior judge of the Jefferson County Circuit Court in Alabama. After his retirement to private practice, he was associated with Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black.

He leaves his wife and three children, Dr. William E. Fort, jr. of Rollins College, Fla.; Robertson M. Fort of the Department of Agriculture here, and Mrs. A. J. Ghisalbert of Long Island, N. Y.

Mrs. C. A. Wright's Services to Be Held Here Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Carolyn A. Wright, who died yesterday at her home at the Woodley, Mintwood Place and Columbia Road Northwest, will be held tomorrow at 2134 Wyoming Avenue Northwest, at 2 p. m. Burial will be at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mrs. Wright, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., came to Washington in 1904. Her late husband, Charles E. Wright, was a Michigan geologist.

She was a member of Calvary Baptist Church and later of the National Memorial Baptist Church. Other organizations in which she was active are the Dupont Chapter of the Young Women's Christian Association, the Women's Christian temperance Union, the Waldensian Society and the Washington Club.

Survivors are three sons, Charles W., Clare A. and Fred E. Wright, and ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Three grandsons are in the armed forces.

John W. Fletcher Dies in Arlington

John Wesley Fletcher, 66, of 4141 Lorcum Lane, Arlington, Va., died yesterday after a long illness.

Mr. Fletcher was employed by Julius Garfinkle & Co. before his retirement several years ago, and before that was for 40 years an employe at Brentano's book store here.

Services will be at the residence tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens, Arlington.

He leaves two sons, Gordon H. and Loring D. Fletcher; a daughter, Mrs. Guy Lane, and a brother, William H. Fletcher, of Washington.

Littlefield Rites To Be Held Today

Services for Daniel Boone Littlefield, 73, who died Tuesday at his Greenbelt, Md., home, will be held today at Chambers' Riverdale funeral home at 10 a. m. Burial will be in the Greenbelt Cemetery.

Mr. Littlefield was a native of Dubuque, Iowa, and for many years was a draftsman in the War Department.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Loretta Littlefield, and a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Freeman of Greenbelt.

Burial Tomorrow For T. R. Gray

Services for Thomas R. Gray, 83, who died Tuesday at Mount Alto Hospital, will be held tomorrow at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Gray was a veteran soldier, serving his first enlistment from 1882 to 1890. He has been retired from the service for many years.

A native of the District, he lived in Arlington most of his life. He leaves two nephews, Maj. Carroll Gray, U. S. Army, and Robert M. Gray, both of Washington.

John Wagner, Klondike Pioneer, Dead at 80

Juneau, Aug. 5 (AP).—John Wagner, 80, who during the Klondike gold rush was known as the strongest man on the Chilkoot Pass Trail, died yesterday.

Wagner came to the territory in 1896 and established a reputation as the only packer who could carry a cook stove.

Living Costs Hamper Latins, Galarza Says

An upward surge in living costs resulting from the war in which foodstuffs and other essentials have jumped from 30 to 40 per cent, coupled with lack of shipping and inefficiency of price-control measures constitutes an alarming picture among the laboring classes of Latin America, Ernesto Galarza, chief of the Division of Labor and Social Information, Pan-American Union, said last night.

Galarza spoke at the World Federation of Education Associations Conference, now in its fourth week of discussion on world problems at American University.

Galarza directly blamed the war for "an upward curve of living costs, the effect of which is becoming more aggravated month by month." He added that increases as much as 300 per cent in certain lines, such as drugs, are not rare.

"The lack of shipping, the procurement program of the United States in Latin America and the relative inefficiency of much of the price-control lepislation have . . . placed a burden on Latin-American workers which it is hard to see how they are going to carry," Galarza said.

"The war has affected maritime as well as land transport, mainly because of lack of rubber, mechanical replacements and fuel. The textile industry, especially rayon, has been hard hit. Housing construction, until recently one of the main backlogs of employment in the larger capitals, has been curtailed."

The speaker said the predicament of the small farmer, the share cropper and the tenant farmer "has worsened noticeably in the past few months."

Referring to labor's attitude toward political aspects of the war, Galarza said:

"Anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi sentiment has been firmly rooted in the trade union movement since the first days of the Spanish Civil War. Today the most determined, belligerent and uncompromising forces supporting the democratic cause of the United States are the trade unions."

The efficiency of workers, upon whom production depends, rests, Galarza said, upon the solution of four basic problems—health, housing, nutrition and vocational training.

"International action, and that quickly, which recognizes and permits the participation of organized labor itself in the solution of these problems would go a long way to strengthening continental economy," Galarza predicted. He added that such international action would require the active leadership of labor in the United States, "which has been slow in recognizing the relationship between the low purchasing power of the Latin American masses and the raising of high living standards throughout the Western Hemisphere."

Trolley-Stop Prospecting Pickings Slim

Strap-hangers waiting on the loading platform in front of the Willard Hotel Tuesday evening went home dazzled with the thought of treasure-trove at every street corner. An earnest young angler, casting with an old coat-hanger and a largish wad of chewing gum, fished up 35 cents from the cracks between the wooden boards of the platform quicker than you could say Simple Simon.

Lest the impressed observers sneak out in the dead of night to rip up all the other platforms and retire on the findings, the Capital Transit Co. (which may have the same idea) yesterday issued the following advice:

Pickings Slim

Pickings are usually very slim—a penny here, a nickel there, only once in a great while so much as a dime. The young man's bonanza, according to the transit company was obviously a fluke.

Whatever change is dropped by passengers in too much of a hurry getting on or off a streetcar is traditionally regarded as the just loot of the workmen who on occasion rip up the platforms for repair or replacement.

"Any coin that shows up goes to the laborer who spots it first," a spokesman for the maintenance said. He asserted that the coins were usually infrequent and of small enough denomination to prevent any mass riots on the part of contesting workers.

Nevertheless, Tuesday's fisherman would be considered by the workers definitely a poacher, and better off devoting his talents and his chewing gum to the District Salvage Committee.

Third Rail Slot, Too

Just to be tantalizing, however, the transit company added that objects of some value are forever being dropped through the slot between the street-car tracks onto the third rail. Just last week, it was reported, a gentleman dropped a handsome gold-headed cane rather precisely into such a slit. Hardly a day passes without frantic calls to rescue keys from this trap, and within memory a woman dropped a jeweled necklace into a third-rail slot.

But grate-fishermen are seriously cautioned against going after this catch. The touch of a coat-hanger on the third rail and Tuesday's bright young man would have got, literally, the shock of his life.

Rites to Be Held Friday Afternoon For W. E. Dulin, Sr.

Services for William E. Dulin, sr., 73, who died Monday in Ann Arbor, Mich., will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral home, Fourteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Dulin, who had been with Griffith Consumers Co. since 1917, was a native of Little Washington, Va., and has lived here for many years. He was a member of Lafayette Lodge 19, F. A. A. M., and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Gebeau, of Ann Arbor, Mich., a son, Eugene Dulin, and three brothers, Ernest, Lee and Paul Dulin, all of Washington.

D. C. Lad First To Finish R. A. F. Course in Florida

Clewiston, Fla., Aug. 5 (AP).—William A. Watkins, 22, of Washington, D. C., today became the first American to complete flight training with the R. A. F. in Florida.

He received his wings at graduation exercises at Riddle Field here, one of the five centers in the United States which will continue to train R. A. F. cadets under the recently revised pilot program.

Watkins comes from a fighting family. He has four brothers in military service and his father, Col. D. W. Watkins, is second in command at Eglin Field, Fla.

He was a student at the University of Virginia when he enlisted with the R. A. F. as the quickest way to action against the Axis.

He will leave soon for England with the rest of his class to receive final combat training.

Three other Americans are still at Riddle Field. They are William D. Grant, 21, Atlanta, Ga.; Sturgis M. Fay, 20, Watertown, Mass., and Nelson D. Jay, 30, Ponca City, Okla.

W. T. Amole Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for William Thomas Amole, 38, who died Tuesday, will be held today at his home, 3819 Veazey Street Northwest, at 2 p. m. Burial will be at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Amole, an electrical contractor at Franklin Park, Va., was a native of Meadowbrook, Va., but had made his home in Washington for the past 20 years. He was scheduled to go to Hawaii for defense work in a short time.

Mr. Amole was a member of the Columbia chapter of the Loyal Order of Moose, and was a grandson of a Confederate officer, Capt. William Steele.

Survivors are his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Amole, and two sisters, Miss Elizabeth Amole and Mrs. Alyce A. Knighton.

WPB Reveals 22 Violations On Steel Orders

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson yesterday disclosed that the WPB compliance section has been investigating operations of 800 major steel warehouses for two months and that, thus far, action has been taken in 22 cases of violations of WPB orders intended to curb the flow of steel into unauthorized channels.

The disclosure was made by Nelson in announcing that H. J. Dowd, a compliance branch investigator, has been sent to New Orleans to investigate charges of "black market" operations made before a House subcommittee Tuesday by Frank G. Higgins, general manager of the Higgins Corp.

Higgins told a House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee investigating cancellation of a Higgins Corporation shipbuilding contract, that he had proof of the existence of a steel "black market" with ample supplies stored in a nation-wide string of warehouses.

Nelson's investigation of so-called "black market" operations which are a possible factor in the current steel shortage, was announced as the Iron Age, iron and steel trade journal, reported that the number of war plants complaining that they were on the verge of shutting down has increased in the past few weeks.

Regulations Strict

WPB orders impose strict regulations on steel warehouses to guard against leaks into unauthorized opeartions, Nelson stated. So that total amounts of steel going through warehouses will not be excessive, each firm is assigned a quota for each quarter and no warehouse is allowed to accept steel beyond its quota, Nelson explained.

Since the first of the month, warehouses have been forbidden to sell steel on ratings lower than A-1-A because of the increasing shortage of steel for war production, Nelson stated. He added that the monthly quota for the country's 1500 warehouses averaged less than 275 tons of varied steel products per warehouse.

Nelson explained that warehouses carry on a useful war function in making it possible for plants to obtain fast deliveries of small but essential quantities of steel.

"Attempting to restore Order"

The Iron Age declared that "the wavering of the materials distribution setup, which has been out of balance ever since the war began, overshadowed "all recent developments."

"WPB frantically is attempting to restore order," the journal said. "The WPB has long appreciated the need for better balance, but apparently did not realize the thinness of supply lines to certain plants and the length of time required before procedural changes are understood and accomplished."

The Senate Investigating Committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri will start public hearings on the steel shortage at 10 a. m. today. Reese Taylor, head of WPB's Iron and Steel Branch, will be the first witness.

Dr. Waller Addresses Junior Board Today

Dr. George Platt Waller, United States charge d' affaires at Luxemburg at the time of the German invasion, will address the Junior Board of Commerce at their weekly luncheon today at 12:30 in the Annapolis Hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Following his return from Europe last August, Dr Waller, working with the United States Army, made a lecture tour to Army posts in the East and South. After this he was appointed representative of the State Department and chairman of an interdepartmental committee composed of representatives of the Army, Navy, Department of Justice and other Government agencies for war work.

Novarro Asks Permit To Join U. S. Army

Mexico City, Aug. 5 (INS).—A formal petition from Ramon Novarro, the movie actor, was received today asking the permanent committee of the Congress of Mexico to grant him permission to enlist in the United States Army.

According to provisions of the Mexican constitution, the permission of Congress is required to prevent the loss of citizenship by any Mexican citizen enlisting in a foreign armed force.

American Marks 68th Anniversary

Today marks the sixty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the American Building Association, second largest home building group in Washington. Total resources, according to Wilfred H. Blanz, secretary, are at the highest point in history, being in excess of $15,000,000.

When the institution was established in 1874, Washington was a city of 150,000 and the founders of the association had in mind a neighborhood business catering solely to the citizens of the southeast section. This idea prevaled until 1910 when assets had grown to the million dollar mark. With the subsequent rapid expansion of the city and the suburban areas, the association expanded activities and its resources amounted to $7,500,000 by 1930.

Loans made on first mortgages in the past year totaled $3,543,000, and 1090 new share holders opened accounts. The association surplus and reserves is given at $1,400,000, Blanz said.

Officers of the American include Milton H. Prosperi, chairman of the board; Charles H. Kindle, president; Arthur C. Blaser, vice president; Blanz, secretary; Howard B. Kramer, treasurer; George A. Brennan, assistant secretary, and R. Lee Baxter, assistant treasurer.

Directors are John E. Mergner, Chatham M. Towers, Thomas S. Sergeon, Charles A. Rossiter, Dr. William C. Farmer, Bernard J. Coyle, W. Dudley Spicknall and Balser, Prosperi, Blanz, Kindle and Kramer.

Potomac Insurance Assets at New High

The assets of the Potomac Insurance Co. of the District of Columbia have reached a new high of $8,047,113, of which $2,706,426 represents surplus to policy holders, it was announced at the 112th annual meeting of stockholders.

The following were elected directors for the ensuing year:

Arthur Burston, John H. Grady, Charles E. Hood, Christian F. Jacobsen, Thomas C. Moore, Daniel Mungall, F. Norie-Miller, S. Norie-Miller, C. F. R. Ogilby, George T. Dearborn, Douglas R. Phillips and Frederick Richardson.

Decline Continues In Gasoline Stores

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—Total stores of gasoline contipued to decline in the week ended August 1 while light and heavy fuel oil supplies advanced, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Total finished and unfinished gasoline stocks dipped 957,000 barrels during the week to 81,324,000, compared with 82,281,000 a week ago and 84,668,000 a year ago.

The supply of distillates (light fuel oil) was up 1,564,000 barrels to 37,530,000, while residual (heavy fuel oil) was up 567,000 barrels to 78,383,000.

Average crude production in the United States decreased 307,550 barrels to 3,383,050 daily compared with 3,695,250 a year ago.

Crude runs to stills advanced 14,000 barrels to a daily average of 3,672,000 compared with 3,658,000 last week. Estimated refining operations were at 78.4 per cent of capacity against 78.1 per cent the previous week.

Estimated total gasoline production advanced 274,000 barrels to 11,138,000 compared with 10,864,000 last week.

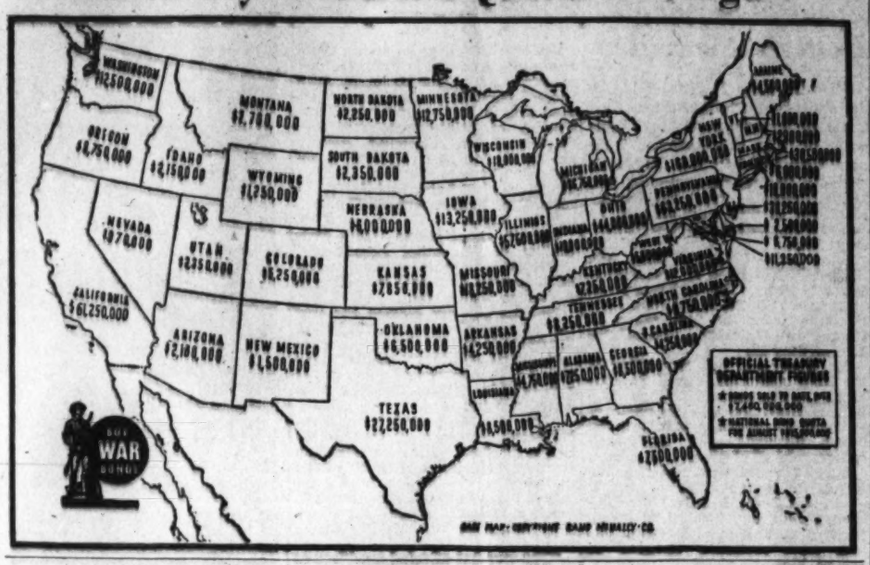
U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas for August



Gas Company Reports Drop In Net Income

Gross operating revenues of the Washington Gas Light Co. for June, 1942, as shown by the monthly report filed with the Public Utilities Commission, amounted to $653,630, compared with $603,857 for June, 1941, an increase of $49,773.

Operating expenses increased $24,350 over 1941 to $620,115, with a resultant increase in net operating revenues of $25,423 for the month. There was a decrease of $9130 in nonoperating income resulting chiefly from governmental restrictions placed upon merchandise sales. Income deducations were $9449 higher, and the final result of operations for June was a loss of $16,944 which was, however, an improvement of $6844 over last year.

The company's net income for the first half of this year was $858,974, compared with $1,036,584 for the corresponding period in 1941. The reduction of $177,610 is attributable to higher taxes, the provision for which was $138,500 greater this year than last, and to other increased costs resulting largely from war conditions.

The monthly report also shows a gain of 10 per cent in the volume of gas sales for the month, the sales being 966,947 metric cubic feet this year, compared with 881,794 metric cubic feet for June, 1941.

Meters in service in the District increased 10,444 over last year to a total of 181,156. The company expended approximately $198,200 in June and $883,700 in the first six months of this year for extensions to its property in Washington.

Farmers to Vote On Wheat Quotas For 1943 in Spring

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard announced yesterday that a proposal to continue marketing quotas for the 1943 wheat crop would be submitted to a referendum of growers next spring before harvest time.

Quotas have been in effect on wheat since 1941. Their continuance must be approved by at least two-thirds of the farmers voting.

The Secretary said he proposed quotas at this time because he wished to get the word out early to farmers now planning their fall wheat seeding operations.

Emphasizing that present stocks of wheat were abundant, Wickard said that every farmer, in order to make his best contribution to the war food program, should divert just as much wheat land as practicable to crops more urgently needed.

4 Institutions Agree To Accept Bond Offer

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—A committee representing owners of the first and refunding 5 per cent bonds of the Florida East Coast Railway announced today four institutional holders represented on the committee had agreed to accept an offer of the Florida National Building Corporation to purchase three million dollars principal amount of the securities at 16½ per $1000 bond.

The committee, headed by Arthur M. Anderson, vice president of J. P. Morgan & Co., informed other owners of deposited bonds they had the right to dispose of their holdings to the same purchaser under the same conditions. The four institutional investors concerned were J. P. Morgan & Co., First National Bank of New York, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Smaller Lamb Crop

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that the 1942 lamb crop totaled about 32,260,000 head, or about 2 per cent below the last year's record crop.

Victory Fund Committees to Sell U. S. Certificates

Victory Fund committees will be used, Secretary Morgenthau announced late yesterday, to stimulate widespread distribution of the $1,500,000,000 issue of certificates of indebtedness, which is being offered today, following similar efforts on the 2½ per cent registered bonds offered earlier in the week.

It was pointed out that it has been the aim of the Treasury to place as large a volume of securities as possible outside the banking system. This is consistent with the policy of utilizing the large reservoir of spendable funds and accumulated savings in the war effort. The Victory Fund organization, the Secretary pointed out, was formed with this program in mind and its available personnel of nearly 20,000 representatives of the banking and securities industries, working on a voluntary basis through Federal Reserve district and regional committees, is well equipped to help carry out this plan.

From incomplete reports on the sale of the registered 2½s, it appears that the demand in many Federal Reserve districts for the first few days of the offering exceeds that of the corresponding period for the orignal issue last May, indicating that the Victory Fund committees are successful in finding new investors interested in this type of security.

George Buffington, assistant to the Secretary, is in charge of the Victory Fund committee program.

Late Earnings Statements

Rail Asks To Extend Bond Maturity Date

By the Associated Press

The Philadelphia, Newton & New York Railroad applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to extend for 25 years from October 1 the maturity date of $507,000 3 per cent and $1,093,000 5 per cent mortgage bonds. All the bonds would bear interest at 3 per cent during the extension.

The Reading Co., which controls the Philadelphia, Newton & New York, would guarantee payment of principal and interest.

Texas Oil Men Sight Greater Crude Output

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Aug. 5.—Texas oil men regard the gradually lessening transportation pinch as an indication of bigger crude production to meet war needs and essential industrial demands in months to come.

The Government's decision to absorb the price difference between tanker rates and rail costs was considered a boon to smaller producers who had been unable to foot the 90-cents-per-barrel loss for rail movement.

Tank car movements have now exceeded 800,000 barrels a day and 5000 additional cars are to be assigned from the Midwest to a pool for cross-country movement. Solid tank trains on a nonstop basis also were calculated to increase rail movements which might reach the 1,000,000 barrel level before the end of the year.

Actual start of construction on the Texas-Illinois pipeline and the removal of local materials in Texas for the Florida pipe line, a link in the intracoastal movement of crude and its products, were encouraging signs.

Texas, the Nation's largest producer, operated this month with a daily allowable about 200,000 barrels greater than that of July.

Operators will present their September nominations at a Statewide proration hearing before the Railroad Commission, Oil Regulatory Agency, Aug. 17.

Chairman Ernest O. Thompson of the commission, outlined these indications of greater demand to come:

Notice yesterday from the Texas Company, Magnolia and others that they are now taking oil they previously were not able to move.

Panhandle crude shortage of 1,500,000 barrels compared with 15,000,000 barrels a few months ago.

The possibility that Texas and New Mexico crudes may be needed to supplement California output in meeting West Coast demands.

The fact that many small operators, and some larger ones, are scraping tank bottoms.

Voters Authorize $8,271,900 of Bonds

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—The Daily Bond Buyer reported today voters in 24 communities in 14 States authorized a total of $8,271,900 of new bond issues in July.

This compared with $6,518,600 in the like months of 1941 and was the largest July total since 1938.

One of the largest single authorizations was $6,500,000 by the Hampton Roads, Va., sanitation district.

In the same month voters rejected proposals calling for a total of $2,674,000 authorizations for various purposes. These were located in 10 communities in seven States.

Sears Sales Decline 15.5 Per Cent in July

Chicago, Aug. 5 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck and Company, mail order and retail merchandise firm, today reported sales of $61,597,319 for July, a decline of 15.5 per cent from July, 1941, sales of $72,869,575. In the first six months of the current fiscal year sales totaled $413,084,007, down 3.6 per cent from $428,367,630 in the same 1941 months.

Power Distribution Continues to Climb

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).—A fourth consecutive weekly rise in electric power distribution was reported today by the Edison Electric Institute for the period ended August 1. Output of 3,649,146,000 kilowatt-hours was .6 of 1 per cent above that of the previous week.

Power production was 11.8 per cent ahead of the 3,263,082,00 kilowatt-hours reported for the week of August 2, 1941.

Wichita Rejects Bond Issue

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 5 (AP).—Wichita voters yesterday rejected a proposal calling for the issuance by the city of $6,127,000 in bonds for the purchase of the privately owned water system.

Contractors Get 800 Loans For War Work

By the Associated Press

War contractors and subcontractors have received more than 800 loans totaling about 450 million dollars in the four months since the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission were authorized to guarantee financing for essential war production, it was announced yesterday.

Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board, said the loans, made through regular banking channels under guarantees provided by the armed services, have ranged from $400 to 40 million dollars.

The financing procedure was authorized in a Presidential executive order to assist contract holders who were getting more war orders than they could finance with their invested capital and normal borrowing capacity.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday directed all field engineers of the Bureau of Mines to prevent the scrapping of usable second hand mining equipment in the scrap metal salvage drive.

Ickes said that valuable and irreplaceable mining machinery was being destroyed for scrap, along with kiln equipment, crushers, and other ore reduction and treatment machinery.

"Such inconsiderate acts must stop at once," he notified the field men. "Every piece of equipment that is usable must be protected and put to work."

The War Production Board yesterday forbade the use of tire friction scrap, which makes a high grade of reclaimed rubber, in rubber soles and heels, in order to save this type of reclaimed rubber for more important uses.

In another action, WPB further restricted the use of mercury. Only 30 per cent of the normal amount may be used in cosmetics, and none at all may be used in the manufacture of fireworks and film developing preparations.

The Office of Price Administration put a price ceiling yesterday on tool handles, wagon spokes and numerous other wood products made by turning or shaping lumber on a cutting machine. It is effective August 9.

In general the order maintains prices at the level of the universal ceiling, by letting each producer keep his mark-up formula and applying it to the March level of costs.

A ceiling of 35⅛ cents an ounce was established yesterday by the Office of Price Administration on imported silver bullion.

The maximum is effective August 10, regardless of existing contracts, OPA emphasized. It represents the price which prevailed in New York in March, 1942, and exceeds the average price which has prevailed since late in 1939.

Price Administrator Leon Henderso nsaid the regulation was necessary to check an inflationary rise in imported silver prices and "remove the incentive for speculative withholding and accumulation in anticipation of rising prices."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 5 (AP).—The grain market suffered another relapse which traders blamed on war news today and prices of wheat, corn and rye futures tumbled a cent a bushel or more at times to ground seasonal lows.

Selling was not of serious proportions, but was met with little support from professional and commercial interests. With speculative and investment buyers virtually out of the market was far as large scale operations are concerned, buying came principally from minor short covering deals, with a sprinkling of mill or flour trade orders. Hedging, though limited, accounted for some of the sales but the new crop movement still was below volume a year ago.

At the extreme wheat was off 1 to 1¾ cents, corn 1½ to 1¼ and rye 1½. Late short covering reduced these losses, but wheat closed ⅛ to 1½ lower than yesterday, September, 1.16⅛@1.16⅝; December, 1.19⅜@1.19⅝; corn ⅛ to 1⅛ down, September, 87; December, 88⅜@89⅛; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ off; soybeans ⅞ to 1 lower and rye ⅛ to 1¼ lower.

Stocks Suffer Repeated Sinking Spells, Market Closes Little Above Day's Low

New York, Aug. 5.—The stock market suffered repeated sinking spells today but also managed occasional comebacks, with the net result being losses of fractions to a point or so at a level a little above the poorest for the day in most cases.

Declines outnumbered advances by about 2½ to 1, with a fair sized group unchanged, while the turnover, 289,919 shares, was a little below Tuesday's gentle action of 319,180 shares.

The drooping spirits of traders, attributed at least in part to continued bad news from the Russian front, spread to the commodity markets, with Chicago wheat off ⅜ to 1⅝ cents a bushel and corn ⅞ to 1⅛ lower. Cotton came back some at New York, but still ended 45 to 55 cents a bale behind.

As in recent days, the earnings and dividend reports of corporations provided mixed fare, with bear news continuing to have the edge. Timken Roller Bearing stock suffered a set-back of 2⅝ points to 37⅞ after announcement of a lower dividend payment.

But a bright feature of the day appeared in the curb exchange, where four preferred issues of Empire Gas & Fuel, a Cities Service subsidiary, added 6½ to 8¾ points—more for a time—after approval by the SEC of a recapitalization plan which gave the stocks an apparent break. Otherwise the curb was ragged. Aluminum Co. of America, Aluminum Ltd., American Cyanamid "B" and Pittsburgh Plate Glass were off major fractions of a point or more. Turover was 51,675 shares, compared with 48,400 in the previous session.

Some of the big board's important losers included Santa Fe, Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, and U. S. Gypsum, all off a point or more, and U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Western Union, United Aircraft, Union Carbide, Southern Railway, Montgomery Ward, American Smelting and Kennecott, all down by top fractions.

In the bond market prices were mixed, but not greatly changed. The United States Government trade, over-the-counter, was a little mixed and uncertain as the attention of most dealers and investors continued focused on the new issue of "tap" 2½s, reported going well.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed down .3 of a point at 36.2.

$283,942,500 Of 'Tap' Bonds Sold First Day

By the Associated Press

First-day sale of the Treasury's new "tap" bonds, the Treasury said yesterday, totaled $283,942,400.

Representing Monday's business, these were the first official figures available on sales of the 2½ per cent 20-25-year bonds offered to insurance companies, individuals and other large investors, except banks.

Unlike regular Treasury bond sales, the offer will remain open for an indefinite period, probably two weeks, and subscribers will get all the bonds they ask for.

Based on the results of the first day, some officials estimated that this offering may run as high as the 880 million dollars prodced by a similar offering in May.

Large New York insurance companies were believed to have accounted for most of the first day's sales.

As a result of these sales the total Treasury debt rose to a new high of $82,084,083,612.

Construction Reaches New High for Quarter

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that construction in the United States hit a new high of $3,297,000,000 in the second quarter of 1942, and calculated that the whole year would set an annual record of $11,796,000,000.

Last year the second quarter figures was $2,578,000,000 and the year's total was $11,145,000,000.

These estimates included both private and governmental construction of war plants, business buildings, farm construction and residential housing.

Jet vs Spray, the argument which has been giving off sparks in the ranks of the OCD on the right way to put out incendiary bombs, has been extinguished by short wave. Ed Murrow, speaking from London over WJSV last Sunday, gave the nod to the jet—and Ed ought to know.

In his quest for stories, Murrow has had frequent opportunity to study the methods of fire wardens on London housetops during air raids. Ed has put out incendiaries himself—with a jet.

Here are Murrow's recommendations, transcribed from his broadcast:

"I understand there's been some argument at home about the best way to extinguish incendiaries, whether it's best to use a jet or a spray. Over here, the jet has won the argument. It's quicker. You can put out the ordinary incendiary in a couple of minutes with the jet, although it's a good idea to hold a sand bag or a lid of the garbage can in front of your face while you're doing it. The place to deal with incendiaries is up on the roof. Up there a long-handled shovel is useful for chucking them out into the street, where they'll burn themselves out if nobody's around to disturb or squirt water on them or to cover them with sand. The high explosives are frightening, but it's the fire bombs that do the most damage, or at least, that is the way it used to be. All schools may be changed when the Germans come back again, because they'll probably have something new and different, particularly in the way of incendiaries."

Contract Bridge

"May I ask for your opinion on bidding? We are playing the Culbertson system," begins M. J. McC. in submitting a question on overcalling in the opponent's suit. "The adversary on the right bids one diamond; I bid two diamonds. Question: Is my partner obligated to keep the auction alive until game is reached?"

Yes, indeed. This is an easy one to answer. An immediate overcall in the opponent's suit, according to the Culbertson interpretation and that of most champions, indicates a hand almostas strong as on opening two bid. It is a forcing-to-game bid, and usually shows first-round control of the suit bid—that is, ace or void—but the hand may hold a singleton or king and one in the overcalled suit. For example, West opens the bidding with one club, you, North, bid two clubs with this hand:

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — BY MILTON CANIFF

WHAT KIND OF SHANGONIGAN IS THIS? YOU GUYS GETTING MY LI'L ANCHIL OF MERCY ALL HEPPERED UP BY CARRYING THAT RADIO SET ON A STRETCHER...
WHY, FLIPPO... WE NEVER DREAMED IT WOULD DISTURB YOU TWO!
THOSE BOMBER SPORTS WOULD DO ANYTHING FOR A GAG... TAFFY, COME BACK ON THE PORCH AND GET PROPERLY KISSED BY YOUR EVER LOVIN' FLIP!
EXCUSE ME, CAPTAIN CORKIN!... THIS TELEPHONE MESSAGE CAME TO THE RADIO TENT FOR YOU!
THIS DARN THING'S IN CODE!... I'LL HAVE TO DIG UP THE SIGNAL OFFICER TO HAVE IT BROKEN DOWN INTO ENGLISH! EXCUSE ME, TAFFY!
OKAY!
½ HOUR LATER
DON'T LOSE HOP, CORKIN, BUT DIDN'T TAFFY TUCKER SLOPE WITH THAT HEADLESS CASE IN HAND 4 HOURS TOO WEEK WAITING FOR THEM TO BE DECODED?

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

I'VE ENJOYED THE RIDE, RITA! FRANKLY, PAINTING BORES ME ...SOMETIMES!
I SHOULD THINK IT WOULD! ...WAVING A PAINT BRUSH WHEN MOST MEN YOUR AGE ARE SWINGING BAYONETS!
OUCH! YOUR ROUND!
BUT, AS LONG AS DATES ARE RATIONED THESE DAYS, COULDN'T YOU OVERLOOK MY UNGLAMOROUS CIVILIAN GARB AND LET ME SQUIRE YOU TO THE DANCE PAVILION TONIGHT?
I'LL THINK IT OVER!
GOOD! AND I'LL SEND YOU A CORSAGE... IF YOU PROMISE NOT TO WEAR IT PINNED TO A LAPEL!

MICKEY FINN — River Run Next — BY LANK LEONARD

AM I LATE, CURT?
NO, PAUL—DR. SEITLITZ IS NOT HERE YET!
I RECEIVED A SHIPMENT OF BIRD SEED BY PARCEL POST TODAY!
AH—THE NEW ORDERS, EH? WHERE ARE WE TO GO WHEN WE FINISH HERE?
DETROIT! SO YOU KNOW WHAT OUR OBJECTIVE WILL BE!
CERTAINLY!
I'LL BET IT'S THE NEW BIG PLANE PLANT, CHIEF!
DON'T TALK! WE CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS A WORD!

MR. AND MRS. — Just Between Friends — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

WHAT'S THE MATTER NOW?
OH—NOTHING. ONLY I BOUGHT A BIRTHDAY PRESENT—A SLIP—FOR EDITHA AND—
YES, YES. SO WHAT?
AND SHE DIDN'T LIKE THE SHADE, SO SHE WANTED ME TO CHANGE IT
WELL, WHY NOT? THAT ISN'T SO HARD
NO, BUT SHE KEPT HINTING THE ONE SHE WANTED WOULD COST A DOLLAR MORE—WELL, I KNOW—GEE!—BUT WHAT'S A DOLLAR?
IS THAT SO? WHEN SHE BOUGHT A BIRTHDAY PRESENT FOR ME, I HAD TO PAY THE DIFFERENCE MYSELF!

DIXIE DUGAN — Occasionally — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

LOTS AND LOTS TO BE DONE IS RIGHT! AS THE DAYS ROLL BY—
DO YOU EVER HAVE TIME TO RIDE?
OH—OCCASIONALLY!
DO YOU SWIM?
OH—OCCASIONALLY!
WHAT ABOUT BOYS—UH—I MEAN SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AND STUFF?
NO—(SIGH)—NOT EVEN OCCASIONALLY
MICKEY—I'M BEGINNING TO FEEL LIKE A STREAMLINED FLUNKIE IN THIS BIG PLACE.
THAT'S WHAT I'M GETTIN' AT! WHAT'S THERE TO DO THAT'S UH—INTERESTIN'?

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — The Grapevine — BY FRANK V. MARTINEK

ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE, OUR TORPEDO-BOAT PARTNERS OFFSHORE WILL MAKE THEIR DASH INTO THE HARBOR AT DUSK
SUN JUST NOW SETTING, COMMANDER DON
WE'VE LOCATED OUR OBJECTIVE...THOSE CAMOUFLAGED OIL TANKS DOWN THE HILL
FROM THIS EMPTY SHACK WE CAN FIRE THEM WITH INCENDIARY BULLETS AT THE PROPER MOMENT

HERE'S YOUR PRISONER, OFFICER!—JACK HALE, CHARGED WITH STEALING $500 IN STAMPS!!
COME ON, BUDDY!
LOOK! I'LL GO WITHOUT A STRUGGLE—BUT CAN'T YA LET ME HAVE A MINUTE WITH—MY FRIENDS?
I GUESS SO—BUT I'LL BE WATCHIN'!
ALL I WANTA SAY TO YOU AN' MINNIE-HA-CHA, TEX, IS THAT I DIDN'T DO IT! BUT I'LL TAKE THE RAP! I ALWAYS DO!!
MEECH FRAMED ME! BUT—RATS! NOBODY'D EVER BELIEVE A BUM LIKE ME!
WE DO, JACK! AN' WE'LL SHOW UP THAT SNAKE, MEECH, AS SURE AS THERE'S A STEER IN TEXAS!
TO THINK OUR LITTLE IVY WOULD SKITTLE OFF WITH FORTY-TWO THOUSAN' DOLLARS!
NEVER MIND THINKING! —LET'S FIND HER!
MY NEW DRESS! AN' THAT QUART O' PERFUME! I'LL HAVE MEN SWOON IN MY PATH!
...I'LL HEAD FOR TH' BRIGHT LIGHTS...AN' MAYBE I'LL STUDY SINGIN' OR PAINTIN' OR SOMETHIN'!
